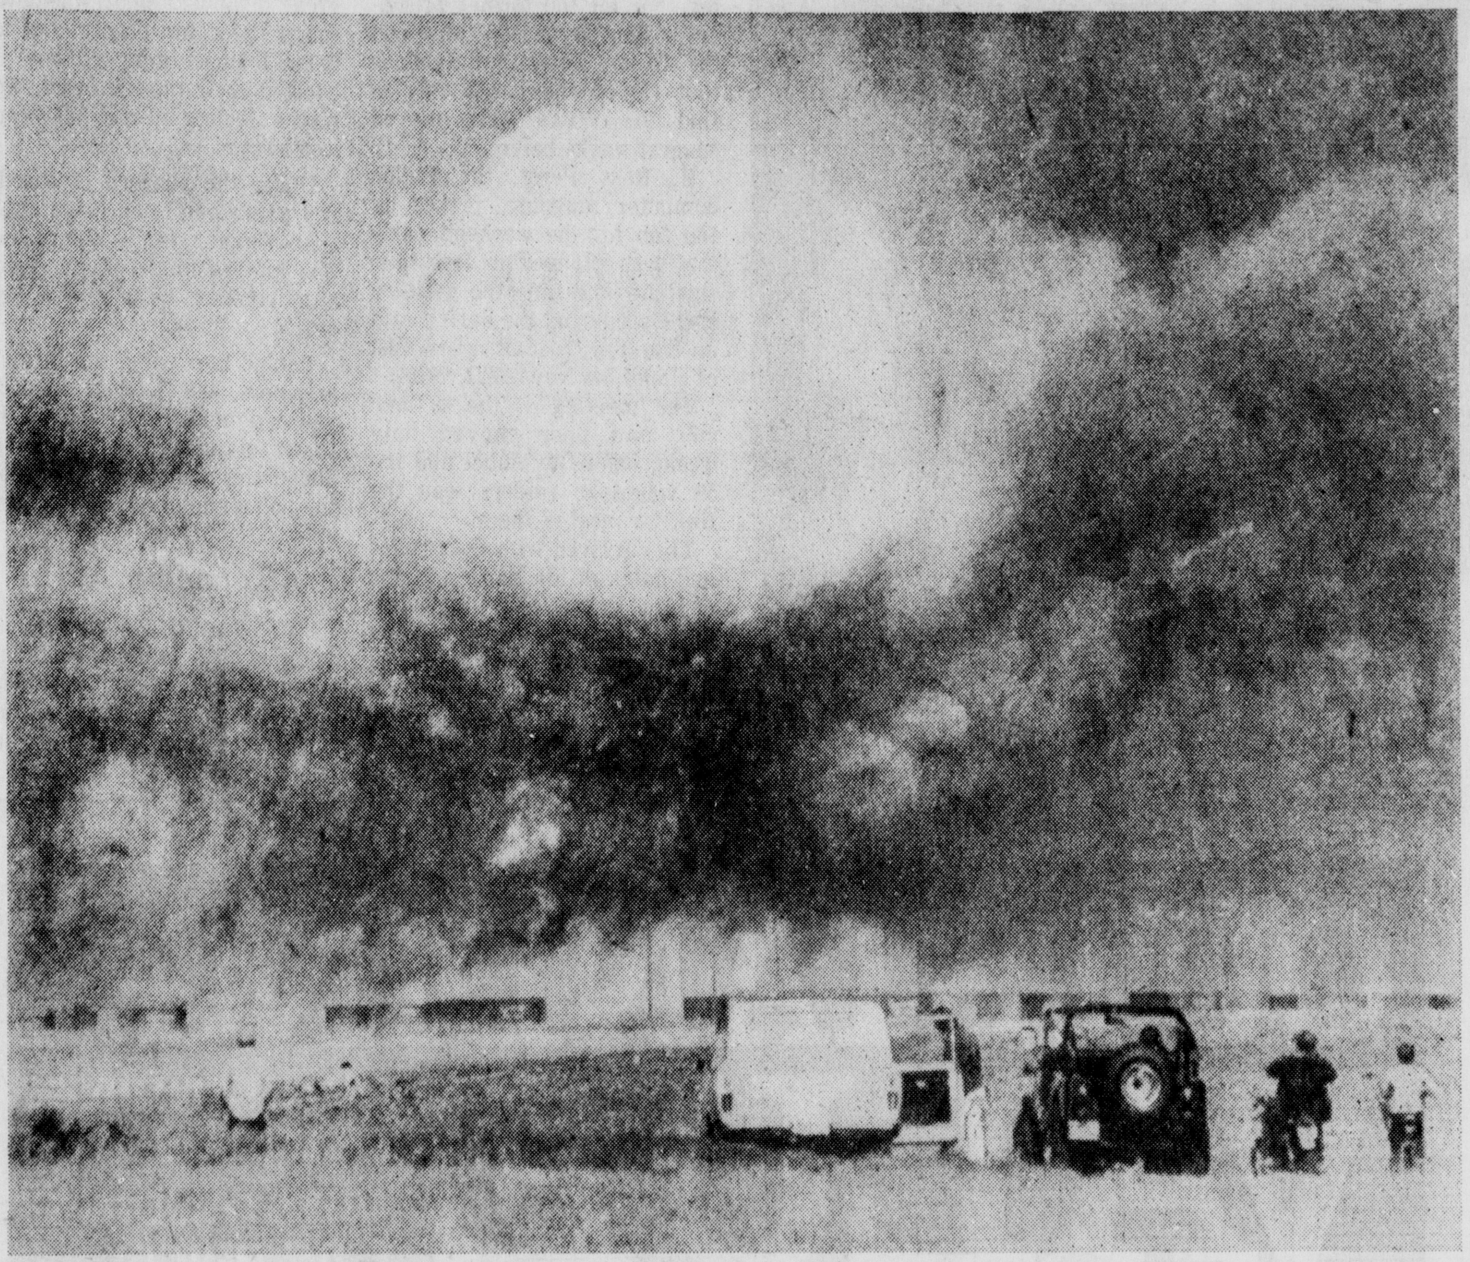
Roseville Rocked As Train Explodes



A FIREBALL reminiscent of an atomic bomb explosion erupted in the sky over Roseville, 15 miles from Sacramento, as a trainload of ammunition headed for the U.S. Naval Weapons Station at Concord blew up in the Roseville railroad yard. (UPI Telephoto)

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A series of explosions wracked a military ammunition train Saturday and the California Highway Patrol said "many people are hurt."

A witness said at least 20 railway cars were in flames, some shooting debris up to 60 feet in the air.

Hospitals were placed on a disaster footing and homes up to two miles away were evacuated as witnesses reported shrapnel flying up to a quarter mile from the scene.

There was no immediate indication of the cause of the explosion or the number of injuries. There was no immediate word of any deaths.

Firemen were held back from the resulting blaze as explosions continued to rock the Southern Pacific yard in Roseville, a Sacramento Valley rail center, more than an hour after the first blast.

Police declared a state of emergency and established a disaster center. Radio stations carried authorities' pleas that citizens steer clear of the area and avoid telephoning except in case of emergency.

The Sacramento County coroner was called to the scene but there were no immediate reports of deaths.

Police sealed off a five-mile radius area round the explosion scene, a Southern Pacific switching road. Railroad spokesmen said the depot and nearby homes had been evacuated.

"It sounded like a series of repeated blasts, like a war," said one young woman resident who fled her home three miles from the SP yard. "There were huge white plumes of gray smoke, like mushrooms, one after another. Each blast shook the earth."

Authorities said no one was allowed near the scene because of the fear that some of the boxcars contained liquified gas.

Southern Pacific said the train was moving from Hawthorne, Nev., to the naval weapons station at Concord, Calif., a shipping point for ammunition headed to the Far East. It included 21 cars of ammunition.

The explosions occurred in rail yards which are the main intersection of the railroad's lines "both north and south, and west and east to Chicago," a railroad spokesman said. "We think the boxcars contain bombs."

One resident two miles from the switching yard, Myra Magnuson, fled her home with her five children because of the repeated blasts.

"I was opening the refrigerator this morning when the first blast went off," she said. "At first I thought the refrigerator exploded and then things started falling out of it."

The explosions were felt 15 miles to the southwest in Sacramento.

Newsman Joe Gandi of radio station KGMS said from a hilltop 1½ miles away he saw cars in the railway yard "exploding one by one with the shock of the blasts breaking windows all the way back here."

Gandi said he saw officers going door to door evacuating homes up to two miles away.

Witnesses said a store, tavern and Grange hall in the small community of Antelope were blown down by the force of the blasts and burst into flames. Witnesses said the nearest homes, in a subdivision 300 yards from the rail yard, were pelted with debris and shaken by the explosions.

People at the scene said blocks of homes appeared to have every window broken. An odor "like gunpowder" permeated the area, witnesses said. The blasts started shortly after 8 a.m. and continued for more than two hours.

Residents further from the rail yard climbed to their roofs to watch the explosions, some hauled folding chairs, packs of beer and other refreshments to their rooftops.

More than 40 ambulances were reported lined up on a nearby highway waiting for the explosions to ease before moving into the area.

Witnesses said the explosions went off in muchroom-shaped clouds "boiling up and folding out like the pictures of A-bombs."

Mayor George Buljan of Roseville said the blasts blew the handles off a police car he was standing near three-quarters of a mile from the center of the blasts.

"We've commented more than once that if any of these munitions cars goes, it's going to blow the whole town up, and now it's happened," Buljan said.

Charges Of Fiscal Foul-Up Are Denied

Corte Madera city officials, angrily responding to critics who have charged them with "fiscal flim-flam," today claimed it was cheaper for the town to borrow $150,000 from its own sanitary district to finance redevelopment than to borrow the money from outside sources.

Mayor Holmes S. (Pete) Norville admitted, however, that if the council had known Senate Bill 90 would freeze tax rates at their 1972-73 levels, it wouldn't have cut the sanitary district's tax rate by 25 cents last year.

At issue is a claim by the Corte Madera Citizens for Recall group that the town's sanitary district faces self-inflicted financial disaster unless residents pay an annual $20 sewer service charge, in addition to their sanitary district tax rates.

Last year, sitting as the redevelopment agency, the council borrowed $150,000 in sanitary district reserves which had been earmarked for rehabilitation of the town's sewer system.

The council then cut the sanitary district tax rate to a level that produces only $54,000 annually, instead of the $120,000 needed to finance sanitary district operations.

Norville and Councilmen Harold B. Wagstaff and Edward W. Colthurst, the targets of a recall petition, maintained today in written statements to the I-J that the fund shuffle and tax cut was fiscally responsible, and not "flim-flam" as critics have charged.

"The rationale for borrowing from the sanitary district for redevelopment is that it's all from our own pocket," said Norville. Borrowing the money elsewhere would have left the town "to the profit of commercial lenders," added Wagstaff.

Norville said the sanitary district is currently "living off its reserves" and said he favored the proposed $20 sewer charge because he expects merger of the Marin County sanitary districts within a few years.

"If I'd known about SB 90 I wouldn't have cut the sanitary district taxes," he added. "We were forced to raise our town taxes to provide the services some of these very same people were insisting on having — six new firemen."

(Last August the town council raised the town property tax rate from $1.03 per $100 assessed valuation to $1.37, the largest single increase in Corte Madera's history. Then, sitting as the sanitary board, it reduced the sanitary district's rate from 60 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 35 cents.)

Norville said today that Robert L. Dunn, spokesman for the Corte Madera Citizens for Recall, has resorted to "defenseless namecalling" in criticizing town leaders.

The recall group has charged town officials with virtually bankrupting the town's sewer service to bankroll a redevelopment project and planning a $20 sewer charge to office the $150,000 in sewer funds loaned for the project.

"Dunn wants to run for council — if he gets the chance," Norville said.

The mayor, backed by Colthurst, said the council had cut the sanitary district tax rate because of an "accumulation of excessive reserves would be unfair to the taxpayers."

Colthurst, who claimed the recall group "has been rejected by the citizens of Corte Madera" and described them as a "power grabbing elite" and mud slingers, agreed that "huge surpluses" are not necessary for financial stability.

According to figures provided by Frank Bigley, town treasurer, a "closing balance" of $312,192 existed in sanitary district coffers before the council cut the district tax rate. That balance now totals $248,659, according to Norville.

Bigley said the $150,000 loan to the redevelopment agency "in no way effects the operating funds of the sanitary district, but is merely another

Nixon Believed Behind Watergate

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Columnist Jack Anderson believes President Nixon himself gave the orders which led to the Watergate affair.

Anderson, in an interview with radio station KFWB, said the orders probably were of a general nature and that Nixon may not have known of the illegal methods used in carrying them out.

The columnist said the President did not use the words sabotage or espionage but did speak of "Dick Tuck" activities in an euphemism for sabotage.

Tuck was a political trickster who plagued Nixon's 1962 campaign for governor in California. Tuck once posed as a train engineer and signaled a train to move out of the station while Nixon was still giving a speech from the station platform.

Also in Los Angeles, the Watergate case was linked to the Pentagon Papers case Friday and a federal judge ordered an inquiry to determine if the link could have tainted the prosecution's evidence against Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne, in a tense courtroom session outside the jury's presence, read a memorandum delivered to him in chambers Thursday by the prosecution.

The memo, dated April 16, 1973, was from Earl J. Silbert, chief prosecutor in the Watergate case, to Assistant Attorney General Henry E. Petersen, who now is in charge of the Watergate investigation. It was headed: "Subject: Daniel Ellsberg prosecution."

"This is to inform you that on Sunday, April 15, 1973, I received information that at a date unspecified, Gordon Liddy and Howard Hunt burglarized the offices of a psychiatrist of Daniel Ellsberg to obtain the psychiatrist's files relating to Ellsberg," the memo read.

Byrne said the burglary may have tainted evidence in the Pentagon Papers case and ordered the government to "supply me with all facts known to the government which can be made known to the government by investigation of the occurrence of the alleged burglary."

At the end of the day, Byrne admonished the jurors to stay away from publicity about the case, especially during the In Washington, the General Accounting Office (GAO) says officials of President Nixon's reelection committee used secret campaign funds to drum up support for the mining of Haiphong harbor last May.

GAO, an investigative arm of Congress, said Friday that the funds—about $7,500—were not reported by the Finance Committee to Re-Elect the President as required by law.

It recommended that Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst consider legal action against Hugh W. Sloan Jr., former treasurer of the finance committee, "for knowingly and wilfully submitting...a false report of receipts and expenditures."

It was GAO's fourth report charging apparent violations by the committee, and GAO noted that the Justice Department has taken no action on its previous referrals.

Meantime L. Patrick Gray III resigned Friday as acting head of the FBI. He will face grand jury questioning on reports he destroyed politically explosive files from the White House safe of a key Watergate figure.

Two and a half hours after Gray's resignation, President Nixon named William D. Ruckelshaus, a former Justice Department division chief and now head of the Environmental Protection Agency, to take over temporary command of the FBI.

It was the second Nixon administration resignation in the deepening Watergate scandal, amid signs more were to come. Jeb Stuart Magruder, former deputy Nixon campaign director, resigned Friday as an assistant secretary in the Commerce Department.

Ruckelshaus, 40, a native of Indiana, who ran unsuccessfully for the Senate against Sen. Birch Bayh in 1968, said in a news conference he had "made it clear" to Nixon he was only taking on the FBI job on a temporary, emergency basis.

"I will serve until the permanent director is found and confirmed by the Senate," he said. "I don't anticipate that I will be in this position much longer than two months."

Ruckelshaus said that "no matter who was involved in the (Watergate) matter, there would be no sparing of anybody." He said it was "too early" for him to say if as a matter of policy he would or would not turn FBI files over to the White House. Gray had been criticized in the Senate for doing this.

Daylight Savings Time Starts In The Morning

It's almost Daylight Savings Time again, when millions of people throughout the country try to decide whether to turn their clocks backward or forward.

The time change begins officially at 2 a.m. tomorrow.

And for those who don't remember — or don't understand — the old maxim "spring forward, fall backward," that means that timepieces must be reset an hour forward.

So, if your clock says 11 p.m., turn it forward to midnight, preferably before you go to bed tonight.

Unless, of course, you happen to live in Hawaii, Arizona or the eastern half of Indiana.

The legislatures of Hawaii and Arizona voted against observing the Uniform Time Act in 1966.

Indiana is in two time zones and under the Act has permission to exempt one part of the state from going on Daylight Saving. So the eastern half of the state will be on Eastern Standard Time, while the western portion will be on Central Daylight Savings Time.

Daylight Saving Time will be in effect until Sunday, Oct. 28.

Charges Of Fiscal Foul-Up Are Denied

Corte Madera city officials, angrily responding to critics who have charged them with "fiscal flim-flam," today claimed it was cheaper for the town to borrow $150,000 from its own sanitary district to finance redevelopment than to borrow the money from outside sources.

Mayor Holmes S. (Pete) Norville admitted, however, that if the council had known Senate Bill 90 would freeze tax rates at their 1972-73 levels, it wouldn't have cut the sanitary district's tax rate by 25 cents last year.

At issue is a claim by the Corte Madera Citizens for Recall group that the town's sanitary district faces self-inflicted financial disaster unless residents pay an annual $20 sewer service charge, in addition to their sanitary district tax rates.

Last year, sitting as the redevelopment agency, the council borrowed $150,000 in sanitary district reserves which had been earmarked for rehabilitation of the town's sewer system.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Mail Strike

ROME (UPI) — Tons of mail, ranging from urgent legal notices to delayed Easter cards and pensioners' checks, piled up in Italian post offices today on the 16th day of a Rome mail strike that affected much of the country.

Experts said losses to the national economy were hard to estimate, but were likely to be running into the tens of millions of dollars.

Businessmen hired private messengers and made costly international telephone calls in an effort to keep their work going.

A majority of the nation's 180,000 post, telephone and telegraph workers went back to work last week after a four-day nationwide strike. But most Rome workers, who started the strike three days earlier, were still out today and the resulting chaos has spread from the capital to other cities.

Riot Stifled

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Thousands of pro-government demonstrators tried to storm opposition party headquarters Friday but riot police firing tear gas and water cannons beat them back. One man was shot to death and six others were wounded.

President Salvador Allende ordered an "exhaustive" inquiry into the death of the man during the assault on Christian Democrat party headquarters.

Police said the unidentified victim, about 25, was fatally wounded by gunfire in the midst of the melee. He died at the city's central first aid station. Five men and a teenage girl were injured.

Death Sentence

ROME (UPI) — An Arab suspected of killing an Italian employe of El Al Israel Airlines on a Rome street Friday told police today that the victim had been sentenced to death by the Black September guerrilla organization for the slaying of an Al Fatah guerrilla leader in Rome six months ago, investigators said.

"I had to kill that man because he had a role of major importance in the assassination of Adel Wael Zuaiter," investigators quoted the alleged killer—who reportedly claimed membership in Black September—as saying.

Last October, someone shot and killed Zuaiter, a Palestinian employe of the Libyan Embassy in Rome, who was described as an Al Fatah leader.

India Siege

NEW YORK (UPI) — A nephew of the king of Sikkim said Friday Indian invaders were responsible for the "uprising" and siege of the royal palace early this month.

Jigme Yapshi Phunkhang, nephew of King Palden Thondup Namgyal, said the rebels actually were invaders from the Indian cities of Darjeeling and Kalimpong. They crossed the border and tried to trick Sikkim peasants into following them to the palace in the capital of Gangtok.

Liner Guarded

HAIFA, Israel (UPI) — The luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 is under intense security precautions, but an Israeli seeking to leave the country illegally managed to slip aboard Friday with a group of British seamen, police said.

Ship officers seized Meir Miara, 24, of Ashdod, immediately after he boarded the liner and he was arrested, Buchner said. Miara admitted trying to hide aboard the liner, Buchner added.

Biggest Bomb

BELFAST (UPI) — An 800-pound bomb, the largest ever used against the British army in Ulster, was exploded by remoted control and wrecked an armored car in County Fermanagh today, but caused no injuries, the army said.

Soldiers found wires running from the bomb, near the village of Belleek, 90 miles west of Belfast, across the border of the Irish Republic. Their personnel carrier, unable to stop, tumbled into a crater 40 feet across and 10 feet deep carved out by the giant bomb.

The two soldiers in the personnel carrier were not injured but suffered from shock and "a slight deafness," the spokesman said.

Kidnaped Boy Safely Returned To Parents

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A 10-year-old boy was released by his kidnapers Saturday, police sources reported, six days after he was abducted and held for a reported $50,000 ransom.

There was no immediate word on the boy's condition.

Originally the kidnapers of young Daniel Lopez demanded $5,000 ransom, which the boy's working class parents paid by scraping together funds from friends and neighbors. Later the kidnapers increased the ransom demand to $50,000. The police sources did not diclose whether the parents had paid the increased ransom.

The kidnapers had threatened to cut the boy in two pieces and send the parts to his mother and grandmother.

The anguish of young Daniel's parents began last Sunday when he was abducted. His parents paid $5,000 ransom Friday night and waited for word from the kidnapers on where to pick up their son.

But when there was no word from the abductors, Daniel's mother, Zulema, made an emotional public appeal on television for the safe return of her son. Minutes after the broadcast, she said, the kidnapers called to demand a 10-fold increase in the ransom price and told her:

"If you don't pay the $50,000 it is most probable you won't see your son anymore....We are going to cut him in two parts and send you one part and the other we are going to leave in his grandmother's house."

The boy's father told reporters the family amassed the $5,000 from friends, neighbors and relatives and gave it all to the kidnapers, who he said had originally demanded $1 million in ransom.

Lopez said he was a "common laborer" and not a "big tobacco industrialist" as the kidnapers apparently believed. The reference apparently was to British tobacco executive Francis Brimicombe, kidnaped earlier this month and freed after payment of an estimated $1.7 million.

Three other kidnapings were reported Friday and young Daniel became the 36th person abducted this year in Argentina. It was not known whether the latest abductions were politically motivated, but leftist urban guerrillas have claimed responsibility in the still unsolved kidnapings of a retired admiral and a commander of the border police.

PARTY FOR PRISONERS — The Son Tay Raiders and the prisoners of war they tried to rescue were the stars in a downtown motorcade in San Francisco yesterday. The parade was led by a car (front right) carrying Col. Robinson Risner (right), senior POW in Vietnam, and Maj. Gen. L. Manor. Another Mideast War Seen Likely

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said today that another Mideast war "might well come about" because Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is "in distress."

In an interview, Mrs. Meir said of Sadat: "He is in distress and history can testify that Arab leaders have been in distress on more than one occasion in the past. The simplest thing is go to war.

"So...it might well come about. And after having made our evaluations we must tell ourselves—and I know that we are in fact doing this—that it would be just as well for us to be prepared."

Mrs. Meir's interview on the armed forces radio station was in anticipation of her 75th birthday May 3 and Israel's 25th independence anniversay May 7.

A Beirut newspaper said today that Syrian President Hafez Assad fears an Israeli attack may be imminent and has placed the Syrian army on a state of alert.

The reports also said Assad planned to fly to Cairo this weekend for urgent discussions on the situation with Sadat.

The newspaper L'Orient-Le Jour cited diplomatic sources as saying the Syrian government has received "information indicating that Israeli aggression is imminent."

Three Arabs were being held after their arrest Friday at Beirut airport following the reported discovery of 22 pounds of dynamite in the suitcases of two of them.

Those two, both Lebanese, Michel George Makhlouf and Sayf Ali Hamdan, "said they were asked to transport the dynamite to Nice, where a person whose identity they did not know would come to their hotel, introduce himself and take the dynamite," the Beirut newspaper An Nahar said.

The Air France plane which the men were preparing to board was due to land at Nice, on the French Riviera, before flying on to Paris.

Arrested along with the two Lebanese was Aouni Abou Khaled, a Palestinian. He told investigators he was merely seeing off his friends at the airport and did not know what they had in their suitcases, legal sources said.

All three were taken before military prosecutor Assaad Germanos, who ordered them held in jail pending further investigation.

Bonus To Enlist Now At $2,500

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon will boost the cash bonus awarded men who enlist for combat jobs from $1,500 to $2,500, virtually conceding that too few men are signing up for fighting units in the all-volunteer Army.

Defense Department officials also said Thursday they are offering $2,500 cash bonuses for the first time to men who volunteer for 12 other Army skills that are falling into short supply.

Fleet Growing

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's merchant marine fleet has grown from four ships in 1948 when the nation was founded to 120 vessels. Another 52 ships are on order.

POWs, Raiders Have Big Party

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Veterans of a Vietnam prison camp and their intended liberators tripped down memory lane Friday to the tune of $250,000 put up by a Texas millionaire for their weekend party.

An old-fashioned tickertape parade with a cast of performers was the highlight of the get-together for the former prisoners of Son Tay prison camp and the Green Beret commandoes that raided the camp only to find the POWs were moved several weeks before.

H. Ross Perot, the Dallas computer magnate, picked up the tab for the weekend party that was planned in less than one-tenth the time the military spent preparing the daring raid on Son Tay, just 23 miles west of Hanoi, on Nov. 20-21, 1970.

The meeting of the 66 men who had been moved only weeks before to Hanoi and the 59 volunteer raiders was the first for most of them.

Army Col. Arthur "Bull" Simons, 54, of Defuniak Springs, Fla., who led the raiders, tracked down Son Tay's POW commander, Navy Cmdr. Render Crayton, only a couple of hours before they rode together in the lead car of the tickertape parade along six blocks of the downtown financial district.

"It was just great to finally meet up with the men we had gone in to try to bring out," Simons said. "There had been great disappointment when we found the camp empty...but to listen to these men tell how it boosted their morale...well, we had a feeling it had all been worthwhile."

Behind him came the former prisoners and raiders in 100-year-old motorized cable cars, their clanging bells heard above the wailing of sirens of the police motorcycle outriders.

Mail Strike

ROME (UPI) — Tons of mail, ranging from urgent legal notices to delayed Easter cards and pensioners' checks, piled up in Italian post offices today on the 16th day of a Rome mail strike that affected much of the country.

Experts said losses to the national economy were hard to estimate, but were likely to be running into the tens of millions of dollars.

Businessmen hired private messengers and made costly international telephone calls in an effort to keep their work going.

A majority of the nation's 180,000 post, telephone and telegraph workers went back to work last week after a four-day nationwide strike. But most Rome workers, who started the strike three days earlier, were still out today and the resulting chaos has spread from the capital to other cities.

Riot Stifled

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Thousands of pro-government demonstrators tried to storm opposition party headquarters Friday but riot police firing tear gas and water cannons beat them back. One man was shot to death and six others were wounded.

President Salvador Allende ordered an "exhaustive" inquiry into the death of the man during the assault on Christian Democrat party headquarters.

Police said the unidentified victim, about 25, was fatally wounded by gunfire in the midst of the melee. He died at the city's central first aid station. Five men and a teenage girl were injured.

Death Sentence

ROME (UPI) — An Arab suspected of killing an Italian employe of El Al Israel Airlines on a Rome street Friday told police today that the victim had been sentenced to death by the Black September guerrilla organization for the slaying of an Al Fatah guerrilla leader in Rome six months ago, investigators said.

"I had to kill that man because he had a role of major importance in the assassination of Adel Wael Zuaiter," investigators quoted the alleged killer—who reportedly claimed membership in Black September—as saying.

Last October, someone shot and killed Zuaiter, a Palestinian an employe of the Libyan Embassy in Rome, who was described as an Al Fatah leader.

Burke Refuses Answers On Assets

A former Marin man, facing millions of dollars in law suits over allegedly fraudulent oil deals, refused yesterday to explain where his assets are on the grounds that such disclosures could incriminate him.

Judge Charles Read Best of Marin Superior Court, however, gave attorneys for Jack P. Burke and three men who obtained a judgment against him last year 30 days to draw up arguments on whether the Fifth Amendment can be invoked in a civil case.

Burke, who once had Sausalito and Kentfield homes, would say only that he is living in a $150-a-month apartment in San Francisco and still has an office in that city when attorneys for three former investors in his ventures tried to question him.

The three, John F. Shea of Orange County, Edmund F. Shea, and the J. F. Shea Co. of Nevada, invested $150,000 in Geo. Tek, an enterprise controlled by Burke, Aug. 19, 1971, but sued him for breach of contract four months later when he would not redeem the stock.

They obtained an unopposed judgment of $144,328 against him last year and have been trying to collect since. Yesterday's court session before Best was part of that effort.

The Shea judgment against him is only one of Burke's legal problems.

Three peninsula men sued him in February charging he misused the profits of the Mountain View Oil Co., a subsidiary of Geo Tek in which the three had invested.

Also pending is a $15 million suit in U.S. District Court in San Francisco against Burke, Los Angeles Times publisher Otis Chandler and Dr. Simon Ramo, a director of the Times-Mirror Co.

The suit by a Long Beach surgeon charges fraud and other violations of federal securities statues in connection with his $100,000 investment in two limited partnerships formed by Burke.

The suit was filed last August during an investigation by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in Burke's attempt to merge partnerships he had formed.

Howells To Attend Press Seminar

Allan G. Howells, circulation manager for the Independent-Journal, will be among 33 newspaper executives attending a two-week American Press Institute seminar for circulation managers beginning Monday in New York.

The program will include discussion of department problems, personnel management, promotion policies and practices and efficient transportation systems.

Alto Firemen Ally With Union

The Alto-Richardson Bay Fire District's 10 paid firemen have joined a union in a bid to improve their negotiating position with the district board.

James R. Stephenson, chairman of the Alto Firemen's Association, said the members voted unanimously Thursday to affiliate with the International Association of Fire Fighters.

The Alto group is the third in Marin to affiliate with the firemen's union.

Stephenson said the union will ask for a beefed-up training program, a reduction in work hours and relaxation of the rules that firemen must live within a 1.5-mile radius of the firehouse.

Yarbrough Arrested On Nonsupport Count

I-J Special Report

CULVER CITY — Singer Glenn Yarbrough, who has eluded law officers for the past month, was arrested yesterday on a misdemeanor warrant issued in Marin County for alleged nonsupport of his two children.

The 43-year-old folk singer, whose ex-wife, Margaret Jones, and his two children, Glenn Sean, 14, and Stephany, 12, live in Inverness, was taken into custody at the home of his present mother-in-law in this Los Angeles County community.

He was freed on $12,000 bail, the amount he is said to owe in child payments.

Yarbrough, formerly of Sausalito, has been dogged since early April by law officers, who at one point jumped onto a Chico stage where the singer was performing only to have him dash out the back door, evading the arrest bid.

Yarbrough has been appearing with the recently revived Limelighters.

He is scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court May 14.

Burke Refuses Answers On Assets

A former Marin man, facing millions of dollars in law suits over allegedly fraudulent oil deals, refused yesterday to explain where his assets are on the grounds that such disclosures could incriminate him.

Judge Charles Read Best of Marin Superior Court, however, gave attorneys for Jack P. Burke and three men who obtained a judgment against him last year 30 days to draw up arguments on whether the Fifth Amendment can be invoked in a civil case.

Burke, who once had Sausalito and Kentfield homes, would say only that he is living in a $150-a-month apartment in San Francisco and still has an office in that city when attorneys for three former investors in his ventures tried to question him.

The three, John F. Shea of Orange County, Edmund F. Shea, and the J. F. Shea Co. of Nevada, invested $150,000 in Geo. Tek, an enterprise controlled by Burke, Aug. 19, 1971, but sued him for breach of contract four months later when he would not redeem the stock.

Today is Saturday, April 28, the 118th day of 1973 with 249 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

James Monroe, fifth president of the United States, was born April 28, 1785.

On this day in history:

In 1788, Maryland was admitted to the Union as the seventh state.

In 1945, Fascist leader Benito Mussolini was executed by Italian patriots.

In 1952, the war with Japan was officially ended with the signing of a treaty by the United States and 47 other nations.

A thought for the day: President George Washington said, "To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

investment source. The loan is callable at the discretion of the sanitary district."

Norville said today, however, that the redevelopment agency could not return the loan "at this time" since some of it has already been spent. He said he didn't have the "foggiest idea" how much the agency had spent.

Norville said the council some years ago borrowed sanitary district money in a similar fashion to finance the Sausalito Assessment District which paved and guttered Sausalito Avenue.

Councilman Robert J. Flahive — who last week was the lone dissenter when the council voted to go ahead with its redevelopment project opposes a sewer service charge.

"In my opinion instead of a sewer charge we should try to put it on the ballot to try to raise the sanitary district tax rate, he said. "Let's put it to the people."

Norville said the council will consider the $20 sewer charge at its May 7 meeting.

Body Of Senator Will Be Exhumed

BOWLING GREEN, Mo. (UPI) — Authorities have received conditional approval to exhume the body of Sen. Edward V. Long to determine if he died from natural causes or from poisoned candy.

Audrain County Attorney Thomas I. Osborne said Friday he has received permission for exhumation and autopsy from Long's widow.

Long's personal secretary and companion, Helen Dunlop, has said that Long received a box of candy in the mail shortly before he died and that he told her he had been poisoned by it.

Long's widow, Mrs. Florence S. Long, has filed an alienation of affections suit against Miss Dunlop for $3,250,000 in damages.

The provisions under which Osborne would be allowed to exhume Long's body, it was learned, were:

—That news media be informed immediately of results of the autopsy.

—That Long's widow be supplied with a signed copy of the autopsy results.

—That the autopsy inquire into the progression of a brain tumor that reportedly was diagnosed in Long a few years ago.

—That Mrs. Long be permitted to have a pathologist of her choice observe the autopsy.

Long had been under treatment for high blood pressure, and at the time of his death Pike County Coroner J.O. Mudd signed the death certificate, which gave cause of death as a stroke or "cerebral vascular accident."

The candy sent to Long was allegedly sent by University City businessman Edmond L. Daffron. Daffron said he had been advised by his attorney not to discuss the case but said he did not send the candy. He said he received a thank you note from Long just before the senator died.

Miss Dunlop took a lie detector test Thursday in Jefferson City given by the state highway patrol, but the results of the test were not announced.

Long had revised his will shortly before his death, leaving only $10 each to his widow and his daughter, Ann Garner Miller, and the bulk of his $2 million estate to his granddaughter, Elizabeth Ann Miller.

Child Thought Lost Found Sound Asleep

She was delighted that her 5-year-old son, Tommy — the object of a sizeable search when he turned up missing for several hours early this morning — had been found.

But she was also a bit mortified about the whole situation, as she laughlingly admitted today.

It all began about 9 p.m. last night when she took her three children, including Tommy, to a musical event at the Marshall Tavern, a folksy place where youngsters are welcome.

The family left about midnight and, after everyone was settled in the Delongschamp convertible, Mrs. Delongschamp realized she hadn't paid her bill and rushed back into the tavern to do so.

She was back in a moment and drove home, without looking in the car's backseat where the children were settled down.

When she arrived at her home at 8 Balboa Ave., she noticed Tommy was gone.

"I was really worried, because he has been known to take off, usually just for a walk," she said.

The distraught mother called the Marin County Sheriff's Office and, within a short time, several deputies and more than a dozen friends and neighbors were searching the area around the tavern, ringing doorbells and waking people up to see if anyone had seen the small boy.

"There were about 15 people holding a vigil in my living room" Mrs. Delongschamp said.

The searchers checked her car several times, but about 3 a.m. something prompted Tommy's mother to take another look.

There was Tommy, fast asleep in the compartment where the convertible's top is stored when not in use, a place behind the seat where no one had thought to look.

The search was called off and Mrs. Delongschamp blushingly thanked the people who had spent hours looking for her son.

Apartments To Be Sold To High Bid

The 56-unit apartment building in Marin City, acquired by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban development by default, will be sold to the highest bidder.

A spokesman for HUD said the agency acquired the Oak Knolls Apartments at 889-999 Drake Avenue last January after the previous owner defaulted on payments to the bank which held the mortgage.

Since HUD had underwirtten the loan, the spokesman said, it paid the bank the outstanding balance and took possession.

The building contains 16 one-bedroom, 24 two-bedroom and 16 three-bedroom units with rents ranging from $102.50 to $142 per month.

Prospective bidders have until May 30 to submit proposals. Information on bids may be obtained from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Housing Management, Office of Property Disposition, Room 9284, Washington, D.C. 20413.

CHARGES

investment source. The loan is callable at the discretion of the sanitary district."

Norville said today, however, that the redevelopment agency could not return the loan "at this time" since some of it has already been spent. He said he didn't have the "foggiest idea" how much the agency had spent.

Norville said the council some years ago borrowed sanitary district money in a similar fashion to finance the Sausalito Assessment District which paved and guttered Sausalito Avenue.

Councilman Robert J. Flahive — who last week was the lone dissenter when the council voted to go ahead with its redevelopment project opposes a sewer service charge.

"In my opinion instead of a sewer charge we should try to put it on the ballot to try to raise the sanitary district tax rate, he said. "Let's put it to the people."

Norville said the council will consider the $20 sewer charge at its May 7 meeting.

Body Of Senator Will Be Exhumed

BOWLING GREEN, Mo. (UPI) — Authorities have received conditional approval to exhume the body of Sen. Edward V. Long to determine if he died from natural causes or from poisoned candy.

Audrain County Attorney Thomas I. Osborne said Friday he has received permission for exhumation and autopsy from Long's widow.

Long's personal secretary and companion, Helen Dunlop, has said that Long received a box of candy in the mail shortly before he died and that he told her he had been poisoned by it.

Long's widow, Mrs. Florence S. Long, has filed an alienation of affections suit against Miss Dunlop for $3,250,000 in damages.

The provisions under which Osborne would be allowed to exhume Long's body, it was learned, were:

—That news media be informed immediately of results of the autopsy.

—That Long's widow be supplied with a signed copy of the autopsy results.

—That the autopsy inquire into the progression of a brain tumor that reportedly was diagnosed in Long a few years ago.

—That Mrs. Long be permitted to have a pathologist of her choice observe the autopsy.

Long had been under treatment for high blood pressure, and at the time of his death Pike County Coroner J.O. Mudd signed the death certificate, which gave cause of death as a stroke or "cerebral vascular accident."

The candy sent to Long was allegedly sent by University City businessman Edmond L. Daffron. Daffron said he had been advised by his attorney not to discuss the case but said he did not send the candy. He said he received a thank you note from Long just before the senator died.

Miss Dunlop took a lie detector test Thursday in Jefferson City given by the state highway patrol, but the results of the test were not announced.

Long had revised his will shortly before his death, leaving only $10 each to his widow and his daughter, Ann Garner Miller, and the bulk of his $2 million estate to his granddaughter, Elizabeth Ann Miller.

Child Thought Lost Found Sound Asleep

She was delighted that her 5-year-old son, Tommy — the object of a sizeable search when he turned up missing for several hours early this morning — had been found.

But she was also a bit mortified about the whole situation, as she laughlingly admitted today.

It all began about 9 p.m. last night when she took her three children, including Tommy, to a musical event at the Marshall Tavern, a folksy place where youngsters are welcome.

The family left about midnight and, after everyone was settled in the Delongschamp convertible, Mrs. Delongschamp realized she hadn't paid her bill and rushed back into the tavern to do so.

She was back in a moment and drove home, without looking in the car's backseat where the children were settled down.

When she arrived at her home at 8 Balboa Ave., she noticed Tommy was gone.

"I was really worried, because he has been known to take off, usually just for a walk," she said.

The distraught mother called the Marin County Sheriff's Office and, within a short time, several deputies and more than a dozen friends and neighbors were searching the area around the tavern, ringing doorbells and waking people up to see if anyone had seen the small boy.

"There were about 15 people holding a vigil in my living room" Mrs. Delongschamp said.

The searchers checked her car several times, but about 3 a.m. something prompted Tommy's mother to take another look.

There was Tommy, fast asleep in the compartment where the convertible's top is stored when not in use, a place behind the seat where no one had thought to look.

The search was called off and Mrs. Delongschamp blushingly thanked the people who had spent hours looking for her son.

Apartments To Be Sold To High Bid

The 56-unit apartment building in Marin City, acquired by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban development by default, will be sold to the highest bidder.

A spokesman for HUD said the agency acquired the Oak Knolls Apartments at 889-999 Drake Avenue last January after the previous owner defaulted on payments to the bank which held the mortgage.

Since HUD had underwirtten the loan, the spokesman said, it paid the bank the outstanding balance and took possession.

The building contains 16 one-bedroom, 24 two-bedroom and 16 three-bedroom units with rents ranging from $102.50 to $142 per month.

Prospective bidders have until May 30 to submit proposals. Information on bids may be obtained from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Housing Management, Office of Property Disposition, Room 9284, Washington, D.C. 20413.

Bridge Security Rules Tightened

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, miffed by a movie maker who misled district officers in order to film the story of a bomb threat against the span, yesterday ordered tough controls on future commercial use of the bridge.

The incident occurred about two months ago when a film crew got permission to shoot from the top of the south tower for a "drama." Unmentioned was the plot — in which a nuclear bomb is placed atop the tower.

District directors discussed the incident in a 10-minute closed-door session "involving a security matter." They emerged with a taciturn report that "the matter was referred to staff for further recommendations."

Newsmen, however, quickly learned it was the film incident that was the subject of the meeting.

The staff indicated it may be tough for any future film crews to use the bridge.

Golden Gate Bridge District Directors Also:

SUICIDE BARRIER — Postponed to May 11 action on a $67,500 appropriation to complete design and wind tunnel testing of a suicide barrier. Director Lowell Edington of Napa County won an 8-7 vote for the two-week delay so he can gather arguments against the barrier, construction of which would cost an estimated $750,000. Director Ben K. Lerer argued unsuccessfully there was an "emergency" need for the barrier.

LARKSPUR — Approved paving part of the planned Larkspur frry terminal as a temporary parking lot for bus commuters. Joi Losee of Larkspur, an opponent of the terminal, objected to the $10,000 expenditure. The lot will have no negative environmental impact, the board agreed, thus its impact will not need study.

SAN RAFAEL — Purchased 15 acres to expand the San Rafael bus base along Highway 17, provided the federal government pays two-thirds of the $763,000 cost for the land and improvement district fees.

DOYLE DRIVE — Rejected a $350,000 claim against the district, San Francisco and the state for injuries sustained by Jack R. Hayes in a traffic accident on Doyle Drive on Jan. 18. The claim alleged the district was negligent for failing to correct known traffic hazards.

MUSEUM — Appropriated $5,000 to design a museum to house memorabilia from construction of the bridge.

BUS LANE — Received a report that the Division of Highways will extend the reverse commuter bus lane from the south to the north end of the Richardson Bay Bridge by mid-May.

FUEL — Asked for legislation to give the district priority in getting fuel if a shortage develops.

FERRY — Received staff report that construction started on April 9 on the second of three new ferries being built for the district in San Diego.

KAISER — Added $20,000 to the $318,000 contract with Kaiser Engineers for a long-range transit plan. The extra funds will cover the cost of adding to the study an underwater tube between Sausalito and San Francisco and of extending the work from June to next April.

CHARTER — Accepted the low bid of Mark IV Charter Lines to provide five buses for commuter charter service subsidized by the district. The rate per day per bus ranges from $78 to $93, depending on its size and route.

TRUCK — Bought a one-ton truck chassis from Earl Sherman and Co. of Oakland for $3,560.

GROOVING — Received report the state will grind grooves in the pavement of Doyle Drive as a safety measure. Work will begin on May 7. In a related report, the Division of Highways rejected suggestions by some San Francisco directors that the 45-mile-an-hour speed limit be cut.

Three Are Receiving Antirabies Treatment

Nancy Ruggeri of the county rabies control office declined to identify those involved, saying it would violate doctor-patient confidentiality.

She said the three came in contact with the sick skunk April 12 at the B-Bar-N Ranch and Stable, 8901 Redwood Highway, Novato.

Two other rabid animal cases have been reported this week, she continued, adding her office is concerned with the growing number of such cases near populated areas.

She said one of the animals, a bat, was killed by San Rafael police at Coleman School on Rafael Drive.

She said the rabid bat was found hanging in a tree on the school grounds. No human or animal contact was reported.

Also in San Rafael, a rabid skunk was killed near the home of Charles Van Loewenfeldt, 230 Forbes Avenue, she reported.

A dog which might have come in contact with the skunk is in quarantine for 30 days to determine if it has the disease.

The three latest cases increase to 17 the number of such cases reported in Marin during the last seven months.

Employees Lose On Demotions

The Novato City Employees Association failed yesterday to convince a Marin Superior Court judge to void a city reclassification ordinance, which demotes several employees.

Attorney Richard H. Breiner, representing the employees' group, argued the ordinance adopted Feb. 12 was invalid because city officials failed to confer beforehand with the group.

Judge E. Warren McGuire said the city had not been obligated to hold the "meet and confer" sessions because the group was not officially recognized as the employees' representative until Feb. 14.

State law requires give-and-take sessions on personnel matters with recognized employee groups, but city officials are required only to supply an unofficial group with information.

McGuire, therefore, refused to nullify the city council's action, but he did tell the city it must hold meet and confer sessions on future personnel issues.

The judge also refused to make Novato pay $955 attorney's fees to Breiner, who sought the payment on the ground the city's action had been capricious.

Review Due Of Budget For Transit

The Marin County Transit District board, meeting at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday at Civic Center, will review a proposed $654,000 budget for fiscal 1973-74.

The budget recommends a $122,000 reserve and $522,000 for contractual services — primarily to the Golden Gate Bridge District for intracounty bus service.

The remaining $10,000 is listed for services and supplies. (Contained in the contractural services account is about $24,000 for district staffing.)

The district's 5-cent tax rate is expected to bring in about $337,000 next year. Another $269,000 is to be carried over from this year's budget and $48,000 is expected from sources such as bus fares.

Estimates indicate the district will run at an $80,000 deficit in its contract with the bridge district.

General Manager Ray W. Foreaker Jr. has recommended the amount come either from the reserve fund or from a 10-cent increase in the county's 25-cent bus fare.

Hearing Set In Gun Case

A 26-year-old Marin City man, arrested outside his home with a loaded sawed-off shotgun, has been ordered to appear May 10 in Marin Municipal Court for a preliminary hearing on a felony charge of having an illegal weapon.

Bernard David Thompson was arrested March 23 by a sheriff's deputy investigating a report of gunfire. The deputy said he saw Thompson with the weapon in the yard of the apartment building at 12 Buckelew Street in which he lives.

Thompson has pleaded innocent.

Housing Authority Rapped Over Santa Venetia Homes

"Human error and negligence" on the part of the Marin County Housing Authority was blamed yesterday by the county grand jury for the deteriorated condition of two vacant leased housing homes in Santa Venetia.

In a report to be considered Tuesday by county supervisors, the grand jury said the housing authority should have given more than "lip service" to earlier complaints by neighbors that the homes had become eyesores.

However, it continued, a random sampling of leased housing units throughout Marin found most "compared favorably with neighbors' private dwellings."

The grand jury investigation was requested last month by Supervisor Robert A. Roumiguiere, who criticized the housing authority for leaving the homes vacant for seven months — though still paying rent — while a long waiting list for housing existed.

"Human error and negligence of the housing authority are responsible for 805 Rincon Way and 843 Rosal Way in Santa Venetia being vacant for seven months while monthly rent was paid to the owners," the grand jury said.

"Units on the leased housing program should never be vacant for more than 10 working days," the report continued, except when a tenant has left without prior notice. In those cases, 10 additional days should be allowed.

The grand jury said some $2,800 in rent was paid while the homes stood vacant and estimated renovation costs at about $6,500.

"The housing authority should have given more lip service to the Santa Venetia Homeowners Association when they were told during the last quarter of 1972 that (the homes) were vacant, deteriorating and becoming eyesores in their neighborhood," it added.

It recommended better coordination among housing authority employees and better record keeping. It suggested quarterly reports be filed with county supervisors.

The grand jury, asked also to investigate complaints about the public housing units in Marin City, concluded that much of the problem lies in a lack of communication between residents and the authority.

"The tenant and landlord relationship is a key factor in the success or failure of a public housing program," it said. "Communications between tenants and the housing authority must be kept open so misunderstandings between them do not become nagnified to a point where it will erode and even destroy the program."

The grand jury recommended that the housing authority reduce from 12 to four the number of apartments it remodels at one time, thus freeing eight units for occupancy.

The housing authority is currently remodeling, in stages, 150 apartments at a cost of about $525,000.

It added that a formula for billing utilities to public housing tenants should be better explained, since it is creating "bewilderment and frustration among tenants."

The formula allocates a standard utility allowance to tenants and charges them for the amount in excess of the standard allocation.

The grand jury committee which investigated the housing authority was headed by foreman William L. Howell. Other members were Jane King Fairchild, Alexander Campbell Thomas and Doretha Mitchell.

Abandoning Of Ferry Plan Urged

The Golden Gate Bridge District should abandon its plans to build a ferry terminal in Sausalito, a district director said yesterday.

Commuter patronage is too low on the run to warrant the $1.5 million terminal planned for downtown Sausalito, declared San Francisco Supervisor Robert E. Gonzales.

His draft of a resolution abandoning plans for the terminal was referred to the building and operating committee for its review at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday in toll plaza offices.

Gonzales, a frequent critic of the district's ferry plans, said he will present figures at the committee's session showing the ferry is carrying only 16 per cent of its capacity on the average weekday.

The supervisor acknowledged to newsmen his resolution may not pass but said at least it may result in a "less extravagant" terminal. He suggested a slightly more elaborate version of the present float would be adequate.

(The ferry transit division said about 500 commuters a day ride the ferry, a figure it estimated will more than triple by 1975 when one of the district's new ferries will be added to the service.)

Hearing On Park Development Plans Scheduled

The Petaluma Recreation, Music and Parks Commission will hold a public hearing on future park development plans Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The commission has set priorities, but decided the hearing was necessary to be sure most residents agree with the plans.

Priority items for a five-year period include development of Lucchesi Park with tennis courts, lagoon, play areas, senior citizens center, athletic facilities and a major community center.

Second on the list is development of Shollenberger River Park, including a soccer field and three sports fields. Third on the list is relocation of the Kenilworth Little League field to permit widening of East Washington Street.

Bridge Security Rules Tightened

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, miffed by a movie maker who misled district officers in order to film the story of a bomb threat against the span, yesterday ordered tough controls on future commercial use of the bridge.

The incident occurred about two months ago when a film crew got permission to shoot from the top of the south tower for a "drama." Unmentioned was the plot — in which a nuclear bomb is placed atop the tower.

District directors discussed the incident in a 10-minute closed-door session "involving a security matter." They emerged with a taciturn report that "the matter was referred to staff for further recommendations."

Newsmen, however, quickly learned it was the film incident that was the subject of the meeting.

The staff indicated it may be tough for any future film crews to use the bridge.

Golden Gate Bridge District Directors Also:

SUICIDE BARRIER — Postponed to May 11 action on a $67,500 appropriation to complete design and wind tunnel testing of a suicide barrier. Director Lowell Edington of Napa County won an 8-7 vote for the two-week delay so he can gather arguments against the barrier, construction of which would cost an estimated $750,000. Director Ben K. Lerer argued unsuccessfully there was an "emergency" need for the barrier.

LARKSPUR — Approved paving part of the planned Larkspur frry terminal as a temporary parking lot for bus commuters. Joi Losee of Larkspur, an opponent of the terminal, objected to the $10,000 expenditure. The lot will have no negative environmental impact, the board agreed, thus its impact will not need study.

SAN RAFAEL — Purchased 15 acres to expand the San Rafael bus base along Highway 17, provided the federal government pays two-thirds of the $763,000 cost for the land and improvement district fees.

DOYLE DRIVE — Rejected a $350,000 claim against the district, San Francisco and the state for injuries sustained by Jack R. Hayes in a traffic accident on Doyle Drive on Jan. 18. The claim alleged the district was negligent for failing to correct known traffic hazards.

MUSEUM — Appropriated $5,000 to design a museum to house memorabilia from construction of the bridge.

BUS LANE — Received a report that the Division of Highways will extend the reverse commuter bus lane from the south to the north end of the Richardson Bay Bridge by mid-May.

FUEL — Asked for legislation to give the district priority in getting fuel if a shortage develops.

FERRY — Received staff report that construction started on April 9 on the second of three new ferries being built for the district in San Diego.

KAISER — Added $20,000 to the $318,000 contract with Kaiser Engineers for a long-range transit plan. The extra funds will cover the cost of adding to the study an underwater tube between Sausalito and San Francisco and of extending the work from June to next April.

CHARTER — Accepted the low bid of Mark IV Charter Lines to provide five buses for commuter charter service subsidized by the district. The rate per day per bus ranges from $78 to $93, depending on its size and route.

TRUCK — Bought a one-ton truck chassis from Earl Sherman and Co. of Oakland for $3,560.

GROOVING — Received report the state will grind grooves in the pavement of Doyle Drive as a safety measure. Work will begin on May 7. In a related report, the Division of Highways rejected suggestions by some San Francisco directors that the 45-mile-an-hour speed limit be cut.

Three Are Receiving Antirabies Treatment

Nancy Ruggeri of the county rabies control office declined to identify those involved, saying it would violate doctor-patient confidentiality.

She said the three came in contact with the sick skunk April 12 at the B-Bar-N Ranch and Stable, 8901 Redwood Highway, Novato.

Two other rabid animal cases have been reported this week, she continued, adding her office is concerned with the growing number of such cases near populated areas.

She said one of the animals, a bat, was killed by San Rafael police at Coleman School on Rafael Drive.

She said the rabid bat was found hanging in a tree on the school grounds. No human or animal contact was reported.

Also in San Rafael, a rabid skunk was killed near the home of Charles Van Loewenfeldt, 230 Forbes Avenue, she reported.

A dog which might have come in contact with the skunk is in quarantine for 30 days to determine if it has the disease.

The three latest cases increase to 17 the number of such cases reported in Marin during the last seven months.

Employees Lose On Demotions

The Novato City Employees Association failed yesterday to convince a Marin Superior Court judge to void a city reclassification ordinance, which demotes several employees.

Attorney Richard H. Breiner, representing the employees' group, argued the ordinance adopted Feb. 12 was invalid because city officials failed to confer beforehand with the group.

Judge E. Warren McGuire said the city had not been obligated to hold the "meet and confer" sessions because the group was not officially recognized as the employees' representative until Feb. 14.

State law requires give-and-take sessions on personnel matters with recognized employee groups, but city officials are required only to supply an unofficial group with information.

McGuire, therefore, refused to nullify the city council's action, but he did tell the city it must hold meet and confer sessions on future personnel issues.

The judge also refused to make Novato pay $955 attorney's fees to Breiner, who sought the payment on the ground the city's action had been capricious.

Review Due Of Budget For Transit

The Marin County Transit District board, meeting at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday at Civic Center, will review a proposed $654,000 budget for fiscal 1973-74.

The remaining $10,000 is listed for services and supplies. (Contained in the contractural services account is about $24,000 for district staffing.)

Huge Cache Of Explosives Found

SUN VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A man described as "very quiet" and a "suspected rightwing extremist" was arrested Friday and authorities confiscated enough explosives to blow up an entire block.

The arrest of Joseph Francis Budnek Jr., 45, culminated a two-month investigation by U.S. Treasury agents.

About 150 pounds of explosives, including 12 live hand grenades buried in Budnek's yard only 10 feet from an elementary school, were recovered with the aid of two explosives sniffing German shepherd dogs.

"If that stuff had gone off, the whole block would have gone up," police department spokesmen said.

In addition to the explosives, authorities also confiscated rifles, handguns, ammunition, and other explosive materials and Army technical manuals, including some entitled "Kill or Get Killed," "Viet Cong Boobytraps" and "Mines and Mining Techniques."

Budnek was arrested as he left for work and was arraigned before a U.S. magistrate for unlawful possession and sale of nine destrutive devices to an undercover Treasury agent.

Budnek, a machinist at a boat building yard, was described by police as a "suspected rightwing extremist."

His foreman, Alfred Lemos, called Budnek a "very quiet" man who "didn't cause much trouble." He said Budnek was "fascinated with guns."

Federal agents said Budnek told them he had had eight years military training and constructed most of the explosive devices himself.

Authorities said the Roscoe Elementary School, adjacent to Budnek's home, was not allowed to open and the 667 students were asked to stay home.

A five block area around the house also was cleared by police while the Los Angeles Police Department's bomb squad cleared out the explosives.

A Treasury agent said a sample of the explosives purchased during the two-month investigation was tested and found to be "many times more powerful than military devices." Agents allegedly made nine purchases of explosives during the investigation.

They said the cache included "very powerful hand grenades" and "Bangalore Torpedoes," an infantry device used in clearing minefields.

Cambodian Bombing Halted

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. warplanes Saturday abruptly stopped daylight bombing of Cambodian rebel positions on the east bank of the Mekong river opposite Phonm Penh.

The rebels, who already have established fronts south and east of Phnom Penh, opened a new one northwest of the capital by capturing two towns during the day.

Although U.S. Air Force F4 and F111 tactical jets had been raiding the rebel positions daily on the river's east bank and continued to do so as late as Friday night, there were no U.S. planes in evidence over the area during the day Saturday. There was no explanation for the halt in Phnom Penh.

(Military sources in Thailand, from where the American planes fly their Cambodian missions, said the raids on the river's east bank near Phnom Penh had been canceled because they were endangering populated areas. In Washington, however, a Pentagon spokesman said there has been no official change in U.S. bombing policy in Cambodia.)

There was no indication here that the United States had cut back bombing operations elsewhere in the country. Military sources said B52 heavy bombers struck Friday night and early Saturday against rebel positions 11 miles south of Phnom Penh, and the tactical jets conducted raids around the encircled provincial capital of Takeo, 55 miles south of Phnom Penh.

On the combat fronts, military sources said the rebels had become active about 15 miles northwest of the capital where they captured the towns of Ang Talek and Thmat Pong. They also seized two more towns about 12 miles to the south of Phnom Penh, which were identified as Setbo and Kompong Kantuot.

The two towns seized to the northwest of Phnom Penh added another active front to the arc the rebels already have formed south and east of this capital of 1.5 million.

Refugees, who continued streaming across from the east bank of the Mekong river into Phnom Penh, said Saturday rebel units within five miles of Phnom Penh had burned at least 30 homes in the village of Prek Thong. Rebel units reportedly have penetrated at several points to the east bank of the river facing Phnom Penh.

The only air activity during the day over the east bank was a strafing mission flown by one Cambodian air force plane and a reconnaissance mission by an American OV10 Bronco plane, which simply circled the area.

Kemper's Car Yields Evidence Of Slayings

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — Police Friday examined a car belonging to Edmund E. Kemper III, who told police he killed and mutilated nine women, and found strands of human hair and blood on the back seat.

Kemper, who spent five years in a mental hospital following the 1964 killings of his grandparents, confessed the slayings last weekend of his mother and her friend inside their Aptos apartment.

Kemper, 24, was arrested in a Pueblo, Colo., phone booth Tuesday while confessing by long distance. He was en route here in the company of officers.

Kemper, a 6-foot-9, 280- pounder, also told authorities he killed six hitchhiking college coeds in the Santa Cruz region and a Berkeley teen-ager.

Officers said a clip of .30 caliber ammunition, and a spent bullet, were also found in the 1969 Ford.

The trunk of the vehicle contained a short-handled shovel and more hair caught in the trunk latch.

Paul M. Dougherty, a criminalist from the San Mateo County Sheriff's office, conducted a three-hour field inspection of the car that was later taken to Redwood City for more study.

Several of the young women Kemper claimed to have killed were decapitated or otherwise dismembered.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Kemper was examined by two Fresno psychiatrists last September and adjudged "normal."

Madera County District Attorney James Hanhart said the examinations were ordered by the court when Kemper's attorney sought to have his Juvenile Court murder record sealed. Kemper spent five years at the Atascadero State Hospital for the Criminally Insane after he confessed slaying his grandparents when he was 15.

Guilty Plea In 1971 Charge

Following the admission, Andrew Lawrence Stitch was ordered to appear in Superior Court June 4 for sentencing for trying to pass a $95 check at the Cala food store, 2040 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Oct. 26, 1971.

A warrant was issued for his arrest after a store clerk identified him, but he was not captured until last month.

Huge Cache Of Explosives Found

SUN VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A man described as "very quiet" and a "suspected rightwing extremist" was arrested Friday and authorities confiscated enough explosives to blow up an entire block.

The arrest of Joseph Francis Budnek Jr., 45, culminated a two-month investigation by U.S. Treasury agents.

About 150 pounds of explosives, including 12 live hand grenades buried in Budnek's yard only 10 feet from an elementary school, were recovered with the aid of two explosives sniffing German shepherd dogs.

"If that stuff had gone off, the whole block would have gone up," police department spokesmen said.

In addition to the explosives, authorities also confiscated rifles, handguns, ammunition, and other explosive materials and Army technical manuals, including some entitled "Kill or Get Killed," "Viet Cong Boobytraps" and "Mines and Mining Techniques."

Budnek was arrested as he left for work and was arraigned before a U.S. magistrate for unlawful possession and sale of nine destrutive devices to an undercover Treasury agent.

Budnek, a machinist at a boat building yard, was described by police as a "suspected right-wing extremist."

His foreman, Alfred Lemos, called Budnek a "very quiet" man who "didn't cause much trouble." He said Budnek was "fascinated with guns."

Federal agents said Budnek told them he had had eight years military training and constructed most of the explosive devices himself.

Authorities said the Roscoe Elementary School, adjacent to Budnek's home, was not allowed to open and the 667 students were asked to stay home. A five block area around the house also was cleared by police while the Los Angeles Police Department's bomb squad cleared out the explosives.

A Treasury agent said a sample of the explosives purchased during the two-month investigation was tested and found to be "many times more powerful than military devices." Agents allegedly made nine purchases of explosives during the investigation.

They said the cache included "very powerful hand grenades" and "Bangalore Torpedoes," an infantry device used in clearing minefields.

Cambodian Bombing Halted

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. warplanes Saturday abruptly stopped daylight bombing of Cambodian rebel positions on the east bank of the Mekong river opposite Phonm Penh.

The rebels, who already have established fronts south and east of Phnom Penh, opened a new one northwest of the capital by capturing two towns during the day.

Although U.S. Air Force F4 and F111 tactical jets had been raiding the rebel positions daily on the river's east bank and continued to do so as late as Friday night, there were no U.S. planes in evidence over the area during the day Saturday. There was no explanation for the halt in Phnom Penh.

(Military sources in Thailand, from where the American planes fly their Cambodian missions, said the raids on the river's east bank near Phnom Penh had been canceled because they were endangering populated areas. In Washington, however, a Pentagon spokesman said there has been no official change in U.S. bombing policy in Cambodia.)

There was no indication here that the United States had cut back bombing operations elsewhere in the country. Military sources said B52 heavy bombers struck Friday night and early Saturday against rebel positions 11 miles south of Phnom Penh, and the tactical jets conducted raids around the encircled provincial capital of Takeo, 55 miles south of Phnom Penh.

On the combat fronts, military sources said the rebels had become active about 15 miles northwest of the capital where they captured the towns of Ang Talek and Thmat Pong. They also seized two more towns about 12 miles to the south of Phnom Penh, which were identified as Setbo and Kompong Kantuot.

The two towns seized to the northwest of Phnom Penh added another active front to the arc the rebels already have formed south and east of this capital of 1.5 million.

Refugees, who continued streaming across from the east bank of the Mekong river into Phnom Penh, said Saturday rebel units within five miles of Phnom Penh had burned at least 30 homes in the village of Prek Thong. Rebel units reportedly have penetrated at several points to the east bank of the river facing Phnom Penh.

The only air activity during the day over the east bank was a strafing mission flown by one Cambodian air force plane and a reconnaissance mission by an American OV10 Bronco plane, which simply circled the area.

Kemper's Car Yields Evidence Of Slayings

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — Police Friday examined a car belonging to Edmund E. Kemper III, who told police he killed and mutilated nine women, and found strands of human hair and blood on the back seat.

Kemper, who spent five years in a mental hospital following the 1964 killings of his grandparents, confessed the slayings last weekend of his mother and her friend inside their Aptos apartment.

Kemper, 24, was arrested in a Pueblo, Colo., phone booth Tuesday while confessing by long distance. He was en route here in the company of officers.

Kemper, a 6-foot-9, 280- pounder, also told authorities he killed six hitchhiking college coeds in the Santa Cruz region and a Berkeley teen-ager.

Officers said a clip of .30 caliber ammunition, and a spent bullet, were also found in the 1969 Ford.

The trunk of the vehicle contained a short-handled shovel and more hair caught in the trunk latch.

Paul M. Dougherty, a criminalist from the San Mateo County Sheriff's office, conducted a three-hour field inspection of the car that was later taken to Redwood City for more study.

Several of the young women Kemper claimed to have killed were decapitated or otherwise dismembered.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Kemper was examined by two Fresno psychiatrists last September and adjudged "normal."

Madera County District Attorney James Hanhart said the examinations were ordered by the court when Kemper's attorney sought to have his Juvenile Court murder record sealed. Kemper spent five years at the Atascadero State Hospital for the Criminally Insane after he confessed slaying his grandparents when he was 15.

Guilty Plea In 1971 Charge

Following the admission, Andrew Lawrence Stitch was ordered to appear in Superior Court June 4 for sentencing for trying to pass a $95 check at the Cala food store, 2040 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Oct. 26, 1971.

A warrant was issued for his arrest after a store clerk identified him, but he was not captured until last month.

168 Apartments Win Approval Of Planners

The Rohnert Park Planning Commission Thursday night approved plans for four multiple housing developments totaling 168 units.

Commission secretary Sandra Nelson said the commission also approved plans by Harris and Rathke Inc. for 12 fourplex units on the eastside of Santa Alicia Drive near Arlen Drive.

Rohnert Park Planning Commission Also:

INDUSTRY — Approved plans by W. W. Grainger Inc. for a 40,000-square-foot building on Commerce Boulevard where electric motors will be distributed.

SCHOOL — Approved plans by the Petaluma High School District for a 40,000-square-foot addition to Rancho Cotate High School.

GROWTH — Heard Christine Compton report she is circulating a petition asking for slower growth so schools don't become crowded. Commissioners advised her to present the petition to the city council when signatures are secured.

SUBDIVISION — Approved plans by Qantas Development Corp. for the Llano subdivision in the northern part of the city and granted a reduction in lot sizes to 6,000 square feet.

Human Rights Directors Seek Pay For Meetings

Marin County human rights commissiners have decided they ought to be paid for their services, thus joining previous county commissions which have sought and been granted compensation.

On a 4 to 2 vote, commissioners agreed Thursday to approach the county board of supervisors with a request they be paid $15 per meeting up to two meetings per month.

The move was spearheaded by Commissioner June Weden, who noted that only recently the county Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission was granted a similar stipend.

Voting against the motion were Commissioners Dee Freitas and Leland S. Bright.

The only other county commission not paid is the juvenile justice commission. Unlike the others, which are under the board of supervisors, the justice commission is under county judges.

In the past, the county has offered to pay for specific expenses incurred by its volunteer commissioners.

In other action, the commission asked the board of supervisors to again consider adding an amendment to the county's human rights ordinance to offer equal protection and employment to homosexuals.

Supervisors tabled the matter earlier this year after noting homosexuality is still against the law in California.

Marin Symphony Names President

Carole Berg of Kentfield has been elected president of the Marin Symphony Association, replacing Joseph Kohlenstein.

Other officers chosen at the association's annual meeting Thursday night are Kohlenstein, vice president in charge of finance; Alma Tomlinson, vice president in charge of young activities; Maybelle Speckmann, secretary, and Arthur Wasserman, treasurer.

All will take office next month.

Board Will Ask Sewer Plant Funds

The Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board voted Thursday night to apply to the Environmental Protection Agency for $572,000 in federal funds to improve the district's sewage treatment plant on Smith Ranch Road.

The board agreed to include in the application $3,500 for a remote alarm system to check high water levels and pump outages at the plant, and $37,500 for a generator set that would provide standby power in case of power failures, according to Edward Tibbetts, district engineer.

The board also approved application for $60,000 for a sewer system evaluation survey and $22,000 for expansion of the plant building to accommodate support equipment for the new generator.

Directors also instructed the district engineer to complete a feasibility study for completion of the Terra Linda sewer main and appointed board members Frank Solomon Jr. and Gene H. Dyer to gather information on salaries and fringe benefits for district employees.

I-J Columnist To Get Award

Syndicated columnist Earl Waters, whose column appears regularly in the Independent-Journal, will receive the California Trial Lawyers Association Newspaper Columnist of the Year Award Tuesday in Sacramento.

The award is for "outstanding news coverage and in-depth and objective reporting on consumer affairs," according to Morton L. Friedman, association vice president.

Waters has been in Sacramento for more than 30 years as a reporter and state government investigator and is syndicated in 20 California newspapers.

Board To Eye Mill Valley Budget

The Mill Valley School District's budget will jump from $4,347,000 to $4,534,000 next fiscal year if a proposed preliminary spending program is adopted by trustees, but a tax increase may not be needed.

The board will consider the budget at an adjourned meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at the Middle School.

The budget is expected to require a tax rate about equal to this fiscal year's levy of $3.605 per $100 assessed valuation, according to Carroll D. Killingsworth, district business manager.

The preliminary budget, which Killingsworth said is almost certain to change between now and adoption in August, anticipates raising $3,624,000 in local property taxes, compared to $3,420,000 this fiscal year.

New school financing legislation limits 1973-74 school district spending to the amount spent this year per pupil, plus $65 for inflation, multiplied by the number of pupils expected. The tax rate may not bring in more money than is necessary to meet this spending ceiling.

The district expects about $3,320 pupils next year, a drop of 13 students, Killingsworth said.

The budget, he said, includes step increases for employee salaries but provides for no new raises. However, a projected $302,000 reserve fund could be tapped for raises.

The $75,000 difference between this year's budget and next year's proposal is entirely in the instruction category, which would increase from $2,825,000 to $2,900,000 Killingsworth said.

He is recommending that the other budget categories remain the same next year. Some of the larger categories, and their amounts, are: fixed charges, $420,000; operations, $265,000; maintenance, $228,000; administration, $131,000; transportation, $119,000, and capital outlay, $72,000.

Novato Planners Set Hearing On Open Space

The Novato Planning Commission will hold a public hearing May 21 on the Mount Burdell Open Space Committee's plan to preserve open areas on the mountain, a landmark in the Novato area.

The committee has recommended that about 2,200 acres on the upper slopes be retained in open space. After hearing a review of the plan Thursday night, commissioners set the hearing date.

The commission also approved precise development plans for the 1811 Novato Boulevard apartments, 70 units on 4.34 acres.

Mr. Don Knotts.

Find out the lump in your throat is only emotion.

It's generally agreed that one of the best things you can do to keep yourself in good health is to have a regular health checkup.

The reason's simple. Cancer—if detected early enough—can often be cured. So even if your regular checkup does reveal a problem, in a way it's a good thing. You've probably caught it early enough to do something about it.

But the fact is, your checkup probably won't reveal anything serious. Most people who have regular checkups discover they're in pretty good health.

So have a checkup. Now. And regularly. Find out you're in better shape than you think you are.

It's a nice feeling.

The board will consider the budget at an adjourned meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at the Middle School.

The budget is expected to require a tax rate about equal to this fiscal year's levy of $3.605 per $100 assessed valuation, according to Carroll D. Killingsworth, district business manager.

The preliminary budget, which Killingsworth said is almost certain to change between now and adoption in August, anticipates raising $3,624,000 in local property taxes, compared to $3,420,000 this fiscal year.

New school financing legislation limits 1973-74 school district spending to the amount spent this year per pupil, plus $65 for inflation, multiplied by the number of pupils expected. The tax rate may not bring in more money than is necessary to meet this spending ceiling.

The district expects about 3,320 pupils next year, a drop of 13 students, Killingsworth said.

The budget, he said, includes step increases for employee salaries but provides for no new raises. However, a projected $302,000 reserve fund could be tapped for raises.

The $75,000 difference between this year's budget and next year's proposal is entirely in the instruction category, which would increase from $2,825,000 to $2,900,000 Killingsworth said.

He is recommending that the other budget categories remain the same next year. Some of the larger categories, and their amounts, are: fixed charges, $420,000; operations, $265,000; maintenance, $228,000; administration, $131,000; transportation, $119,000, and capital outlay, $72,000.

Novato Planners Set Hearing On Open Space

The Novato Planning Commission will hold a public hearing May 21 on the Mount Burdell Open Space Committee's plan to preserve open areas on the mountain, a landmark in the Novato area.

The committee has recommended that about 2,200 acres on the upper slopes be retained in open space. After hearing a review of the plan Thursday night, commissioners set the hearing date.

The commission also approved precise development plans for the 1811 Novato Boulevard apartments, 70 units on 4.34 acres.

Get a health checkup.

It's generally agreed that one of the best things you can do to keep yourself in good health is to have a regular health checkup.

The reason's simple. Cancer—if detected early enough—can often be cured. So even if your regular checkup does reveal a problem, in a way it's a good thing. You've probably caught it early enough to do something about it.

But the fact is, your checkup probably won't reveal anything serious. Most people who have regular checkups discover they're in pretty good health.

So have a checkup. Now. And regularly. Find out you're in better shape than you think you are.

A Visitor From Paris Welcomed

By MOLLY MARIN

A houseguest this week of Mrs. Adele Ulman in San Rafael is Mrs. Andre de St. Phalle of New York and Paris. The two women met three years ago in Caux, Switzerland, at a conference for Moral Rearmament and both have just returned from a similar conference in Vancouver, B.C.

Mrs. Ulman is entertaining for her houseguest and the women are visiting friends in the Bay Area.

AS A MEMBER of the International Hospitality Center of San Francisco, Mrs. David Hawkins of Corte Madera often entertains foreign visitors to the Bay Area. Recently she was hostess to a Rumanina couple who are poets. The couple, Cezar and Elena Baltag, could speak no English, so Mrs. Hawkins called Mrs. George Bloesser, her across-the-street neighbor in Corte Madera who is Rumanian-born to translate.

Not only did Maria Bloesser and the Baltags have language and homeland in common, the poets were excited to find that Mrs. Bloesser is the daughter of the famed Rumanian poet, the late Barbu Nemteanu.

During the Baltags' stay in the area April 12 and 13, Mrs. Hawkins and the Bloessers entertained them with a tour of the area, and the Bloessers are planning to visit the poets in Bucharest on a forthcoming European trip.

The Rumanian couple had been at a foreign poets' meeting at University of Iowa and chose to tour California, New Mexico and Arizona before returning to Rumania. The variety of climate impressed the visitors as did the camellias blooming in Marin, Mrs. Bloesser said the couple later wrote in a letter to her.

FRANCES GREGG of Forest Knolls, who has been teaching at Cheng Kung Provincial University in Taiwan since September, writes that she has been asked to stay another year teaching English literature.

Though she says she misses Marin, she is enjoying teaching and her students, and during Christmas vacation she traveled to Hong Kong, Singapore and Bangkok. She also teaches one English class at Taiwan Theological College. She received the master of arts degree last year from Sonoma State College.

Mrs. Gregg writes that her classes have up to 70 students and are held in old fashioned dark buildings "with no frills or teaching aids," but the campus is pretty with flowering hibiscus hedges and lotus blossoms in the ponds.

MRS. ESTHER Del Frerichs, who is retiring as the secretary of Robert H. Anreson, Mill Valley lawyer, was honored at a reception in Andreson's office yesterday afternoon. The secretary's husband, Herman J. Del Frerichs, is also retiring from his work with West Winds, Inc., shipbuilding firm in San Francisco. The couple will move from their Mill Valley home to Grants Pass, Ore., this summer. Before the move north they will visit the Hawaiian Islands.

TWO SAN Rafael sisters are competing in the homecoming queen contest at Armstrong College in Berkeley. Sandra and Yvonne Klang are looking forward to the judging May 8.

They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Klang of San Rafael. Sandra is sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Council, and Yvonne is the nominee of the Minor Clubs.

Want To Know Who Your Friends Are? Go On Diet

NEW YORK (UPI) — One way to find out who your real friends are is to go on a diet. You're apt to learn you don't have many friends, if any.

Sympathy is the last thing you get. Encouragement? Forget it. Help? Forget that, too.

A married man probably has a small advantage over the bachelor. His wife — often the instigator of the diet — tends to cooperate. But that's about it.

Just announce that you've started a diet and all sorts of things begin to happen. People who haven't been in touch for eons suddenly are keeping your phone busy with invitations to cocktail parties, dinner parties, backyard picnics.

YOUR BOSS who has been saying for months that he owes you a lunch of course picks the first week of your diet to announce this is the week, and he knows the finest little French restaurant across town . . .

Then there are the neighbors. They come ringing you bell for an evening, laughing and joking about your diet, saying they know you've locked up your liquor cabinet for the duration, so they just happened to bring along a gallon or so of martinis.

The coffee wagon man in the office, who has been wheeling his cart past your desk for years as if you didn't exist, suddenly decides you're just the man who wants a buttered muffin every morning, and a fruit tart each afternoon. And seems offended when you wave him on with a no thanks.

Perfect strangers connive against you, too. After you've sought out a quiet corner of a restaurant to eat your luncheon cottage cheese and tomato slices in peace, the next table fills up with gourmets who promptly have their plates filled with every favorite fattening food you ever knew.

YOUR LOCAL markets go stonily through the year offering your best loved foods at prices outrageous. But go on a diet? They're on sale every day.

You walk the dog and for the first time in months the ice cream wagon comes tooling down the road, bells jingling merrilly while you turn and walk briskly in the opposite direction.

Then, of course, there are those illustrated food store ads in the newspapers and all those goodies — in color — on television, to tease your taste buds practically the clock around.

The dieter's world is not a happy one — until that gorgeous day someone finally says — "Hey! Whatcha been doing? You look great!"

Marin Women

Marilyn Horn Does Not Think About Being Famous

By JO ANN LEVINE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

ORANGE, N.J. — One suspects that Marilyn Horne, the person, is as varied as Marilyn Horne, the singer.

But in interviews, musical depths are left unsung, personal depths unspoken.

In this case it was middle-of-the-week talk, which followed Miss Horne's Friday afternoon public dress rehearsal at the Metropolitan Opera of "The Barber of Seville," an unexpected stand-in performance in "Carmen" on Saturday night, and the opening night of the "Barber" on Monday.

It was talk which preceded a Friday night concert with her husband, Henry Lewis, conductor of the New Jersey State Symphony, and a Saturday afternoon performance and radio broadcast of the "Barber."

And it was talk in the den of the Lewises' Tudor home that made the Marilyn Horne with the voice that conquers mountains, valleys, and picket fences, quite believable.

THE NIGHT before, she said, she had dined at McDonald's ("my daughter's favorite place"). And not long after that confession, she was enveloped in enormous hugs by the giggly 7-year-old burger-eater. It was Angela, just home from school.

Miss Horne has what has been called the greatest voice range of any performing singer. Lewis, who had transformed the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, is in great demand as a guest conductor, and again will conduct the Met's (and his wife's) performance of "Carmen" when it goes on tour at the end of this month.

Lewis had curled into a sitting position on the floor next to the divan and coffee table. He sipped coffee, ate cookies, and said:

"We don't think of ourselves as famous. That is something that catches us up short every now and again. We are just working at our business . . . The level changes. If anything tells you you have arrived, it is that you can choose a little bit; you can say, 'If you want to do it this way, I'm interested.'

"The hardest thing to break is the striving syndrome. You get so wound up with striving, you find you are still doing it, and you don't know why."

Miss Horne said there came a time when it occurred to her: "Gee, maybe I don't have to do that anymore." Then, she said, there are certain other things that take place, other goals that become important.

Now, Miss Horne says she is really in the position of keeping up with herself. "But if you are lucky, you won't let that bother you either," she added.

In Miss Horne's opinion, "First of all, you have the gift. I think the gift is a linking up of the vocal chords, the resonators, the ear, and the mind. That comes first; you are born with that somehow. Then comes a lot of hard work and an awful lot of people helping you. And eventually you need terrific stamina — you really have to be as strong as a horse!

"And every singer needs somebody who is dead honest with him, somebody who tells him the absolute truth. Almost everyone I know who has had great success has had one person who has made the difference between a good career and a great career. In my case, that person has been Henry."

Miss Horne added, "I'm a pretty cautious singer, in spite of the critics and writers who think I show off."

WHEN REMINDED that a recent review in the New York Times said she had shown off in a concert, she exclaimed, "What am I supposed to do? Not use what I've got? Leave some home in the closet? If I'm capable of doing these things, why not do it?"

Has she always had a gigantic voice? Miss Horne, who early in her career sang the bottleg supermarket record renditions of Kay Starr's "Wheel of Fortune" and Peggy Lee's "Lover," whose singing was dubbed in for Dorothy Dandridge in the movie, "Carmen Jones," said, "I've always had a penetrating voice, a carrying voice. But the size of my voice has increased. And over the last two or three years, I really have begun to feel my voice settle."

After singing in Europe, Miss Horne became well-known in the United States only after she began to sing "Semiramide" with Joan Sutherland in 1964. The voice combination was as spectacular as the music was difficult, and the Rossini opera opened doors to bel canto opera that most Americans had never walked through.

Does Miss Horne have any future plans to sing with Joan Sutherland?

"No plans . . . Can you believe that the Metropolitan Opera has the most winning combination they have had since, since Flagstaff and Melchoir, and they have not planned another opera for us?"

As for the Metropolitan Opera, she said, "I would like to see it be more adventuresome, do some revivals of some of these bel canto operas — the Met has never done Semiramide, La Donna del Lago, Tancredi."

From the great heights of her career, Miss Horne reflects: "It's nice to have the luxury to go into things a lot deeper. One of the great things about being a musician — and contrary to any common knowledge, I think of myself as a musician as well as a singer — is that we are lucky. We are learning, studying, never finished. We always have new worlds to conquer. Every piece of music is a whole new world if you have never done it before. The amount of music written for singers is so much greater than for others . . . Imagine, if you were a cellist or a double bass player and had no repertoire?"

SHE ADDED: "There are lots of parts I want to do that I have never done on the stage. I would like to do "Fidelio," "I Capuleti ed I Montecchi" (the Romeo and Juliet of Belini), "Don Sebastiano re di Portogallo" (Donizetti), "Mignon," "Werther" (Massenet) . . . and I have just gotten interested in Russian song literature. A wonderful old Russian, George Cehanovsky, who used to sing at the Met is teaching me."

Miss Horne has sung 25 recitals, several symphony concerts, and 30 performances with the Met this season. She said that about the only time she has with her husband is late at night when they are both exhausted.

"It has been hard to find time when our minds are free at the same time," agreed Lewis.

"I'm hoping to remedy that next year," Miss Horne added. "I have cut back my schedule by one-third."

Lewis left to go into his music room to confer with his first cellist, but Miss Horne walked through the downstairs of her home, past walls laden with paintings, through the formal dining room ("which we hardly ever use"), into a newly remodeled kitchen with chopping-block counters and tables.

Although the Lewises have lived in the house since 1968, it still is being decorated. "With a house like this, you never finish. But we like the privacy. We need it, because we are noisemakers — and Angela can get on her bike and visit her friends."

As the interview ended, she picked up a musical figurine of a Spanish woman — a gift from a fan — and wound its key. The woman who has been called the "greatest Carmen in 30 years" smiled with delight as the figurine twirled around slowly — tinkling a tiny toreador song.

Very Little Zest Is Found During Family Life Filming

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — With the aid of movie cameras, scientists seeking to learn what makes the American family tick have found a lot of talk, not much laughter and little special zest for living.

The filming has been done by the Family Study station of the University of California Medical Center. Dr. Henry L. Lennard, director of the project, was consulted by the Public Broadcasting System before it made the American Family television series with Pat and Bill Lord.

About 50 families have been filmed by Lennard's staff seeking patterns of family interaction—a subject on which little is known. From the studies, the scientists hope to learn more about how human beings interact in general.

"There has been a theory that people don't talk much in a family setting," says Lennard, a sociologist. "Our data show there is a lot of talk, a lot of interaction.

"BUT NOT much laughter is going on in the family setting. There aren't many belly laughs. Our most joyful family was all deaf."

Lennard also finds very little physical contact between American family members, including children, in sharp contrast with southern Europeans, for example. In only two of the 50 families was "touching" observed, and Lennard notes "a general lack of intimacy and closeness."

In families including a mental patient to whom tranquilizers are administered, a pattern is developing. with worrisome implications for the psychiatrists who prescribe drugs.

The drugs interfere with communication. The patient attempts ineffectively "to be a part of the family action," but tends to be ignored.

If, as family therapists theorize, the patient's basic problem is that he cannot communicate with the family, tranquilizers may be the wrong medicine.

Lennard concedes that the presence of a camera can alter a family's action, but notes that every investigative technique becomes a factor in the situation. Interviewing family members is a method with just another set of research pitfalls.

"MOST PEOPLE almost forget they are being filmed in the first 15 minutes," says Lennard's associate, Dr. Steven Allen.

The filming takes place in a combination living-dining room and kitchen in which a camera is built in. Each family brings its own groceries, for which it is reimbursed, and spends the dinner hours.

"We tell them to stay as long as they want," Allen says, "and it would be nice if they clean up."

In Lennard's project, a film is reviewed as many as 30 times, to catch the subtle body movements, bits of family shorthand and little ways people are ignored.

In some families, a person does not talk unless he is looking at the other person. If so, it is thought the relationship is unsettled, and the speaker always needs clues about the reaction.

In only two families was any notable zest,any special joy in living, evident.

Among social scientists, Lennard says, great debate is developing over whether the family as an institution remains viable.

He does not know the answer.

Marilyn Horn Does Not Think About Being Famous

OPERA STAR Marilyn Horne and her husband, Henry Lewis, conductor of the New Jersey State Symphony. "I'm a pretty cautious singer, in spite of critics and writers who think I show off," says Miss Horne.

By JO ANN LEVINE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

ORANGE, N.J. — One suspects that Marilyn Horne, the person, is as varied as Marilyn Horne, the singer.

But in interviews, musical depths are left unsung, personal depths unspoken.

In this case it was middle-of-the-week talk, which followed Miss Horne's Friday afternoon public dress rehearsal at the Metropolitan Opera of "The Barber of Seville," an unexpected stand-in performance in "Carmen" on Saturday night, and the opening night of the "Barber" on Monday.

It was talk which preceded a Friday night concert with her husband, Henry Lewis, conductor of the New Jersey State Symphony, and a Saturday afternoon performance and radio broadcast of the "Barber."

And it was talk in the den of the Lewises' Tudor home that made the Marilyn Horne with the voice that conquers mountains, valleys, and picket fences, quite believable.

THE NIGHT before, she said, she had dined at McDonald's ("my daughter's favorite place"). And not long after that confession, she was enveloped in enormous hugs by the giggly 7-year-old burger-eater. It was Angela, just home from school.

Miss Horne has what has been called the greatest voice range of any performing singer. Lewis, who had transformed the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, is in great demand as a guest conductor, and again will conduct the Met's (and his wife's) performance of "Carmen" when it goes on tour at the end of this month.

Lewis had curled into a sitting position on the floor next to the divan and coffee table. He sipped coffee, ate cookies, and said:

"We don't think of ourselves as famous. That is something that catches us up short every now and again. We are just working at our business ... The level changes. If anything tells you you have arrived, it is that you can choose a little bit; you can say, 'If you want to do it this way, I'm interested.'

"The hardest thing to break is the striving syndrome. You get so wound up with striving, you find you are still doing it, and you don't know why."

Miss Horne said there came a time when it occurred to her: "Gee, maybe I don't have to do that anymore." Then, she said, there are certain other things that take place, other goals that become important.

Now, Miss Horne says she is really in the position of keeping up with herself. "But if you are lucky, you won't let that bother you either," she added.

In Miss Horne's opinion, "First of all, you have the gift. I think the gift is a linking up of the vocal chords, the resonators, the ear, and the mind. That comes first; you are born with that somehow. Then comes a lot of hard work and an awful lot of people helping you. And eventually you need terrific stamina — you really have to be as strong as a horse!

"And every singer needs somebody who is dead honest with him, somebody who tells him the absolute truth. Almost everyone I know who has had great success has had one person who has made the difference between a good career and a great career. In my case, that person has been Henry."

Miss Horne added, "I'm a pretty cautious singer, in spite of the critics and writers who think I show off."

WHEN REMINDED that a recent review in the New York Times said she had shown off in a concert, she exclaimed, "What am I supposed to do? Not use what I've got? Leave some home in the closet? If I'm capable of doing these things, why not do it?"

Has she always had a gigantic voice? Miss Horne, who early in her career sang the bottleg supermarket record renditions of Kay Starr's "Wheel of Fortune" and Peggy Lee's "Lover," whose singing was dubbed in for Dorothy Dandridge in the movie, "Carmen Jones," said, "I've always had a penetrating voice, a carrying voice. But the size of my voice has increased. And over the last two or three years, I really have begun to feel my voice settle."

After singing in Europe, Miss Horne became well-known in the United States only after she began to sing "Semiramide" with Joan Sutherland in 1964. The voice combination was as spectacular as the music was difficult, and the Rossini opera opened doors to bel canto opera that most Americans had never walked through.

Does Miss Horne have any future plans to sing with Joan Sutherland?

"No plans ... Can you believe that the Metropolitan Opera has the most winning combination they have had since, since Flagstaff and Melchoir, and they have not planned another opera for us?"

As for the Metropolitan Opera, she said, "I would like to see it be more adventuresome, do some revivals of some of these bel canto operas — the Met has never done Semiramide, La Donna del Lago, Tancredi."

From the great heights of her career, Miss Horne reflects: "It's nice to have the luxury to go into things a lot deeper. One of the great things about being a musician — and contrary to any common knowledge, I think of myself as a musician as well as a singer — is that we are lucky. We are learning, studying, never finished. We always have new worlds to conquer. Every piece of music is a whole new world if you have never done it before. The amount of music written for singers is so much greater than for others ... Imagine, if you were a cellist or a double bass player and had no repertoire?"

SHE ADDED: "There are lots of parts I want to do that I have never done on the stage. I would like to do "Fidelio," "I Capuleti ed I Montecchi" (the Romeo and Juliet of Belini), "Don Sebastiano re di Portogallo" (Donizetti), "Mignon," "Werther" (Massenet) . . . and I have just gotten interested in Russian song literature. A wonderful old Russian, George Cehanovsky, who used to sing at the Met is teaching me."

Miss Horne has sung 25 recitals, several symphony concerts, and 30 performances with the Met this season. She said that about the only time she has with her husband is late at night when they are both exhausted.

"It has been hard to find time when our minds are free at the same time," agreed Lewis.

"I'm hoping to remedy that next year," Miss Horne added. "I have cut back my schedule by one-third."

Lewis left to go into his music room to confer with his first cellist, but Miss Horne walked through the downstairs of her home, past walls laden with paintings, through the formal dining room ("which we hardly ever use"), into a newly remodeled kitchen with chopping-block counters and tables.

Although the Lewises have lived in the house since 1968, it still is being decorated. "With a house like this, you never finish. But we like the privacy. We need it, because we are noisemakers — and Angela can get on her bike and visit her friends."

As the interview ended, she picked up a musical figurine of a Spanish woman — a gift from a fan — and wound its key. The woman who has been called the "greatest Carmen in 30 years" smiled with delight as the figurine twirled around slowly — tinkling a tiny toreador song.

Want To Know Who Your Friends Are? Go On Diet

NEW YORK (UPI) — One way to find out who your real friends are is to go on a diet. You're apt to learn you don't have many friends, if any.

Sympathy is the last thing you get. Encouragement? Forget it. Help? Forget that, too.

A married man probably has a small advantage over the bachelor. His wife — often the instigator of the diet — tends to cooperate. But that's about it.

Just announce that you've started a diet and all sorts of things begin to happen. People who haven't been in touch for eons suddenly are keeping your phone busy with invitations to cocktail parties, dinner parties, backyard picnics.

YOUR BOSS who has been saying for months that he owes you a lunch of course picks the first week of your diet to announce this is the week, and he knows the finest little French restaurant across town . . .

Then there are the neighbors. They come ringing you bell for an evening, laughing and joking about your diet, saying they know you've locked up your liquor cabinet for the duration, so they just happened to bring along a gallon or so of martinis.

The coffee wagon man in the office, who has been wheeling his cart past your desk for years as if you didn't exist, suddenly decides you're just the man who wants a buttered muffin every morning, and a fruit tart each afternoon. And seems offended when you wave him on with a no thanks.

Perfect strangers connive against you, too. After you've sought out a quiet corner of a restaurant to eat your luncheon cottage cheese and tomato slices in peace, the next table fills up with gourmets who promptly have their plates filled with every favorite fattening food you ever knew.

YOUR LOCAL markets go stonily through the year offering your best loved foods at prices outrageous. But go on a diet? They're on sale every day.

You walk the dog and for the first time in months the ice cream wagon comes tooling down the road, bells jingling merrilly while you turn and walk briskly in the opposite direction.

Then, of course, there are those illustrated food store ads in the newspapers and all those goodies — in color — on television, to tease your taste buds practically the clock around.

The dieter's world is not a happy one — until that gorgeous day someone finally says — "Hey! Whatcha been doing? You look great!"

Very Little Zest Is Found During Family Life Filming

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — With the aid of movie cameras, scientists seeking to learn what makes the American family tick have found a lot of talk, not much laughter and little special zest for living.

The filming has been done by the Family Study station of the University of California Medical Center. Dr. Henry L. Lennard, director of the project, was consulted by the Public Broadcasting System before it made the American Family television series with Pat and Bill Lord.

About 50 families have been filmed by Lennard's staff seeking patterns of family interaction—a subject on which little is known. From the studies, the scientists hope to learn more about how human beings interact in general.

"There has been a theory that people don't talk much in a family setting," says Lennard, a sociologist. "Our data show there is a lot of talk, a lot of interaction.

"BUT NOT much laughter is going on in the family setting. There aren't many belly laughs. Our most joyful family was all deaf."

Lennard also finds very little physical contact between American family members, including children, in sharp contrast with southern Europeans, for example. In only two of the 50 families was "touching" observed, and Lennard notes "a general lack of intimacy and closeness."

In families including a mental patient to whom tranquilizers are administered, a pattern is developing, with worrisome implications for the psychiatrists who prescribe drugs.

The drugs interfere with communication. The patient attempts ineffectively "to be a part of the family action," but tends to be ignored.

If, as family therapists theorize, the patient's basic problem is that he cannot communicate with the family, tranquilizers may be the wrong medicine.

Lennard concedes that the presence of a camera can alter a family's action, but notes that every investigative technique becomes a factor in the situation. Interviewing family members is a method with just another set of research pitfalls.

"MOST PEOPLE almost forget they are being filmed in the first 15 minutes," says Lennard's associate, Dr. Steven Allen.

The filming takes place in a combination living-dining room and kitchen in which a camera is built in. Each family brings its own groceries, for which it is reimbursed, and spends the dinner hours.

"We tell them to stay as long as they want," Allen says, "and it would be nice if they clean up."

In Lennard's project, a film is reviewed as many as 30 times, to catch the subtle body movements, bits of family shorthand and little ways people are ignored.

In some families, a person does not talk unless he is looking at the other person. If so, it is thought the relationship is unsettled, and the speaker always needs clues about the reaction.

In only two families was any notable zest, any special joy in living, evident.

Among social scientists, Lennard says, great debate is developing over whether the family as an institution remains viable.

He does not know the answer.

Letters Would Go A Long Way In Cheering Up Paralyzed Boy

DEAR RAP:

I wonder if your readers could help cheer a little paralyzed boy.

It's been six months since Timothy Copeland's accident. Last October he fell from a tree, fracturing his spine. Since then he's had two operations and a bone graft. Doctors say the longer there is no sensation in his legs, the less chance there is that he'll ever walk again.

Nevertheless the brave 8-year-old knows he'll make it. He asked for (and received) a new bicycle for Christmas. It's standing in his room, waiting for the time when he'll be able to ride to basketball and baseball again.

But Timothy can't help feeling lonely. He's in a therapy center through the week and only gets home on weekends. Letters would make the time go much faster — and I'm sure your young readers' words of encouragement could make him realize that we're all pulling for that first step.

Please, won't many, many people write to: Timothy Copeland, Kessler Institute of Rehabilitation, Pleasant Valley Way, West Orange, New Jersey, 07052 — A FRIEND OF THE FAMILY

RAP:

I always said I'd never have sex with a guy unless I was truly in love. I thought I was. Jim and I have been together for five months, and I'm so mixed up I hate myself and sometimes even him, but I stay with him because if I admitted I never loved him, then it would just have been an ugly affair and I'd have thrown away something I valued for nothing.

Jim treats me rottener and rottener. When he isn't being terribly jealous and bossy, he ignores me.

I guess we'll end up married because if we didn't, I'd feel too guilty. I've hated this sneaking around and deceiving my folks. I'm just not like other girls who think sex is okay with a friend. It has to be complete love to be right, and how to you make things right again if you aren't in love? — SORRY AND GUILTY

SORRY AND GUILTY:

You sound like the kind of defeatist who would say, "I guess I'll stay in a rotten marriage" just because you made the mistake of choosing the wrong man.

Stop punishing yourself. You two were probably in love once, but feelings change, especially when guilt and possessiveness take over. If it's finished — leave, and don't look back. — HELEN

SORRY AND GUILTY:

Lots of people these days get a "divorce" without the wedding. No mistake is fatal (or unforgivable) if you learn from it, and don't keep making it long after you know you should have quit. — SUE

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm 15 and my boyfriend (18) is in the Air Force in South Carolina. A friend of ours (boy) is going down to see him when school's out and wants me to come along. We'll be there two weeks.

My mother is against this, but said she would abid by your decisions. Sue, I hope you try to persuade your mother if she needs persuasion. Whatever, thanks. — HOPEFUL MASSACHUSETTS GIRL

DEAR HOPEFUL:

Sorry, but you get a solid "No" vote from the Bottels. Even if I could persuade my mother, I wouldn't try. — SUE

SEW SIMPLE

The New Sleeves Bring Protests

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I like to keep up with the latest fashion and yet I feel that some of the styles are just not appropriate for a woman of my age. I am wondering about the sleeves with the puffed look at the cap instead of the smooth sleeve I am used to wearing. I have found some patterns I really like, but they too have the sleeves I don't like. Can I change the sleeve?

MRS. F. W.

DEAR MRS. F. W.,

Yes, you can change the sleeves. Be sure the armhole is cut the same for both garments, then simply use another pattern for the sleeves only. Usually, the same size pattern made by the same pattern company will have the same armhole. You must also check the front and back notches to be sure they correspond with the notches on the sleeve you are using.

A pattern is simply a basic design to begin with. As you sew more and more, you will realize it is not difficult to change collars, skirts or any other part of your garment. This is part of the fun of making your own clothes.

"With the shirt dresses so popular today, I found that when I wore the chain necklaces as an accessory, they always pulled my collars out of shape.

"I devised a way to keep the collar in perfect shape and still wear my favorite chains. I sew a hook (from a set of hook and eyes) several inches each side of my center back, on the neckline seam under my collar. These hooks will hold the chain in position under the collar and will not show if you don't wear a necklace."

DEAR EUNICE,

I bought a piece of fabric that looked like linen, however, it was a rayon and marked washable. Since the fabric was white with a print, I decided to wet it first before cutting. Am I ever glad I did, it did shrink two inches in the width and I was unable to get the pattern I had selected out of the yardage I purchased. What is your rule on pre-shrinking fabric?

MRS. L. E.

DEAR MRS. L. E.,

Your question is a timely one with summer wardrobes in the making. I can't stress the importance of pre-shrinking any and all fabrics that you intend to wash.

If you intend putting them in the dryer, you must also place your new fabric in the dryer.

It is wise to purchase a little extra fabric when selecting any that will be washed. The shrinkage factor doesn't have anything to do with the quality of fabric, however, as a rule, the less you pay for it, the more you can expect it to shrink.

This rule of pre-shrinking also applies to your zippers, any type of trim, underlinings and interfacings. It is an extra bother that we all hate to contend with. However, nothing is more discouraging than to complete a garment and not be able to wear it after it has been washed.

DEAR EUNICE,

My daughter will be married this winter, and I would love to make her wedding gown. However, she will be away until just before the wedding. What would be the best way to be sure the gown will fit her without last minute changes?

MRS. R.P.P.

DEAR MRS. R.P.P.,

I will give you a suggestion that I have given many brides-to-be and they have thanked me many times over. Not only will you have a guide to the fitting, but also, she can see if the pattern she selected is really the one she likes for her wedding gown. Often, pictures can be deceiving.

Plan to make the exact dress in another fabric. In your case, choose a print cotton or some fabric that she can wear, instead of making it out of a dull muslin. It won't look like a wedding gown because of the fabric you choose. Make any changes necessary for a perfect fit. It isn't necessary to make it full length for your sample dress. Brides usually lose a little weight right before the wedding. She can try the dress on periodically and let you know if any changes must be made.

This idea is also perfect for any type of gown you are considering. If you plan to spend quite a lot of money for your fabric and just aren't sure about the pattern, it's always safer to have a trial run by making the same pattern in another fabric. The two dresses will never look alike and it's cheap insurance.

The Question Of Vegetarian Diets

NEW YORK (UPI) — Can you kill or hurt yourself by taking up a vegetarian diet?

The "Medical Letter" addressed itself to the question and came to the conclusion that if patients adopt vegetarian diets, physicians can help them to protect their health by prescribing vitamin B12 and encouraging them to drink milk or eat cheese.

Letters Would Go A Long Way In Cheering Up Paralyzed Boy

DEAR RAP:

I wonder if your readers could help cheer a little paralyzed boy.

It's been six months since Timothy Copeland's accident. Last October he fell from a tree, fracturing his spine. Since then he's had two operations and a bone graft. Doctors say the longer there is no sensation in his legs, the less chance there is that he'll ever walk again.

Nevertheless the brave 8-year-old knows he'll make it. He asked for (and received) a new bicycle for Christmas. It's standing in his room, waiting for the time when he'll be able to ride to basketball and baseball again.

But Timothy can't help feeling lonely. He's in a therapy center through the week and only gets home on weekends. Letters would make the time go much faster — and I'm sure your young readers' words of encouragement could make him realize that we're all pulling for that first step.

Please, won't many, many people write to: Timothy Copeland, Kessler Institute of Rehabilitation, Pleasant Valley Way, West Orange, New Jersey, 07052 — A FRIEND OF THE FAMILY

RAP:

I always said I'd never have sex with a guy unless I was truly in love. I thought I was. Jim and I have been together for five months, and I'm so mixed up I hate myself and sometimes even him, but I stay with him because if I admitted I never loved him, then it would just have been an ugly affair and I'd have thrown away something I valued for nothing.

Jim treats me rottener and rottener. When he isn't being terribly jealous and bossy, he ignores me.

I guess we'll end up married because if we didn't, I'd feel too guilty. I've hated this sneaking around and deceiving my folks. I'm just not like other girls who think sex is okay with a friend. It has to be complete love to be right, and how to you make things right again if you aren't in love? — SORRY AND GUILTY

SORRY AND GUILTY:

You sound like the kind of defeatist who would say, "I guess I'll stay in a rotten marriage" just because you made the mistake of choosing the wrong man.

Stop punishing yourself. You two were probably in love once, but feelings change, especially when guilt and possessiveness take over. If it's finished — leave, and don't look back. — HELEN

SORRY AND GUILTY:

Lots of people these days get a "divorce" without the wedding. No mistake is fatal (or unforgivable) if you learn from it, and don't keep making it long after you know you should have quit. — SUE

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm 15 and my boyfriend (18) is in the Air Force in South Carolina. A friend of ours (boy) is going down to see him when school's out and wants me to come along. We'll be there two weeks.

My mother is against this, but said she would abid by your decisions. Sue, I hope you try to persuade your mother if she needs persuasion. Whatever, thanks. — HOPEFUL MASSACHUSETTS GIRL

DEAR HOPEFUL:

Sorry, but you get a solid "No" vote from the Bottels. Even if I could persuade my mother, I wouldn't try. — SUE

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I like to keep up with the latest fashion and yet I feel that some of the styles are just not appropriate for a woman of my age. I am wondering about the sleeves with the puffed look at the cap instead of the smooth sleeve I am used to wearing. I have found some patterns I really like, but they too have the sleeves I don't like. Can I change the sleeve?

MRS. F. W.

DEAR MRS. F. W.,

Yes, you can change the sleeves. Be sure the armhole is cut the same for both garments, then simply use another pattern for the sleeves only. Usually, the same size pattern made by the same pattern company will have the same armhole. You must also check the front and back notches to be sure they correspond with the notches on the sleeve you are using.

A pattern is simply a basic design to begin with. As you sew more and more, you will realize it is not difficult to change collars, skirts or any other part of your garment. This is part of the fun of making your own clothes.

"With the shirt dresses so popular today, I found that when I wore the chain necklaces as an accessory, they always pulled my collars out of shape.

"I devised a way to keep the collar in perfect shape and still wear my favorite chains. I sew a hook (from a set of hook and eyes) several inches each side of my center back, on the neckline seam under my collar. These hooks will hold the chain in position under the collar and will not show if you don't wear a necklace."

DEAR EUNICE,

I bought a piece of fabric that looked like linen, however, it was a rayon and marked washable. Since the fabric was white with a print, I decided to wet it first before cutting. Am I ever glad I did, it did shrink two inches in the width and I was unable to get the pattern I had selected out of the yardage I purchased. What is your rule on pre-shrinking fabric?

MRS. L. E.

DEAR MRS. L. E.,

Your question is a timely one with summer wardrobes in the making. I can't stress the importance of pre-shrinking any and all fabrics that you intend to wash.

If you intend putting them in the dryer, you must also place your new fabric in the dryer.

It is wise to purchase a little extra fabric when selecting any that will be washed. The shrinkage factor doesn't have anything to do with the quality of fabric, however, as a rule, the less you pay for it, the more you can expect it to shrink.

This rule of pre-shrinking also applies to your zippers, any type of trim, underlinings and interfacings. It is an extra bother that we all hate to contend with. However, nothing is more discouraging than to complete a garment and not be able to wear it after it has been washed.

DEAR EUNICE,

My daughter will be married this winter, and I would love to make her wedding gown. However, she will be away until just before the wedding. What would be the best way to be sure the gown will fit her without last minute changes?

MRS. R.P.P.

DEAR MRS. R.P.P.,

I will give you a suggestion that I have given many brides-to-be and they have thanked me many times over. Not only will you have a guide to the fitting, but also, she can see if the pattern she selected is really the one she likes for her wedding gown. Often, pictures can be deceiving.

Plan to make the exact dress in another fabric. In your case, choose a print cotton or some fabric that she can wear, instead of making it out of a dull muslin. It won't look like a wedding gown because of the fabric you choose. Make any changes necessary for a perfect fit. It isn't necessary to make it full length for your sample dress. Brides usually lose a little weight right before the wedding. She can try the dress on periodically and let you know if any changes must be made.

This idea is also perfect for any type of gown you are considering. If you plan to spend quite a lot of money for your fabric and just aren't sure about the pattern, it's always safer to have a trial run by making the same pattern in another fabric. The two dresses will never look alike and it's cheap insurance.

Class Series For Expectant Parents Slated

A new series of classes for expectant parents will begin Tuesday, sponsored by the Education for Childbirth Association.

The classes will be held Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. at the offices of Gunhild Brown, registered physical therapist, 1300 South Eliseo Drive, Greenbrae.

Classes include instruction to increase understanding of pregnancy and labor, comfort in pregnancy and post-natal recovery.

Both parents are urged to attend all classes, as instruction is geared to the couple as a team, Mrs. Brown said. Women must have written permission from their physicians to attend classes. Valerie Haworth will be the instructor.

The Question Of Vegetarian Diets

The "Medical Letter" addressed itself to the question and came to the conclusion that if patients adopt vegetarian diets, physicians can help them to protect their health by prescribing vitamin B12 and encouraging them to drink milk or eat cheese.

Billboard A Modern Town Crier

By STEPHEN SILHA
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON, Mass. — It's 7:53 a.m. and bumper-to-bumper on the Southeast Expressway.

A commuter yawns as traffic comes to a halt. "What's wrong this time?"

The billboard that five seconds ago was pushing knick-knacks from a local department store comes up with an answer:

Truck breakdown in
Please keep right

Surprised, the driver inches right and moves ahead.

Situated in Boston beside what has been called New England's busiest highway — the Southeast Expressway, near its convergence with the Central Artery — Tele-Spot is a new advertising and public service venture which backers call a modern town crier.

The sign's critics say it's a traffic hazard for motorists who might be distracted; but Boston's Department of Public Works (DPW), which investigated the placement in 1972, reported they could foresee no danger in the 11-by-32-foot sign which changes its double-sided message each 15 seconds.

Since the "outdoor broadcaster" went up, the state Outdoor Advertising Board, which licenses the display, has received two letters criticizing the sign. The board has asked DPW to conduct another safety study before the license comes up for renewal in June.

Scoreboard-like, Tele-Spot offers motorists a cycle of 60 computer-operated messages. Twenty of them will always be public service, insists Jack Higgins, president of Tele-Spot of New England, Inc.

Higgins, who just came out of a career in the business forms field, has decided it is only profitable these days to mix public service with advertising. So along with invocations to buy panty hose or read the Herald-American, drivers get breaking news, emergency phone numbers, museum hours, parking advice, and where to go for tax help.

Though it glows like a marquee, the sign has no lights; disks painted with day-glo paint on one side flip at an electromagnetic signal given by the mini-computer in the sign's base. At night, floodlights illuminate the sign's messages — typed onto a teletype in a nearby office.

The system, marketed by Information Concepts, Inc., of New York, costs about $250,000 and has duplicates in Norfolk, Va., New York City, Indianapolis, and Philadelphia.

It is not similar, however, to the electronic "billboards" recently installed on the Santa Monica Freeway in Los Angeles. That system is not privately operated, but part of the highway system. It consists of a series of changeable signs at ¾-mile intervals.

Advertisers like the system here (which costs $27 a day for a four-line message) because of its flexibilty — and its ability to aim special messages at certain audiences: men during rush hours, women at midday, young people at night.

Revenue Sharing Is Short

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — California's estimated share of federal revenue-hsaring funds is $47 million less than needed under Gov. Ronald Reagan's proposed 1973-74 state budget, Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post reported yesterday.

In adddition to education, Post said the state's Medi-Cal, public and summer youth employment and solid waste programs could be affected by federal funding for the next fiscal year.

"At first glance a comparison of the President's proposed budget with expenditures in the last two years would seem to belie the protests and cries of anguish coming from state and local government officials." Post told the California Business Administration Alumni Association.

"Despite these increases there is a solid basis for distress from state and local governments in California, particularly the latter," he added. "Total budget figures do not tell the full story."

He said California's allocation under the federal education revenue-sharing program was estimated to be more than $250 million. But he added that the estimated need for such federal funds in the proposed state budget was $297.2 million, or about $47 million more than the amount of federal funds allocated to the state.

Under the new federal revenue program, Post said, education funds would be distributed mainly on a pupil population basis instead of by categorical grant-in-aid programs.

Post said preliminary information from the University of California showed the university would lose $66 million in federal funds in fiscal 1973-74 and 1974-75 under cuts in the federal budget.

Other state programs which could be affected, Post said, included:

—The California Health and Welfare Agency has estimated Medi-Cal could lose up to $289 million in federal funds.

—The termination of the Public Employment Program and the failure to fund the Summer Youth Employment program will result in a loss of $174 million.

—In the 1971-72 fiscal year, $105 million was alloted to the state under a solid waste program, but decreased to $32 million in 1972-73. In the 1973-74 fiscal year "the program will be virtually eliminated."

More Commodity Futures Trading Control Is Eyed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The administration is considering proposing a bill to bring all commodity futures trading and related services under some form of federal regulation, a government official said today.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter discussed the possibility in a speech prepared for delivery here to a meeting of the Association of Commodity Exchange Firms, Inc.

Yeutter's job includes supervision of the Commodity Exchange Authority (CEA). That agency, which supervises trading in commodity futures on 17 products including grains, has been subject to some press and congressional criticism recently for allegedly lax supervision of the volatile futures market.

Yeutter said the public and Congress can be expected to demand increased protection for people who are trading in commodity futures in increasing numbers. But probably the "most serious need for more policing today" grows out of the rapidly expanding futures markets which are not now under government regulation, he said.

The CEA now regulates trading in 17 commodities. But there is no federal regulation of futures markets in nine other agricultural and forestry products and 11 non-agricultural products including metals and foreign currencies.

"These unregulated markets (including sugar, lumber, and copper) are becoming an important segment of the economy," Yeutter said.

He said commodity exchanges must also do more self-policing. And, he added, special attention from both government and commodity exchanges is needed to handle the problem in "puts" and "calls" trading.

This type of trading involves buying and selling options on futures contracts for unregulated commodities. Yeutter said no one knows the scope of these activities, but he has received reports of firms which are "either unwilling or unable to pay customers" in puts and calls deals, leading to substantial potential customer losses.

Yeutter said a collapse of the option business would seriously damage public confidence in the entire futures market. He said the CEA has proposed a rule prohibiting registered brokers from issuing or guaranteeing puts and calls, and urged exchanges to consider tightening their own rules on option trading.

Wife Of Tovani Asks Dissolution

Janice A. Tovani, 52, has filed in Marin Superior Court to dissolve her marriage to placekicker Gordon Tovani, 46. She said irreconcilable differences developed in the 10 year marriage.

The couple was married Sept. 1, 1962, in Reno, but separated last December, according to the petition, filed Thursday.

Tovani, who claims to have made more than one million placekicks since he was 6 years old, runs an annual placekicking clinic that draws potential high school placekickers from throughout the state.

Revenue Sharing Is Short

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — California's estimated share of federal revenue-hsaring funds is $47 million less than needed under Gov. Ronald Reagan's proposed 1973-74 state budget, Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post reported yesterday.

In adddition to education, Post said the state's Medi-Cal, public and summer youth employment and solid waste programs could be affected by federal funding for the next fiscal year.

"At first glance a comparison of the President's proposed budget with expenditures in the last two years would seem to belie the protests and cries of anguish coming from state and local government officials." Post told the California Business Administration Alumni Association.

"Despite these increases there is a solid basis for distress from state and local governments in California, particularly the latter," he added. "Total budget figures do not tell the full story."

He said California's allocation under the federal education revenue-sharing program was estimated to be more than $250 million. But he added that the estimated need for such federal funds in the proposed state budget was $297.2 million, or about $47 million more than the amount of federal funds allocated to the state.

Under the new federal revenue program, Post said, education funds would be distributed mainly on a pupil population basis instead of by categorical grant-in-aid programs.

Post said preliminary information from the University of California showed the university would lose $66 million in federal funds in fiscal 1973-74 and 1974-75 under cuts in the federal budget.

Other state programs which could be affected, Post said, included:

—The California Health and Welfare Agency has estimated Medi-Cal could lose up to $289 million in federal funds.

—The termination of the Public Employment Program and the failure to fund the Summer Youth Employment program will result in a loss of $174 million.

—In the 1971-72 fiscal year, $105 million was alloted to the state under a solid waste program, but decreased to $32 million in 1972-73. In the 1973-74 fiscal year "the program will be virtually eliminated."

More Commodity Futures Trading Control Is Eyed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The administration is considering proposing a bill to bring all commodity futures trading and related services under some form of federal regulation, a government official said today.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter discussed the possibility in a speech prepared for delivery here to a meeting of the Association of Commodity Exchange Firms, Inc.

Yeutter's job includes supervision of the Commodity Exchange Authority (CEA). That agency, which supervises trading in commodity futures on 17 products including grains, has been subject to some press and congressional criticism recently for allegedly lax supervision of the volatile futures market.

Yeutter said the public and Congress can be expected to demand increased protection for people who are trading in commodity futures in increasing numbers. But probably the "most serious need for more policing today" grows out of the rapidly expanding futures markets which are not now under government regulation, he said.

The CEA now regulates trading in 17 commodities. But there is no federal regulation of futures markets in nine other agricultural and forestry products and 11 non-agricultural products including metals and foreign currencies.

"These unregulated markets (including sugar, lumber, and copper) are becoming an important segment of the economy," Yeutter said.

He said commodity exchanges must also do more self-policing. And, he added, special attention from both government and commodity exchanges is needed to handle the problem in "puts" and "calls" trading.

This type of trading involves buying and selling options on futures contracts for unregulated commodities. Yeutter said no one knows the scope of these activities, but he has received reports of firms which are "either unwilling or unable to pay customers" in puts and calls deals, leading to substantial potential customer losses.

Yeutter said a collapse of the option business would seriously damage public confidence in the entire futures market. He said the CEA has proposed a rule prohibiting registered brokers from issuing or guaranteeing puts and calls, and urged exchanges to consider tightening their own rules on option trading.

Wife Of Tovani Asks Dissolution

Janice A. Tovani, 52, has filed in Marin Superior Court to dissolve her marriage to placekicker Gordon Tovani, 46. She said irreconcilable differences developed in the 10 year marriage.

The couple was married Sept. 1, 1962, in Reno, but separated last December, according to the petition, filed Thursday.

Tovani, who claims to have made more than one million placekicks since he was 6 years old, runs an annual placekicking clinic that draws potential high school placekickers from throughout the state.

TITLE INSURANCE EXPLAINED

Since the days of the Spaniards, all California land was originally owned, controlled and recorded by some governmental body. As these lands were gradually transferred to private ownership, and property in turn changed hands over the years, certain encumbrances were sometimes involved.

This is where a title search becomes important. A title search investigates all county records relative to a piece of property, and can turn up any obscure claims that might exist, such as liens, easements, or unpaid taxes. Title Insurance is the buyer's guarantee that this title search is complete and accurate.

Your member Realtor office of the Marin County Board of Realtors can help you with any questions about Title Insurance. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. The more than 1,000 salesmen from the member offices of the Marin County Board of Realtors will be selling it for you. Your Real Estate Professionals.

TITLE INSURANCE EXPLAINED

Since the days of the Spaniards, all California land was originally owned, controlled and recorded by some governmental body. As these lands were gradually transferred to private ownership, and property in turn changed hands over the years, certain encumbrances were sometimes involved.

This is where a title search becomes important. A title search investigates all county records relative to a piece of property, and can turn up any obscure claims that might exist, such as liens, easements, or unpaid taxes. Title Insurance is the buyer's guarantee that this title search is complete and accurate.

Your member Realtor office of the Marin County Board of Realtors can help you with any questions about Title Insurance. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. The more than 1,000 salesmen from the member offices of the Marin County Board of Realtors will be selling it for you. Your Real Estate Professionals.

INFORMATION
OPERATION EVERGREEN

Dear Friends of the Outdoors,

This is just to let you know that we will be participating in OPERATION EVERGREEN '73 during Earth Week, in late April. This means we will be giving away three-year-old pine seedlings to residents of this area, Saturday, April 28.

This is an environmental improvement project sponsored by Winnebago dealers nationwide. Nearly a million young trees will be made available in the U.S. and Canada to anyone who will plant and care for them.

As business men, we realize our business depends on travelers' love of outdoors, and that responsible U.S. industries help replenish natural resources. Therefore, local persons are invited to stop by our dealership April 28 and pick up a bundle of seedlings (while they last). No gimmicks, coupons, test drives or anything else involved. We welcome area clubs who want a bundle of pines for group projects.

INFORMATION ON OPERATION EVERGREEN

Dear Friends of the Outdoors,

This is just to let you know that we will be participating in OPERATION EVERGREEN '73 during Earth Week, in late April. This means we will be giving away three-year-old pine seedlings to residents of this area, Saturday, April 28.

This is an environmental improvement project sponsored by Winnebago dealers nationwide. Nearly a million young trees will be made available in the U.S. and Canada to anyone who will plant and care for them.

As business men, we realize our business depends on travelers' love of outdoors, and that responsible U.S. industries help replenish natural resources. Therefore, local persons are invited to stop by our dealership April 28 and pick up a bundle of seedlings (while they last). No gimmicks, coupons, test drives or anything else involved. We welcome area clubs who want a bundle of pines for group projects.

'BETTER THAN 1971 CLUB'

Fox Kudos To Red-Hot Giants

Combined AP & UPI

ST. LOUIS — The San Francisco Giants, with five more victories than any other club in major league baseball at this early stage, are going so hot that their manager considers it safe to make a few laudatory comparisons.

"This is a much better ball club than in 1971," said manager Charlie Fox after the Giants beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 Friday night on Jim Barr's two-hitter. "We have better balance, a better bench, better speed, too."

In 1971, Fox's first full season piloting the Giants, San Francisco got off to an 18-5 start and went on to win the National League West with 90-72.

If the Giants can extend their current victory string to six games tonight, they also will be 18-5, with 10 out of 11 since they dropped three in a row to Cincinnati at home.

Barr, the big right-hander, beat the Cardinals last Aug. 29 while on the way to a major league record with a streak of 41 consecutive batters retired over two games. And he now has a streak of two remarkable showings in as many tries against the Cards.

Led by Bobby Bonds and Tito Fuentes, the Giants hammered Bob Gibson, 0-3, for eight of their nine hits. Fuentes extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a single and a triple and batted in three runs. Bonds had a triple, two singles and a run batted in.

Ed Goodson, out of the lineup since pulling a groin muscle last Saturday, returned to single home the Giants' first run in the first inning after Fuentes had singles and Willie McCovey walked.

Brock missed a diving catch on Bonds' looping liner in the second inning, and it went for a triple scoring Dave Rader who had singled.

In the fifth, Fuentes' triple added two more runs, bringing home Barr, who had a broken-bat single and Bonds, who also had singled.

Fuentes who drove home his third run in the seventh with a sacrifice, was praised by Fox as being "as good a second baseman as there is."

San Marin Surprises Redwood '9'

In a baseball game which grew more frenzied as the innings went by, San Marin High School scored four runs in the sixth, three more in the seventh and held off Redwood in the bottom of the seventh for an 8-5 upset victory yesterday.

The loss was the first after seven straight Marin County Athletic League triumphs for the defending champion Giants, who could be tied for first place by San Rafael (now 6-1) if the Bulldogs beat Marin Catholic tonight at 7:30 at Albert Field. San Marin is 3-5.

San Marin scored two of its seventh-inning runs on a bases-loaded error by Redwood's third baseman and the third on a single by George Hoberg, who drove in four runs and had three hits for the Mustangs including a solo homer in the fifth.

Hoberg also whacked a two-run single in the sixth, the other two runs in that frame scoring when pop flies by Marty Nagel and Rich Villa were lost in the sun and fell for hits.

Right fielder Villa was a defensive hero for San Marin, throwing out a Redwood runner at the plate in the sixth and recording an unassisted double play in the seventh when he made a rolling catch of a pop fly in short right and doubled the runner off first.

TAKE THAT, YOU FOOL

Boxer Willie Chaney (left) did by accident what many fighters have wished they could do intentionally when he smashed referee Lee Sala on the nose in a bout Thursday in Tampa, Fla. Sala moved in too quickly to break up a clinch between Chaney and John Pinney. The referee was not injured, which cannot be said of Chaney, who was TKO'd by Pinney in the fifth round.

HEFFINGTON

San Marin 'B' Swimmer Stars

Doug Heffington stole the headlines away from the varsity competitors by setting two Class B records yesterday in the Marin County Athletic League swimming meet at College of Marin.

The San Marin High School star swam the 50-yard freestyle in 23.4 and the 100 free in 52.4 to lead a contingent of eight record-setters, three in varsity and five in Class B.

Top six finishers in each race, including disqualifications, will advance to the North Coast Section Division II meet next Saturday at Diablo Valley College in Pleasant Hill.

Records in varsity competition were set by Spencer Eldred of Redwood in the 200 individual medley (2:05.3), Keith Strange of Terra Linda in the 100 breaststroke (1:01.4) and Dick Atwood of Tamalpais in the 100 back (a tie at 58.7).

Other Class B records were set by Art Morrill of San Marin in the 100 IM (56.8), Tom Schindler of Redwood in Thursday's diving competition (267.35 points on 11 dives), Terra Linda's 200 medley relay team of Steve Crow, Dan Stewart, Tom Olund and Mitch Young (1:49.6) and San Rafael's 400 free relay of Joe Dunn, Scott Hislop, Jeff Kamler and Dan Peterson (3:35.4).

Bob Patocchi of Novato was a varsity double winner in the 50 and 100 freestyles, while in Class B Kamler won the 200 free and 100 back and Morrill added the 400 free to join Heffington as double victors.

Novato Tops Tam In Baseball

Tom Conklin drove in the tying run with a single in the sixth inning and Scott Harrington singled him across for the game-winner yesterday as Novato High School took a 6-5 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory over host Tamalpais.

Conklin chased home Stan Conte, who had singled for his third hit of the game and taken third a wild pickoff throw. Gary Lash singled Conklin to third before Harrington's hit.

Novato reliever Kurt Mitchell pitched 4⅓ innings of three-hit, shutout ball to earn the victory, which gave Novato a 5-3 MCAL record, and undisputed possession of third place. Tam is 3-5.

Drake Nine Beaten By Terra Linda

Terra Linda High School erupted for five runs in the bottom of the sixth inning yesterday to take an 8-6 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory over Drake at Albert Field.

The first run scored on a bases-loaded wild pitch and the next pair when Mike DeMattel "surveyed" a two-run single barely inside the right field line. Greg Watroba singled DeMattei to second, Lee Peterson singled him home for the go-ahead run, and following an intentional walk to Jon Loberg, Buck McCusker hit a sacrifice fly for an insurance tally.

A's Mangual Surprises Himself Against Orioles

Combined AP & UPI

OAKLAND — Designated hitter Angel Mangual surprised even himself Friday night.

He hammered a line drive home run over the right field fence to give the Oakland Athletics a 12-inning, 4-3 victory over the Batimore Orioles.

Mangual, who says he is not a home run hitter, was surprised that the ball went out of the park. "I was lucky," he said. "Sometimes I am surprised I am so strong."

"I don't like the job," said Mangual, "but I have to do it."

The victory went to relief pitcher Horacio Pina, who blanked the Orioles for the last 4⅔ innings after replacing starter John Odom.

Pina, who came to the A's in a winter trade with the Texas Rangers for first baseman Mike Epstein, had the winning run on second base in each of the last four innings. Each time he wriggled out of trouble.

The most serious threat by the Orioles came in the 10th inning when a single by Brooks Robinson, a stolen base by pinch runner Al Bumbry and an intentional walk put runners on first and second with one out.

Tommy Davis, the designated hitter, was the next batter and hit a hard line drive to center field. The runners were going with the pitch and Bill North speared the liner and threw to second base for an inning-ending double play.

All the runs in the game came on homers.

Boog Powell hit a two-run shot to put the Orioles on top in the third inning. Joe Rudi tied the score with a 410-foot blast over center field with Bert Campaneris on base in the sixth inning.

Gene Tenace hit his fifth homer of the season to give Oakland a 3-2 lead in the seventh inning, but Don Baylor homered in the eighth to tie the score again.

Odom had control problems and walked eight batters and had a wild pitch in the 7⅓ innings he pitched. He still is winless for the season.

The victory marked the first time this season the A's have won two straight. They had six

Overconfidence Costs Knicks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Overconfidence may have closed the cash register on further New York Knick playoff payments.

The Knicks jumped off to a quick 3-1 series lead against a Boston team playing with a "one-armed" John Havlicek, but couldn't nail the clincher in the next two games and now are down to the final game of the Eastern Conference finals Sunday at 11 a.m. (PDT). The game will be televised on Channel 7.

Dave Cowens, whose octopus arms and deadly outside shot gave Boston the best won-lost record in the National Basketball Association during the regular season, scored 26 points Friday night as the Celtics beat New York 110-100 to tie the series at 3-3.

"Dave gets stronger and better each game," said Havlicek after the red-haired pivotman collected 14 rebounds and completely bottled up Willis Reed and Jerry Lucas under the boards.

Cowens picked up the scoring slack after Jo Jo White hit 17 points in the first half but was held to only eight after intermission.

Walt Frazier and Earl Monroe tried to carry the New York load with 29 and 22 points, respectively, but their 41-point total fell short of the 51 by Cowens and White—the exact margin of Boston's 10 point victory.

"The Celtics played very good team defense and we played very poor team offense," shrugged Knick Coach Red Holzman. "Cowens plays so well, so often, you can't really say this was his best effort."

Cowens scored three baskets in a 12-0 Boston surge late in the game that beat the Knicks, who were held scoreless from the 5:14 mark to Dave DeBusschere's basket with 1:01 left. The Knicks held their last lead at 96-94 but the Celts outscored New York 16-4 the rest of the way.

Fox Kudos To Red-Hot Giants

Combined AP & UPI

ST. LOUIS — The San Francisco Giants, with five more victories than any other club in major league baseball at this early stage, are going so hot that their manager considers it safe to make a few laudatory comparisons.

"This is a much better ball club than in 1971," said manager Charlie Fox after the Giants beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 Friday night on Jim Barr's two-hitter. "We have better balance, a better bench, better speed, too."

In 1971, Fox's first full season piloting the Giants, San Francisco got off to an 18-5 start and went on to win the National League West with 90-72.

If the Giants can extend their current victory string to six games tonight, they also will be 18-5, with 10 out of 11 since they dropped three in a row to Cincinnati at home.

Barr, the big right-hander, beat the Cardinals last Aug. 29 while on the way to a major league record with a streak of 41 consecutive batters retired over two games. And he now has a streak of two remarkable showings in as many tries against the Cards.

Led by Bobby Bonds and Tito Fuentes, the Giants hammered Bob Gibson, 0-3, for eight of their nine hits. Fuentes extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a single and a triple and batted in three runs. Bonds had a triple, two singles and a run batted in.

Ed Goodson, out of the lineup since pulling a groin muscle last Saturday, returned to single home the Giants' first run in the first inning after Fuentes had singles and Willie McCovey walked.

Brock missed a diving catch on Bonds' looping liner in the second inning, and it went for a triple scoring Dave Rader who had singled.

In the fifth, Fuentes' triple added two more runs, bringing home Barr, who had a broken-bat single and Bonds, who also had singled.

Fuentes who drove home his third run in the seventh with a sacrifice, was praised by Fox as being "as good a second baseman as there is."

San Marin 'B' Swimmer Stars

Doug Heffington stole the headlines away from the varsity competitors by setting two Class B records yesterday in the Marin County Athletic League swimming meet at College of Marin.

The San Marin High School star swam the 50-yard freestyle in 23.4 and the 100 free in 52.4 to lead a contingent of eight record-setters, three in varsity and five in Class B.

Top six finishers in each race, including disqualifications, will advance to the North Coast Section Division II meet next Saturday at Diablo Valley College in Pleasant Hill.

Records in varsity competition were set by Spencer Eldred of Redwood in the 200 individual medley (2:05.3), Keith Strange of Terra Linda in the 100 breaststroke (1:01.4) and Dick Atwood of Tamalpais in the 100 back (a tie at 58.7).

Other Class B records were set by Art Morrill of San Marin in the 100 IM (56.8), Tom Schindler of Redwood in Thursday's diving competition (267.35 points on 11 dives), Terra Linda's 200 medley relay team of Steve Crow, Dan Stewart, Tom Olund and Mitch Young (1:49.6) and San Rafael's 400 free relay of Joe Dunn, Scott Hislop, Jeff Kamler and Dan Peterson (3:35.4).

Bob Patocchi of Novato was a varsity double winner in the 50 and 100 freestyles, while in Class B Kamler won the 200 free and 100 back and Morrill added the 400 free to join Heffington as double victors.

Novato Tops Tam In Baseball

Tom Conklin drove in the tying run with a single in the sixth inning and Scott Harrington singled him across for the game-winner yesterday as Novato High School took a 6-5 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory over host Tamalpais.

Conklin chased home Stan Conte, who had singled for his third hit of the game and taken third a wild pickoff throw. Gary Lash singled Conklin to third before Harrington's hit.

Novato reliever Kurt Mitchell pitched 4⅓ innings of three-hit, shutout ball to earn the victory, which gave Novato a 5-3 MCAL record, and undisputed possession of third place. Tam is 3-5.

San Marin Surprises Redwood '9'

In a baseball game which grew more frenzied as the innings went by, San Marin High School scored four runs in the sixth, three more in the seventh and held off Redwood in the bottom of the seventh for an 8-5 upset victory yesterday.

The loss was the first after seven straight Marin County Athletic League triumphs for the defending champion Giants, who could be tied for first place by San Rafael (now 6-1) if the Bulldogs beat Marin Catholic tonight at 7:30 at Albert Field. San Marin is 3-5.

San Marin scored two of its seventh-inning runs on a bases-loaded error by Redwood's third baseman and the third on a single by George Hoberg, who drove in four runs and had three hits for the Mustangs including a solo homer in the fifth.

Hoberg also whacked a two-run single in the sixth, the other two runs in that frame scoring when pop flies by Marty Nagel and Rich Villa were lost in the sun and fell for hits.

Right fielder Villa was a defensive hero for San Marin, throwing out a Redwood runner at the plate in the sixth and recording an unassisted double play in the seventh when he made a rolling catch of a pop fly in short right and doubled the runner off first.

Drake Nine Beaten By Terra Linda

Terra Linda High School erupted for five runs in the bottom of the sixth inning yesterday to take an 8-6 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory over Drake at Albert Field.

The first run scored on a bases-loaded wild pitch and the next pair when Mike DeMattei "surveyed" a two-run single barely inside the right field line. Greg Watroba singled DeMattei to second, Lee Peterson singled him home for the go-ahead run, and following an intentional walk to Jon Loberg, Buck McCusker hit a sacrifice fly for an insurance tally.

TAKE THAT, YOU FOOL

Boxer Willie Chaney (left) did by accident what many fighters have wished they could do intentionally when he smashed referee Lee Sala on the nose in a bout Thursday in Tampa, Fla. Sala moved in too quickly to break up a clinch between Chaney and John Pinney. The referee was not injured, which cannot be said of Chaney, who was TKO'd by Pinney in the fifth round.

A's Mangual Surprises Himself Against Orioles

Combined AP & UPI

OAKLAND — Designated hitter Angel Mangual surprised even himself Friday night.

He hammered a line drive home run over the right field fence to give the Oakland Athletics a 12-inning, 4-3 victory over the Batimore Orioles.

Mangual, who says he is not a home run hitter, was surprised that the ball went out of the park. "I was lucky," he said. "Sometimes I am surprised I am so strong."

"I don't like the job," said Mangual, "but I have to do it."

The victory went to relief pitcher Horacio Pina, who blanked the Orioles for the last 4⅔ innings after replacing starter John Odom.

Pina, who came to the A's in a winter trade with the Texas Rangers for first baseman Mike Epstein, had the winning run on second base in each of the last four innings. Each time he wriggled out of trouble.

The most serious threat by the Orioles came in the 10th inning when a single by Brooks Robinson, a stolen base by pinch runner Al Bumbry and an intentional walk put runners on first and second with one out.

Tommy Davis, the designated hitter, was the next batter and hit a hard line drive to center field. The runners were going with the pitch and Bill North speared the liner and threw to second base for an inning-ending double play.

All the runs in the game came on homers.

Boog Powell hit a two-run shot to put the Orioles on top in the third inning. Joe Rudi tied the score with a 410-foot blast over center field with Bert Campaneris on base in the sixth inning.

Gene Tenace hit his fifth homer of the season to give Oakland a 3-2 lead in the seventh inning, but Don Baylor homered in the eighth to tie the score again.

Odom had control problems and walked eight batters and had a wild pitch in the 7⅓ innings he pitched. He still is winless for the season.

The victory marked the first time this season the A's have won two straight. They had six

Overconfidence Costs Knicks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Overconfidence may have closed the cash register on further New York Knick playoff payments.

The Knicks jumped off to a quick 3-1 series lead against a Boston team playing with a "one-armed" John Havlicek, but couldn't nail the clincher in the next two games and now are down to the final game of the Eastern Conference finals Sunday at 11 a.m. (PDT). The game will be televised on Channel 7.

Dave Cowens, whose octopus arms and deadly outside shot gave Boston the best won-lost record in the National Basketball Association during the regular season, scored 26 points Friday night as the Celtics beat New York 110-100 to tie the series at 3-3.

"Dave gets stronger and better each game," said Havlicek after the red-haired pivotman collected 14 rebounds and completely bottled up Willis Reed and Jerry Lucas under the boards.

Cowens picked up the scoring slack after Jo Jo White hit 17 points in the first half but was held to only eight after intermission.

Walt Frazier and Earl Monroe tried to carry the New York load with 29 and 22 points, respectively, but their 41-point total fell short of the 51 by Cowens and White—the exact margin of Boston's 10 point victory.

"The Celtics played very good team defense and we played very poor team offense," shrugged Knick Coach Red Holzman. "Cowens plays so well, so often, you can't really say this was his best effort."

Cowens scored three baskets in a 12-0 Boston surge late in the game that beat the Knicks, who were held scoreless from the 5:14 mark to Dave DeBusschere's basket with 1:01 left. The Knicks held their last lead at 96-94 but the Celts outscored New York 16-4 the rest of the way.

Peace Breaks Out Among Warring Gal Net Groups

Combined AP & UPI

NEW YORK — Peace.

Sooner or later it comes to all warring factions — in government, politics and, yes, even in sports.

And yesterday it came to the world of women's tennis when Walter Elcock, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and Joseph F. Cullman III, chairman of the board of Philip Morris, announced an agreement to end the lengthy impasse between the "Maverick" Virginia Slims circuit of Billie Jean King, Gladys Heldman and Margaret Court and the USLTA-sanctioned group of Chris Evert, Virginia Wade and Evonne Goolagong.

Under the new agreement, which will be reviewed by all the players this weekend, the USLTA will not sanction Mrs. Heldman's Virginia Slims circuit and thus give both groups the opportunity to compete against each other with the blessings of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, the ultimate governing body of the much-maligned sport.

Of particular significance, however, is the fact that Mrs. King will now be able to defend her Wimbledon, Forest Hills and French Open titles which she had heretofore jeopardized by jumping to the unsanctioned Virginia Slims circuit.

More Tennis

GOTEBORG, Sweden — Top-seeded Stan Smith, of Sea Pines, S.C., yesterday gained the semi-finals of the $50,000 Swedish Pro championships by defeating Sweden's Ove Bengtson 6-2, 6-4 after Dick Stockton, of Port Washington, N.Y. and Cliff Richey of Sarasota, Fla., had been eliminated in the quarterfinals.

DENVER — Roscoe Tanner, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., yesterday beat Tom Leonard, of Los Angeles, 6-3, 6-1 in the quarter-finals of the WTC United Bank.

Football

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco 49ers have signed their 14th and 15th round picks of the 1973 National Football League draft.

Basketball

SAN FRANCISCO — Golden State Warriors' center Nate Thurmond has been released from St. Mary's Hospital.

Thurmond was confined to the hospital for two days with a mild concussion suffered in the recent National Basketball Association playoffs with the Los Angeles Lakers.

A hospital spokesman said Thurmond, who was released yesterday, was in satisfactory condition but will need a lot of rest.

SALT LAKE CITY — The Soviet Union national basketball team won its first of eight games on a United States tour, beating a squad of Utah College All-Stars here 72-63 last night.

Boxing

The 25-year-old Quintas collapsed unconscious after losing a unanimous 10-round decision — only his third defeat in 27 fights — to Chile's Renato Garcia at the Olympic Auditorium here Thursday night.

Hockey

BOSTON — Dallas Smith, Boston Bruins defenseman, yesterday signed a multi-year contract with the National Hockey League club, ending speculation he would soon jump to the rival World Hockey Association.

Golf

PINEHURST, N.C. — Beth Parry of Mobile, Ala., won the North and South Women's Amateur Golf Championship yesterday, downing defending champion Jane Booth, 6 and 5.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Sandra Palmer yesterday took the first round lead in $33,000 Ladies Professional Golfers Association Birmingham Classic with a two-under-par 70.

No-Hitter Changes Busby Into A 'Name'

third by striking out Dick McAuliffe and getting Norm Cash to fly out. He walked the leadoff batter in the ninth but Rich Reese lined into a double play.

It was that kind of game. The Tigers hit several liners but they were all at the Royals, who didn't have to make any spectacular plays to preserve the gem. Busby walked two batters in the fourth but Gates Brown grounded into a double play.

Busby, now 2-2, has been bothered by a stiff shoulder and was making his first start in a week. He had lasted only one inning against Chicago in that start in which he gave up three runs.

In the other American League games, Texas downed Milwaukee 4-2, Oakland turned back Baltimore 4-3 in 12 innings and Cleveland beat California 6-2. The Chicago at Boston and Minnesota at New York games were rained out.

In the National League, Chicago downed San Diego 10-2, San Francisco blanked St. Louis 5-0, Atlanta topped New York 2-0, Philadelphia nipped Cincinnati 3-1 and Houston topped Montreal 6-5 in 11 innings. The Los Angeles at Pittsburgh, game was rained out.

Cleveland's Milt Wilcox tried to match Busby's no-hitter as he pitched seven innings of no-hit ball before Jim Spencer led off the eighth with a single. Wilcox gave up two other hits and a run while settling for a three-hit victory as the Indians downed California.

Aaron won a battle with Seaver Friday night as the Atlanta star blasted his 678th career homer to help the Braves defeat the New York Mets and the loss touched off an outburst of anger in the usually easy-going Seaver.

Seaver, usually cooperative with the press, refused to talk to reporters after the game as the Mets once again failed to score for him.

"Just get away from me, will you please," Seaver said to one writer who tried to interview him. "I might start yelling and I don't want to start yelling."

Confident Dickson In Golf Lead

But to Bob Dickson it would make little difference if all three of them were just a stroke behind him going into today's third round of the $150,000 Byron Nelson Classic. Dickson is confident he could tame just about anyone.

It wasn't like that a year ago when Dickson was struggling along trying to find the kind of game many expected of him from the time he turned pro.

But the lean former champion of both the American and British amateurs turned it around last January with a win in the San Diego open and he has played steadily enough to maintain a No. 8 position in money earnings with $55,629.

Dickson jumped in front midway through the Nelson event Friday with a four-under 66 over the 6,932-yard, par 35-35—70 Preston Trail Golf Club course and that was good enough for a one-stroke margin over first round leader Don Bies.

Native Texan Roy Pace, Bert Yancey, Australian David Graham, Dan Sikes and 53-year-old Julius Boros where in at 138, two under par and three strokes off the lead. Lanny Wadkins, Tom Weiskopf and Rod Curl were each at 139. Arnold Palmer stayed in the running by turning in a 70 for a 141. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the cut with a 143.

Trevino, who suffered through an embarrassing 79 during Thursday's bad weather, said the pain he experienced during that round had been diagnosed as a severely pulled shoulder muscle

Manager Dick Williams of the A's changed his pitching plans for the final game of the series Sunday. Vida Blue is unable to pitch because of a knee injury and Rollie Fingers was scheduled to replace him. However, Williams now will keep Fingers in the bullpen and Jim (Catfish) Hunter will work Sunday with just two days rest.

In today's game it was Ken Holtzman, 3-1, pitching for the A's against Jim Palmer, 0-1, of Baltimore. Dave McNally, 3-2, will pitch for the Orioles Sunday.

Champion Johnson Knocks Out Ketchel

COLMA, Calif. — Jack Johnson, the recently crowned heavyweight boxing champion is making a defense of his title today.

"The Michigan Assassin," Stanley Ketchel, has challenged the black champion and there are a lot of people who think Ketchel will whip Johnson.

The unusual fact about this fight is that Ketchel is the current middleweight titleholder. Johnson will outweigh him by approximately 40 pounds.

Nevertheless, Ketchel is a devastating puncher and has vowed to take the crown away from the controverisal champion.

Johnson is either being overly respectful of his opponent or he is just toying with him. Ketchel is the aggressor but Johnson ties him up as soon as Stanley gets inside. At long range only an occasional Johnson jab is landing.

The big champion pushes himself up slowly. Ketchel charges in for the kill. He swings. Johnson swings. They both land. They both fall!

Johnson landed a smashing right hand on the chin of the charging Ketchel. Stanley's punch landed harmlessly on Johnson. Ketchel fell as if shot by a gun. Johnson stumbled over the fallen challenger and landed by him on the canvas.

Johnson is back on his feet now as the referee counts over the unconscious "Michigan Assassin." He will not rise. He has been knocked out cold in an incredible finish.

Tomales High School scored an unearned run in the fourth inning yesterday to beat host Point Arena, 2-1, and take over sole possession of first place in the North Central League II baseball race.

In other local high school diamond action yesterday, Petaluma took a 7-2 North Bay League game from host Vintage 7 of Napa and St. Vincent of Petaluma lost an NCL II clash, 2-1, to host Upper Lake. Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park was idle.

Tomales (5-1) got the only runs it needed in the fourth inning on a two-out triple by Mike Camp, a double by Andy Bordessa which scored camp and an error by the Point Arena second baseman on a Ken Kehoe grounder which let Bordessa in with the winning run.

With the NBL win over Vintage, Petaluma remained one-half game behind co-leaders Napa and Vallejo.

The Trojans scored their runs in bunches, striking for three runs in the second inning and four more in the fourth. Mike Maselli delivered the big blow in both innings with two-run doubles in each.

Upper Lake scored two unearned runs in the sixth inning to overtake St. Vincent and drop the Mustangs one game behind Tomales (4-2) in the NCL II title race.

De Young Heads Field In Men's Masters Tourney

By RON LENT

Defending champion Terry De Young of Greenbrae leads a 40-man field into the Marin County Men's Masters Bowling Tournament opening this weekend at Greenbrae Lanes.

De Young, a 23-year-old left-hander, is seeded in the semi-finals — unlike his rivals who will be scrambling for berths when qualifying commences tonight at 7 o'clock. Marin County Men's Bowling Association members will bowl a five-game qualifying round tonight or tomorrow at 1 p.m. or 7, depending on assigned time.

The top 15 bowlers, plus De Young, will advance to the semi-finals May 5 and 6 and bowl 15 match games, with results of their matches, plus total pins, combining for the qualifying scores. The top five will then advance to the May 6 evening finals at 7 o'clock where the fifth man will bowl against the fourth, the survivor bowling the third man, and so on until the championship match against the top qualifier.

SO NEAR, SO FAR. Ray Miller missed a triplicate by one pin last Friday night in the North Bay Classic at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. He bowled 223, 223 and 222 for a 668.

A CHAMPION. Hamilton Air Force Base's Dave Drayer won the all-events competition in the Air Defense Command Championships at Colorado Springs, Colo. The Marinite recorded 3,694 pins over 18 games Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on Ent Air Force Base to win one of six ADC spots in the All-Air Force kegler tourney starting Tuesday at Lockbourne Air Force Base in Columbus, Ohio.

TERRY DE YOUNG

Mike Tauscher topped the men with a 636 series, edging Rich Epidendio by 13 pins. On the distaff side, Marilyn Epidendio, Rich's wife, was number one. The runnerup — Penny Tauscher, Mike's spouse.

SIX OFFICERS from the Marin County Women's Bowling Association will attend the Woman's International Bowling Congress at Las Vegas opening tomorrow and ending Wednesday.

Key To Stanley Cup May Be Goaltending

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Montreal Canadiens and the Chicago Black Hawks open the best-of-seven Stanley Cup series here Sunday and goaltending could be the deciding factor for the winning team.

Esposito goes into the finals against Montreal's sharpshooters with a 1.55 goals-gainst average with eight wins and three losses in the quarter and semifinal series. He said he hopes his record holds up.

"I'm on a hot streak right now," Esposito said, "but who knows how long that will last. I feel pretty good now and if our team plays the same type of hockey we played against New York, I'm confident we'll have no trouble at all."

Montreal set a National Hockey League record with only 10 losses in regular season play and much of the credit goes to Dryden. The lanky goaltender came out of the quarter and semifinal series with an 8-3 win-loss record, but his goals against average was 2.69.

Dryden is making no predictions on the outcome of the series against the Hawks but he has cautioned his teammates Chicago is not going to be any easy team to beat.

"They are smart and they are sudden," Dryden said, "and their centers Stan Mikita and Pit Martin are very good. Their wings, Jim Pappin and Dennis Hull, are very dangerous and they have a good defense."

Chicago Coach Billy Reay apparently has more respect for the high-flying Canadians than his goaltender. He has refused to comment on reports he will be moving up in the Chicago organization next year, telling newsmen he is now concentrating fully on the series.

"I don't even want to discuss that," the 54-year-old veteran coach said when asked about reports he will be named the Hawks' next general manager or hold the dual position as coach-general manager.

Montreal and Chicago have met for the Stanley Cup four times in the past and the Hawks have yet to emerge a winner. Their last encounter in the Championship final was two seasons ago. Henri Richard decided that series in the seventh game when he scored a goal for Montreal to give them a 3-2 win.

A veteran of 18 years in the NHL, Richard had dismissed reports of his retiring and said he is concentrating only on being a member of the Stanley Cup winner for a record 11th time. Montreal has won the cup 15 times.

The Canadiens did not fare well against Chicago during regular season play, winning only two games and losing three.

The second game of the Stanley Cup series will be played in Montreal Tuesday night. The two clubs will return to Chicago for games Thursday night and Sunday, May 6.

Peace Breaks Out Among Warring Gal Net Groups

Combined AP & UPI

NEW YORK — Peace.

Sooner or later it comes to all warring factions — in government, politics and, yes, even in sports.

And yesterday it came to the world of women's tennis when Walter Elcock, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and Joseph F. Cullman III, chairman of the board of Philip Morris, announced an agreement to end the lengthy impasse between the "Maverick" Virginia Slims circuit of Billie Jean King, Gladys Heldman and Margaret Court and the USLTA-sanctioned group of Chris Evert, Virginia Wade and Evonne Goolagong.

Under the new agreement, which will be reviewed by all the players this weekend, the USLTA will not sanction Mrs. Heldman's Virginia Slims circuit and thus give both groups the opportunity to compete against each other with the blessings of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, the ultimate governing body of the much-maligned sport.

Of particular significance, however, is the fact that Mrs. King will now be able to defend her Wimbledon, Forest Hills and French Open titles which she had heretofore jeopardized by jumping to the unsanctioned Virginia Slims circuit.

More Tennis

GOTEBORG, Sweden — Top-seeded Stan Smith, of Sea Pines, S.C., yesterday gained the semi-finals of the $50,000 Swedish Pro championships by defeating Sweden's Ove Bengtson 6-2, 6-4 after Dick Stockton, of Port Washington, N.Y. and Cliff Richey of Sarasota, Fla., had been eliminated in the quarterfinals.

DENVER — Roscoe Tanner, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., yesterday beat Tom Leonard, of Los Angeles, 6-3, 6-1 in the quarter-finals of the WTC United Bank.

Football

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco 49ers have signed their 14th and 15th round picks of the 1973 National Football League draft.

Basketball

Thurmond was confined to the hospital for two days with a mild concussion suffered in the recent National Basketball Association playoffs with the Los Angeles Lakers.

A hospital spokesman said Thurmond, who was released yesterday, was in satisfactory condition but will need a lot of rest.

SALT LAKE CITY — The Soviet Union national basketball team won its first of eight games on a United States tour, beating a squad of Utah College All-Stars here 72-63 last night.

The 25-year-old Quintas collapsed unconscious after losing a unanimous 10-round decision — only his third defeat in 27 fights — to Chile's Renato Garcia at the Olympic Auditorium here Thursday night.

Hockey

BOSTON — Dallas Smith, Boston Bruins defenseman, yesterday signed a multi-year contract with the National Hockey League club, ending speculation he would soon jump to the rival World Hockey Association.

Champion Johnson Knocks Out Ketchel

COLMA, Calif. — Jack Johnson, the recently crowned heavyweight boxing champion is making a defense of his title today.

"The Michigan Assassin," Stanley Ketchel, has challenged the black champion and there are a lot of people who think Ketchel will whip Johnson.

The unusual fact about this fight is that Ketchel is the current middleweight titleholder. Johnson will outweigh him by approximately 40 pounds.

Nevertheless, Ketchel is a devastating puncher and has vowed to take the crown away from the controverisal champion.

Johnson is either being overly respectful of his opponent or he is just toying with him. Ketchel is the aggressor but Johnson ties him up as soon as Stanley gets inside. At long range only an occasional Johnson jab is landing.

The big champion pushes himself up slowly. Ketchel charges in for the kill. He swings. Johnson swings. They both land. They both fall!

Johnson landed a smashing right hand on the chin of the charging Ketchel. Stanley's punch landed harmlessly on Johnson. Ketchel fell as if shot by a gun. Johnson stumbled over the fallen challenger and landed by him on the canvas.

Johnson is back on his feet now as the referee counts over the unconscious "Michigan Assassin." He will not rise. He has been knocked out cold in an incredible finish.

De Young, a 23-year-old left-hander, is seeded in the semi-finals — unlike his rivals who will be scrambling for berths when qualifying commences tonight at 7 o'clock. Marin County Men's Bowling Association members will bowl a five-game qualifying round tonight or tomorrow at 1 p.m. or 7, depending on assigned time.

The top 15 bowlers, plus De Young, will advance to the semi-finals May 5 and 6 and bowl 15 match games, with results of their matches, plus total pins, combining for the qualifying scores. The top five will then advance to the May 6 evening finals at 7 o'clock where the fifth man will bowl against the fourth, the survivor bowling the third man, and so on until the championship match against the top qualifier.

SO NEAR, SO FAR. Ray Miller missed a triplicate by one pin last Friday night in the North Bay Classic at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. He bowled 223, 223 and 222 for a 668.

A CHAMPION. Hamilton Air Force Base's Dave Drayer won the all-events competition in the Air Defense Command Championships at Colorado Springs, Colo. The Marinite recorded 3,694 pins over 18 games Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on Ent Air Force Base to win one of six ADC spots in the All-Air Force kegler tourney starting Tuesday at Lockbourne Air Force Base in Columbus, Ohio.

TERRY DE YOUNG

SPOT SWAPPING. The Epidendios and the Tauschers monopolized the top spots in Greenbrae Lanes bowling action this week. Mike Tauscher topped the men with a 636 series, edging Rich Epidendio by 13 pins. On the distaff side, Marilyn Epidendio, Rich's wife, was number one. The runnerup — Penny Tauscher, Mike's spouse.

SIX OFFICERS from the Marin County Women's Bowling Association will attend the Woman's International Bowling Congress at Las Vegas opening tomorrow and ending Wednesday.

MARINITES participated in the Bowlers Victory Legion state finals in Bakersfield last Friday. The women were: Kathy Mitchell, Jackie Chambers, Correne Prohaska, Judy Walsh, Kathy Harvey and Bea Hoffmann. The men were: Phil Baiocchi, Jay Sharp, Rene Bacho and Greg Wallace.

COUNTRY CLUB BOWL In San Rafael will hold its monthly powder puff, no-tap tournament Monday at 1 p.m. Women, paying the $3 entry fee at the desk, will be credited with strikes on nine counts. The gals will bowl three games. Handicaps, based on current averages, will be used.

YOUNG MIKE McPHERSON must be happy today. He rolled his first 700 series last Wednesday night in the Splinters League at Country Club Bowl. The 18-year-old bowler had a 714 with games of 235, 221 and 258.

No-Hitter Changes Busby Into A 'Name'

third by striking out Dick McAuliffe and getting Norm Cash to fly out. He walked the leadoff batter in the ninth but Rich Reese lined into a double play.

It was that kind of game. The Tigers hit several liners but they were all at the Royals, who didn't have to make any spectacular plays to preserve the gem. Busby walked two batters in the fourth but Gates Brown grounded into a double play.

Busby, now 2-2, has been bothered by a stiff shoulder and was making his first start in a week. He had lasted only one inning against Chicago in that start in which he gave up three runs.

In the other American League games, Texas downed Milwaukee 4-2, Oakland turned back Baltimore 4-3 in 12 innings and Cleveland beat California 6-2. The Chicago at Boston and Minnesota at New York games were rained out.

In the National League, Chicago downed San Diego 10-2, San Francisco blanked St. Louis 5-0, Atlanta topped New York 2-0, Philadelphia nipped Cincinnati 3-1 and Houston topped Montreal 6-5 in 11 innings. The Los Angeles at Pittsburgh, game was rained out.

Cleveland's Milt Wilcox tried to match Busby's no-hitter as he pitched seven innings of no-hit ball before Jim Spencer led off the eighth with a single. Wilcox gave up two other hits and a run while settling for a three-hit victory as the Indians downed California.

Aaron won a battle with Seaver Friday night as the Atlanta star blasted his 678th career homer to help the Braves defeat the New York Mets and the loss touched off an outburst of anger in the usually easy-going Seaver.

Seaver, usually cooperative with the press, refused to talk to reporters after the game as the Mets once again failed to score for him.

"Just get away from me, will you please," Seaver said to one writer who tried to interview him. "I might start yelling and I don't want to start yelling."

Confident Dickson In Golf Lead

But to Bob Dickson it would make little difference if all three of them were just a stroke behind him going into today's third round of the $150,000 Byron Nelson Classic. Dickson is confident he could tame just about anyone.

It wasn't like that a year ago when Dickson was struggling along trying to find the kind of game many expected of him from the time he turned pro.

But the lean former champion of both the American and British amateurs turned it around last January with a win in the San Diego open and he has played steadily enough to maintain a No. 8 position in money earnings with $55,629.

Dickson jumped in front midway through the Nelson event Friday with a four-under 66 over the 6,932-yard, par 35- 35--70 Preston Trail Golf Club course and that was good enough for a one-stroke margin over first round leader Don Bies.

Native Texan Roy Pace, Bert Yancey, Australian David Graham, Dan Sikes and 53-year-old Julius Boros where in at 138, two under par and three strokes off the lead. Lanny Wadkins, Tom Weiskopf and Rod Curl were each at 139. Arnold Palmer stayed in the running by turning in a 70 for a 141. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the cut with a 143.

Trevino, who suffered through an embarrassing 79 during Thursday's bad weather, said the pain he experienced during that round had been diagnosed as a severely pulled shoulder muscle one-game winning "streaks" previously.

Manager Dick Williams of the A's changed his pitching plans for the final game of the series Sunday. Vida Blue is unable to pitch because of a knee injury and Rollie Fingers was scheduled to replace him. However, Williams now will keep Fingers in the bullpen and Jim (Catfish) Hunter will work Sunday with just two days rest.

In today's game it was Ken Holtzman, 3-1, pitching for the A's against Jim Palmer, 0-1, of Baltimore. Dave McNally, 3-2, will pitch for the Orioles Sunday.

Tomales Nine Wins, Takes First Place

Tomales High School scored an unearned run in the fourth inning yesterday to beat host Point Arena, 2-1, and take over sole possession of first place in the North Central League II baseball race.

In other local high school diamond action yesterday, Petaluma took a 7-2 North Bay League game from host Vintage 7 of Napa and St. Vincent of Petaluma lost an NCL II clash, 2-1, to host Upper Lake. Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park was idle.

Tomales (5-1) got the only runs it needed in the fourth inning on a two-out triple by Mike Camp, a double by Andy Bordessa which scored camp and an error by the Point Arena second baseman on a Ken Kehoe grounder which let Bordessa in with the winning run.

With the NBL win over Vintage, Petaluma remained one-half game behind co-leaders Napa and Vallejo.

The Trojans scored their runs in bunches, striking for three runs in the second inning and four more in the fourth. Mike Maselli delivered the big blow in both innings with two-run doubles in each.

Upper Lake scored two unearned runs in the sixth inning to overtake St. Vincent and drop the Mustangs one game behind Tomales (4-2) in the NCL II title race.

Key To Stanley Cup May Be Goaltending

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Montreal Canadiens and the Chicago Black Hawks open the best-of-seven Stanley Cup series here Sunday and goaltending could be the deciding factor for the winning team.

Esposito goes into the finals against Montreal's sharpshooters with a 1.55 goals-gainst average with eight wins and three losses in the quarter and semifinal series. He said he hopes his record holds up.

"I'm on a hot streak right now," Esposito said, "but who knows how long that will last. I feel pretty good now and if our team plays the same type of hockey we played against New York, I'm confident we'll have no trouble at all."

Montreal set a National Hockey League record with only 10 losses in regular season play and much of the credit goes to Dryden. The lanky goaltender came out of the quarter and semifinal series with an 8-3 win-loss record, but his goals against average was 2.69.

Dryden is making no predictions on the outcome of the series against the Hawks but he has cautioned his teammates Chicago is not going to be any easy team to beat.

"They are smart and they are sudden," Dryden said, "and their centers Stan Mikita and Pit Martin are very good. Their wings, Jim Pappin and Dennis Hull, are very dangerous and they have a good defense."

Chicago Coach Billy Reay apparently has more respect for the high-flying Canadians than his goaltender. He has refused to comment on reports he will be moving up in the Chicago organization next year, telling newsmen he is now concentrating fully on the series.

"I don't even want to discuss that," the 54-year-old veteran coach said when asked about reports he will be named the Hawks' next general manager or hold the dual position as coach-general manager.

Montreal and Chicago have met for the Stanley Cup four times in the past and the Hawks have yet to emerge a winner. Their last encounter in the Championship final was two seasons ago. Henri Richard decided that series in the seventh game when he scored a goal for Montreal to give them a 3-2 win.

A veteran of 18 years in the NHL, Richard had dismissed reports of his retiring and said he is concentrating only on being a member of the Stanley Cup winner for a record 11th time. Montreal has won the cup 15 times.

The Canadiens did not fare well against Chicago during regular season play, winning only two games and losing three.

The second game of the Stanley Cup series will be played in Montreal Tuesday night. The two clubs will return to Chicago for games Thursday night and Sunday, May 6.

Los Angeles Branch Eyed By Seminary

Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Strawberry has disclosed plans to expand to the Los Angeles area with a branch seminary.

Trustees of the seminary are aiming for an October opening date, according to Stanton Nash, head of public information at the seminary.

The seminary now is conducting classes in the Los Angeles area, flying instructors to the Los Angeles Christian Training Center in Downey, he said. About 135 ministers in the area could benefit from the seminary's program for advanced training, Nash said.

A goal of $150,000 has been set to develop the seminary in Los Angeles. A gift of $35,000 was received to start the fund raising, he said.

Balloons Bear Messages Of Easter Love, Peace

Three huge weather balloons, symbolic of the spirit of the risen Christ, were released last Sunday at the Church in the Market Place, Ignacio, following traditional Easter services.

Each balloon carried a message to the finder from Father Joe Kennedy detailing the ceremony and its meaning — and a message of love and peace on Easter Day from the Church in the Market Place.

At the same time, 21 parish children carrying helium-filled, multicolored balloons released them after an explanation of the meaning and the symbolism of the Trinity and the Resurrection.

The three weather balloons were inflated to a diameter of six feet with the aid of the Novato Fire Department and floated above the center beam and arms of the wooden cross that stands on the church lawn during the regular service.

children can't help wondering.

And they wonder a lot about God. They seem to have a natural awareness that He's here, and that He's important. But they want to know more.

In the Christian Science Sunday School, God's nearness and goodness become practical realities to children. They study and discuss weekly Bible Lessons, and how to apply their truths each day. They learn to look to God for His unfailing help.

No need for your child to go on wondering. Let him start discovering, at our Sunday School. We'll be delighted to welcome him and his friends.

"Hidden Treasures," a color motion picture produced by Moody Institute of Science, will be shown at Calvary Baptist Church in Larkspur on April 29, at 7:30 P.M.

Another of the unique "Sermons from Science" series, this film employs the telescope, microscope, and camera to reveal that all of creation is a vast treasury of priceless gems and works of art. The beauty of the snowflake, microscopic desert flowers, and subterranean crystalline formations all reveal God as not only our creator, but also as our provider.

Pastor David A. Tucker of Calvary Baptist Church says, "As great and beautiful as the treasures of this universe indeed are, life's greatest and ultimate treasure is to know God as our Heavenly Father through personal faith in Jesus Christ."

The film will be shown free to the public. Calvary Baptist Church is at the corner of Baltimore and Holcomb Avenues in Larkspur.

Lay Evangelism Institute Slated In Hamilton Chapel

The Marin County Lay Institute for Evangelism, to be held May 3-6 in the Chapel at Hamilton Air Force Base, will have Conn Bauer, member of the executive committee of Campus Crusade for Christ as featured speaker.

"Any thinking person is well aware of today's problems. What the world needs is not an analysis of the problems, but a positive solution. It is time for concerned Christians to be trained to communicate positively and simply that Jesus Christ is the answer to crises — not only on a world scale, but also on a personal level," says Bauer.

Campus Crusade for Christ International, a worldwide Christian organization and an evangelistic arm of the Church, has conducted similar training programs around the world. The institute is designed to train church members how to live and share the abundant Christian life. This training is accomplished through seminars as well as lectures.

Opportunities to enroll in the Marin County Lay Institute for Evangelism are available through participating churches, or by contacting one of the executive committee members, or by attending the opening session to be held on May 3 from 7:15 until 9:45 p.m., Friday evening, Saturday the session will be from 8:45 a.m. until 9:45 p.m. and on Sunday the session will be from 1:15 p.m. until 5:30 p.m. Cost of the entire institute and materials is $6.

Gary Van Maanen, of Campus Crusade for Christ, from Palo Alto, is the director of the institute. The executive committee chairman is Bill Spence, 50 Corte Roble, Novato, and the Pators' Committee chairman is Pastor Warren Conrad, Valley Baptist Church, 3 N. San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

The institute is available to anyone in Marin County, whether or not they belong to a church that is participating.

children can't help wondering.
And they wonder a lot about God. They seem to have a natural awareness that He's here, and that He's important. But they want to know more.
In the Christian Science Sunday School, God's nearness and goodness become practical realities to children. They study and discuss weekly Bible Lessons, and how to apply their truths each day. They learn to look to God for His unfailing help.
No need for your child to go on wondering. Let him start discovering, at our Sunday School. We'll be delighted to welcome him and his friends.

Stocks In Worst Week This Year

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was the worst week of the year for stocks on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 41.01 to 922.19, its lowest level since Oct. 16, 1972; other leading indicators hit new lows; almost one-third of the listed issues dropped to 1973 lows. Activity, however, remained light.

The post-Easter slump reflected the unwillingness of investors to commit new funds to the market until there is progress in combating inflation, brokers said. Even the continued rosy earnings reports and increased dividend announcements have failed to interest investors.

The retreat was broad with 1,512 issues lower, 287 higher among 1,974 issues on the tape.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a broader market barometer, skidded 4.94 to 107.23, its 1973 low. The NYSE index declined 2.73 to 56.86 in the largest drop in its history.

Turnover for the week totaled 72,306,345 shares compared with 52,626,155 in the previous holiday-shortened week and with 79,310,000 shares a year ago.

Stocks In Worst Week This Year

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was the worst week of the year for stocks on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 41.01 to 922.19, its lowest level since Oct. 16, 1972; other leading indicators hit new lows; almost one-third of the listed issues dropped to 1973 lows. Activity, however, remained light.

The post-Easter slump reflected the unwillingness of investors to commit new funds to the market until there is progress in combating inflation, brokers said. Even the continued rosy earnings reports and increased dividend announcements have failed to interest investors.

The retreat was broad with 1,512 issues lower, 287 higher among 1,974 issues on the tape.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a broader market barometer, skidded 4.94 to 107.23, its 1973 low. The NYSE index declined 2.73 to 56.86 in the largest drop in its history.

Turnover for the week totaled 72,306,345 shares compared with 52,626,155 in the previous holiday-shortened week and with 79,310,000 shares a year ago.

High-Rises Hide Hawaii's Charm

IF IT HAS BEEN a decade or two since you last visited Waikiki Beach on Oahu, you will be painfully surprised to see it now.

You first find yourself approaching on a one-way street with four or five lanes of creeping traffic. The area seemingly is wall-to-wall high-rise.

The majestic old Moana Hotel and the once-luxurious Royal Hawaiian, landmarks in an earlier age, are now almost obscured by the high-rises which surround them. Their lobbies team with tour groups coming and going at all hours.

It is indeed garish.

Gone are the soft strains of native Hawaiian voices, strumming ukuleles and un-amplified guitars. Waikiki restaurants and bars reverberate with the beat of amplified rock music, some of it adapted from old Hawaiian melodies.

Honolulu now boasts — if that is the word —of 400,000 population, freeways, McDonald's hamburger stands, and Travelodge motels.

DESPITE ALL THIS, what little beach remains at Waikiki is still beautiful and pleasant, if overcrowded. The Waikiki surf doesn't seem overcrowded. Nowadays the crowds seem to be largely lookers and shoppers. Swimmers and surfers haven't multiplied as rapidly, thank the Lord.

The view of Diamond Head from Waikiki is marred only by a couple of new high-rises at its foot.

The trade winds still blow. The palm leaves still rattle in the wind. Mynah birds can still be heard occasionally when crowd, traffic and over-amplified music subside sufficiently.

In those brief moments, Waikiki is still the greatest.

THE OTHER ISLANDS haven't yet suffered the same fate. They still retain some genuine Hawaiian flavor. But it appears to be fast diluting. Kauai, Maui and Hawaii are blossoming with beach-front hotels.

If you want a quiet drink with only a bit of soft background music, you are likely to be frustrated.

Such drinks as Mai Tai should be sipped and savored quietly like mint julep. Over-amplified heavy-beat rock music is singularly inappropriate; but it seems inescapable even in outer island cocktail lounges today.

Evening entertainment after dinner in such places as the old Kona Inn is reminiscent of yesteryear. But the star performer of Polynesian dances and singer of Hawaiian songs is a British import. His voice is sadly over-amplified, as are the Hawaiian electric guitars and non-Hawaiian drums which accompany him.

The after-dinner show at the Kaui Surf Hotel is an exception. The performers are all local Hawaiian talent. Instruments and voices are amplified but not to unbearable levels. The leading hula dancer — an attractive, slim, young native beauty — is the mother of five. The master of ceremonies and leading male singer is a moonlighter. His fulltime regular daytime job is beach captain. Native Hawaiians are great entertainers because singing and dancing comes naturally to them and they appear to enjoy it sincerely, with an audience or without, whether the audience pays or not.

WHAT DO NATIVE born Hawaiians think about this explosion of hotel building and deluge of tourists which threatens to obliterate their native island paradise?

Most don't seem to object. They recognize that their job opportunities are ever better. They make far more money with far less work than did their parents and grandparents who spent their lives at hard labor on plantations with minimal living standards.

THE SEA WATER in Pearl Harbor is slowly claiming the wreckage of the USS Arizona, tomb for more than a thousand Navy men lost on Dec. 7, 1941.

The armorplate is slowly being eaten away by the corrosive salt water. In another decade or two, none of it will any longer remain visible above water.

In the calm of morning, before the trade winds rise to full velocity, small oil slicks can still be seen as the fuel tanks of the Arizona continue to drain, a generation after her destruction. Perhaps the oil slicks will continue even after the corrosive sea has eaten away all of her that remains above water.

As you stand on the deck of the memorial erected over her—remembering Dec. 7 and the great war that began there on that date, and all that has happened in the world since — you can't help wondering how soon environmentalists will demand the raising and disposal of the Arizona so as to eliminate the oil slicks which she still creates.

Good Gardening Year

Every year is a good year to garden, but this year the rise in the cost of living makes it a better-than-ever hobby. It's good for the health as well as the pocketbook. Sunshine, exercise and garden-fresh produce. Just what the doctor ordered — Dr. Arthur Burns, that is.

Bouquets (And No Brickbat)

BOUQUETS to Cedars Development Foundation, Easter Seal Society, Marin Aid To Retarded Children, and all those involved with them in the annual "Special Olympics" for physically handicapped youngsters, which will be held May 5 at San Rafael High School.

BOUQUETS to Marin County supervisors (except Gary T. Giacomini, who dissented) for showing the good sense to turn down the latest "nude beach" proposal.

Special BOUQUET to Mill Valley's Randy Moffitt, "bullpen ace" of the San Francisco Giants. "Randy Moffitt in relief" has figured largely in keeping the Giants surprisingly on top of the National Baseball League's Western Division.

Mankedick Deserves Further Credit

On behalf of Hamilton Air Force Base, I would like to thank you for the very excellent coverage you did of our recent open house. The stories and pictures were very, very well done and greatly appreciated by all of us here at Hamilton.

However, I would like to give credit where credit is due in that you mentioned in your story that the vintage aircraft were brought to Hamilton through the efforts of Mr. Al Mankedick, assistant chief of airfield management at Hamilton. That statement doesn't really tell the whole story since Mr. Mankedick has been the driving force behind all of the open houses at Hamilton for many years. It has been through his tireless efforts and many personal contacts that Hamilton has been able to have such outstanding open houses.

With the possibility of this being the last open house for Hamilton, I would like to see that Mr. Mankedick gets full credit for the excellent work he has done these many years.

Believes High Court Favors The Rich

The Supreme Court's recent decision on school financing clarifies a matter that had puzzled me for weeks: the rationale of its abortion decision. Now I see, behind the phrases "lack of compelling interest" and "right of privacy," a common thread — the inviolability of property. The rich, according to the court, have a right to purchase better education for their children, just as those already born have a right to control their bodies. These property rights are not to be denied simply because the poor or the unborn may want equal treatment. Only after the appropriate property is acquired, says the court, do the pertinent rights exist. Mere humanness is not sufficient basis for such claims.

Recall Movement Result Of Mishandling

During the last week you published a letter to the editor by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Keate about the Corte Madera recall movement. It made mention of "vigilante tactics," implied that there was something insidious about recall, and indicated that it was primarily directed at the Hahn center.

The Keates are more than entitled to their own opinions, which we would hope are well informed. We would also hope, however, that they consider that one wonderful thing about our democracy (and your editorial page policy) is that they are able to freely express their opinions. The rules governing this same democracy also provide recall as a legitimate, orderly process for removal of elected officials who, in the opinion of the voters, no longer serve the public interest.

The people who have initiated recall are not a bunch of wild-eyed radicals. They are responsible citizens, seeking legitimate redress through proper, reasonable means provided by the laws of the state. They are informed, involved, intelligent citizens who are sick and tired or what is now (not 25 years ago) happening to Corte Madera . . .

The recall is not primarily directed at the Hahn center. It has been borne of the mishandling of it and other situations, too numerous to detail here, by virtue of the majority vote of the three members of the council who are involved.

Cubans Who Bugged Watergate Still Awaiting Castro's Fall

WASHINGTON — The forgotten men of the Watergate affair are the four Cuban refugees who were among the seven men convicted of bugging the Democratic headquarters on June 17, 1972. To this day, these men think they were hired to strike a blow against Fidel Castro.

At this very moment, they are probably sitting in their Washington, D.C., jail cells discussing how they contributed to Castro's downfall.

"WELL, AMIGOS, it will just be a matter of time until we will be back home in Havana."

"That is true, dear friends. Even though we have been caught, Castro must be shaking in his boots knowing we could get into the Watergate without his stopping us."

"I spoke to G. Gordon Liddy in the mess hall yesterday and he told me the President is very proud of us for what we did to halt communism from spreading to South America."

"Si, he told me the same thing. He said if it hadn't been for us Cubans, Fidel would now be sleeping in the Watergate Hotel."

"I MUST BE DUMB, amigos, but I still don't understand what we were doing in the Democratic national headquarters."

"Stupido! We were putting in a bug so we could listen in on the Democrats' telephone line to Havana. Mr. Liddy said the Democrats did nothing during the election without first checking with Fidel. It was essential to the Republicans to know what the Democrats were cooking up."

"But who paid us all the money?"

"The Committee to Re-Elect the President and to Defeat Castro. They had a special espionage fund set aside for this purpose.

"It was in cash because the committee was afraid that if they used checks, Castro would find out about it and abort our revolution."

"BUT WHY DO WE have to keep going in front of the grand jury all the time?"

"You don't know why? Because the Democrats are trying to prove our bugging had nothing to do with Cuba. They say it had to do with the American election."

"Caramba! Everyone knows we wouldn't be in on a bugging if it didn't have to do with Cuba. Those Democrats are real crazy people if they think we would be involved in something like this if it wasn't to get Castro."

"I read in the newspaper where high people in the White House were behind the bugging of the Watergate."

"Why shouldn't they be? They hate Fidel as much as we do. Mr. Liddy told me the White House got reports on everything that happened at the Watergate. He said once they got enough information, the President was going to launch an attack at the Bay of Pigs."

"BUT IF THE WHITE House approved of what we were doing, why are we still in jail?"

"To lull Castro into a false sense of security. He thinks the Justice Department is mad at us for what we did. Once Castro lets his guard down, they will fly us to southern Florida and let us lead the invasion against the beaches."

"But the judge said we could get up to 40 years in jail."

"Mr. Liddy said not to pay any attention to the judge. He was just mad because he thought the bugging had to do with the elections. Once he finds out it was against Castro, he will give us all medals."

"I DON'T KNOW why I have a bad feeling about all this. There are too many people involved who weren't Cubans. Maybe there was more to it than we know."

"Imbecile! Do you think the highest officials in the President's own part would lie to Cuban refugees?"

"I guess not. But if I had it to do all over again, I would stay in my hacienda in Miami."

Devastation of Cambodia 'Nailing Custard Pie To Wall'

WASHINGTON — What must surely be devilish coincidence dictates that mass bombing in Indochina was full blown on the great anniversaries of the Christian faith. For Christmas it was the bombing of North Vietnam. For Easter the bombs rained down on poor, shattered Cambodia.

Prior to the Nixon incursion with American ground and air power in 1970, Cambodia retained some vestiges of its charming, slightly comic-opera past. The latest report by a study group of nine persons sent to Indochina by Sen. Edward Kennedy's subcommittee on refugees shows half the population herded into refugee camps, on the brink of starvation, with a rising threat of epidemics among a people close to extinction.

Except for the terse announcement from Pacific headquarters in Honoluly saying the raids are continuing, the Defense Department keeps tight security on numbers. On the scene, however, it is estimated that 8,000 sorties have been flown by B-52s. This is comparable to all but the most intense bombing of the Indochina war.

ALL THIS is to prop up the government of Lon Nol in Phnom Penh and to compel the Communists to come to the peace table. Propping up Lon Nol is like, in Al Smith's famous figure of speech, trying to nail a custard pie to the wall. Although the administration is trying to keep the lid on, reporters working under great handicaps in the field are bringing out the painful truth. A hard-hitting dispatch from staff correspondent Arnold R. Isaacs of the Baltimore Sun from Phnom Penh put it on the line:

"Despite the heavy United States bombing, President Lon Nol's ramshackle army has lost substantial territory and population to the Communist-led Cambodian insurgents in the last two months. Government troops, cheated of their pay by corrupt officers and often defeated on the battlefield through the incompetence of their commanders, are growing more demoralized.

"Popular support for the government has melted away. There is no sign of peace negotiations or the 'de facto' cease-fire that the White House has predicted would follow the Vietnam peace agreement."

LON NOL'S OFFER of negotiation has a decidedly phony sound. The unhappy president, dominated by his brother Lon Non, whose corruption even by Asian standards is wonderful to behold, is trying to revamp his government by bringing in opposition leaders in response to a demand from President Nixon brought by Gen. Alexander Haig when he went to Phnom Penh. But so long as Lon Non is next to the seat of power, the Khmer Rouge, the Cambodian insurgents, will not negotiate.

In their testimony before the Kennedy subcommittee, the specialists who had made a three-week study of Cambodia, Laos and South Vietnam did not try to estimate the number of civilian casualties from the Cambodian bombing. It would obviously be impossible, since there are no hospitals other than crude improvised shelters where the wounded and those badly burned with napalm are taken.

"One thing is certain," the study group reported. "Bombing is the most pervasive reason for refugee movement."

Another witness was Father Robert Charlebois, who had returned more recently from Cambodia. With long experience in the country he verified the testimony of the study group.

THE COLLAPSE of Cambodia is only one aspect of the swift deterioration of the "peace with honor" arrived at by President Nixon and his principal negotiator, Henry A. Kissinger. The suspicion is strong here that, if the reported North Vietnamese violations of the cease-fire continue, the President will order bombing of the north resumed. This will, in short, be the air war as before.

So much was said about the success of Vietnamization that one can only wonder what has happened to the forces of the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu that were created with vast amounts of American help to insure his independence. American help armed and sustained a force put at 1,100,000 on the ground. With planes and helicopters provided by Washington the South Vietnamese air force was at one time rated fifth in the world — in numbers, at any rate.

The grim fear is that, for all the ruffles and flourishes of his American visit, Thieu is another custard pie. As critics of the war have long said, the choice has been between simply getting out and leaving Vietnam to its own fate or starving for the indefinite future with a sustaining force.

Will Sheikhs Of Middle East Rule Our World Of Tomorrow?

The most sensational element of the world energy situation is what the oil masters of the Middle East will do with their money, as the years go on and the billions pile up.

The issue verges on monetary and political science fiction. A few years hence, with the increasing U.S. dependence on Middle Eastern oil, a few heads of state — some of their states are miniscule — will control more money than anybody ever has before in the history of the world.

Some people, like Prof. A. J. Meyer of Harvard University, remind us that these oil magnates have been quite conservative and responsible in their use of already large monetary supplies. They hope for the best.

But it cannot be gainsaid that the potential capacity for fantastic abuse will exist. Will the oil sheikhs rule the world? What will the rest of us do about it?

IT IS EASY to exaggerate. One estimate is that these states will earn $1 trillion annually in less than 30 years. And a House Foreign Affairs Near East subcommittee says: "Never before in the history of mankind have so many wealthy, industrialized, militarily powerful and large states been at the potential mercy of small, independent and potentially unstable states which will provide, for the unforeseeable future, the fuel of advanced societies."

There are lots of ways in which the problem will be nibbled at, reducing its stark magnitude. The Middle Eastern and African states will use some of their money to develop their own societies. There are limits to how much they can absorb —how many air conditioners, how many Mercedes Benzes — but still they can take a great deal. This will be especially true of investment in Egypt, which needs and can use immense development capital. And of course, the money invested builds up a stake which people will be reluctant to jeopardize by reckless international behavior.

Also, the West may be able to cut back its own inordinate energy appetite. We can turn out more lights, ride in more car pools, demand fewer gadgets. Our energy consumption need not rise at its present rate.

WE CAN DEVELOP more domestic sources of energy, like the Arctic oil or the offshore deposits, even at some environmental hazard. We can work harder to bring the breeder reactor for atomic power into operation. Farther down the road, we can develop solar power or tap the earth's hot interior, or devise synthetic fuel sources.

We can permit —indeed, encourage — the oil states to invest in the western countries. Pipelines, refineries, and even the filling stations could come into Middle Eastern ownership. Thus they would have a stake all the way downstream in a continuing flow of oil. And, as has been suggested more than once and not entirely whimsically, if they expropriate our property we can expropriate theirs.

It is also more than possible that the Middle Eastern and African oil states may not always agree with one another. Thus a boycott imposed by them against the consumers would probably have self-defeating leakages.

ALL THESE THINGS might somewhat minimize the problem. But when all is said and done, great dependence and great power will remain. Only the future can tell how this power will be used. The mere management of the money involved, leaving out all factors of irresponsibility and abuse, will be challenge enough.

And if capital generates capital, wealth breeds wealth, when will the oil magnates own a huge chunk of the resources of the rest of the world? Today the Saudi Arabian government alone provides about 1,000 scholarships a year for future civil servants to study in the United States.

Obviously, Israel and its friends are deeply concerned. What kind of pressures might be applied to them can readily be imagined, especially if the oil states should decide to arm in a big way.

It all boggles the imagination.

High-Rises Hide Hawaii's Charm

IF IT HAS BEEN a decade or two since you last visited Waikiki Beach on Oahu, you will be painfully surprised to see it now.

You first find yourself approaching on a one-way street with four or five lanes of creeping traffic. The area seemingly is wall-to-wall high-rise.

The majestic old Moana Hotel and the once-luxurious Royal Hawaiian, landmarks in an earlier age, are now almost obscured by the high-rises which surround them. Their lobbies team with tour groups coming and going at all hours.

It is indeed garish.

Gone are the soft strains of native Hawaiian voices, strumming ukuleles and un-amplified guitars. Waikiki restaurants and bars reverberate with the beat of amplified rock music, some of it adapted from old Hawaiian melodies.

Honolulu now boasts — if that is the word —of 400,000 population, freeways, McDonald's hamburger stands, and Travelodge motels.

DESPITE ALL THIS, what little beach remains at Waikiki is still beautiful and pleasant, if overcrowded. The Waikiki surf doesn't seem overcrowded. Nowadays the crowds seem to be largely lookers and shoppers. Swimmers and surfers haven't multiplied as rapidly, thank the Lord.

The trade winds still blow. The palm leaves still rattle in the wind. Mynah birds can still be heard occasionally when crowd, traffic and over-amplified music subside sufficiently.

In those brief moments, Waikiki is still the greatest.

THE OTHER ISLANDS haven't yet suffered the same fate. They still retain some genuine Hawaiian flavor. But it appears to be fast diluting. Kauai, Maui and Hawaii are blossoming with beach-front hotels.

If you want a quiet drink with only a bit of soft background music, you are likely to be frustrated.

Such drinks as Mai Tai should be sipped and savored quietly like mint julep. Over-amplified heavy-beat rock music is singularly inappropriate; but it seems inescapable even in outer island cocktail lounges today.

Will Sheikhs Of Middle East Rule Our World Of Tomorrow?

The most sensational element of the world energy situation is what the oil masters of the Middle East will do with their money, as the years go on and the billions pile up.

The issue verges on monetary and political science fiction. A few years hence, with the increasing U.S. dependence on Middle Eastern oil, a few heads of state — some of their states are miniscule — will control more money than anybody ever has before in the history of the world.

Some people, like Prof. A. J. Meyer of Harvard University, remind us that these oil magnates have been quite conservative and responsible in their use of already large monetary supplies. They hope for the best.

But it cannot be gainsaid that the potential capacity for fantastic abuse will exist. Will the oil sheikhs rule the world? What will the rest of us do about it?

IT IS EASY to exaggerate. One estimate is that these states will earn $1 trillion annually in less than 30 years. And a House Foreign Affairs Near East subcommittee says: "Never before in the history of mankind have so many wealthy, industrialized, militarily powerful and large states been at the potential mercy of small, independent and potentially unstable states which will provide, for the unforeseeable future, the fuel of advanced societies."

There are lots of ways in which the problem will be nibbled at, reducing its stark magnitude. The Middle Eastern and African states will use some of their money to develop their own societies. There are limits to how much they can absorb —how many air conditioners, how many Mercedes Benzes — but still they can take a great deal. This will be especially true of investment in Egypt, which needs and can use immense development capital. And of course, the money invested builds up a stake which people will be reluctant to jeopardize by reckless international behavior.

Also, the West may be able to cut back its own inordinate energy appetite. We can turn out more lights, ride in more car pools, demand fewer gadgets. Our energy consumption need not rise at its present rate.

WE CAN DEVELOP more domestic sources of energy, like the Arctic oil or the offshore deposits, even at some environmental hazard. We can work harder to bring the breeder reactor for atomic power into operation. Farther down the road, we can develop solar power or tap the earth's hot interior, or devise synthetic fuel sources.

We can permit —indeed, encourage — the oil states to invest in the western countries. Pipelines, refineries, and even the filling stations could come into Middle Eastern ownership. Thus they would have a stake all the way downstream in a continuing flow of oil. And, as has been suggested more than once and not entirely whimsically, if they expropriate our property we can expropriate theirs.

It is also more than possible that the Middle Eastern and African oil states may not always agree with one another. Thus a boycott imposed by them against the consumers would probably have self-defeating leakages.

ALL THESE THINGS might somewhat minimize the problem. But when all is said and done, great dependence and great power will remain. Only the future can tell how this power will be used. The mere management of the money involved, leaving out all factors of irresponsibility and abuse, will be challenge enough.

And if capital generates capital, wealth breeds wealth, when will the oil magnates own a huge chunk of the resources of the rest of the world? Today the Saudi Arabian government alone provides about 1,000 scholarships a year for future civil servants to study in the United States.

Obviously, Israel and its friends are deeply concerned. What kind of pressures might be applied to them can readily be imagined, especially if the oil states should decide to arm in a big way.

It all boggles the imagination.

Mail Service: What's Wrong? What's Being Done?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Few things are annoying more Americans these days than the nation's poor mail service. This is a special report on the way things are, why, and what's being done to try to bring an improvement.)

By MARGARET A. KILGORE

WASHINGTON UPI — After rising food prices, today's poor mail service probably is the American public's sorest complaint. Nearly everyone seems to have a horror story to tell:

Example: 3,475 bags of mail lay untouched in the Charleston, W. Va., post office in December and January. The office had been given a $900,000 budget cut and didn't have the people to sort the mail.

Example: Enraged mail patrons in Dallas, Tex., have begun venting their anger against letter carriers, three have been assaulted while making their rounds, including one who was slugged with a rifle butt.

Example: A senator's administrative assistant received on March 12 three Christmas cards mailed before Dec. 20. Two of them were mailed in the same town in which the aide and thousands of government employees live, Arlington, Va.

Example: A woman in San Francisco sent an air mail letter to her ailing sister in Long Beach, Calif. When she got no reply in 11 days, the woman phoned and learned that her sister had died. The woman went to Long Beach and was there when her letter arrived-13 days in transit.

Businessmen complain about sales that are over before their mailed notices reach their customers. Lawyers complain that documents mailed to courts across the country miss filing deadlines. Book and record clubs have had to extend deadlines for customers to say whether they want that month's selection. Party invitations arrive after the party and perishable gifts spoil in the mail.

For such reasons — and some explanations — Postmaster General Elmer T. Klassen has been appearing before Congressional committees during the past two months facing a barrage of criticism from members of Congress.

The gist of the complaints: Long distance mail delivery is slower now than five years ago, crosstown delivery within most cities is slower now than five years ago; service is increasingly erratic.

Klassen, who earns $60,000 annually in the noncabinet post, said early in the hearings:

"I have felt from the outset that it would take five to ten years to turn around a system that had been going the other way for decades. I am convinced that the system is on a much firmer footing today that it was 20 months ago or at any other times in recent history."

It has been two years since the Postal Service, a quasipublic corporation, came into being replacing the 187-year-old government-run Post Office Department. The postal Reorganization Act establishing the Postal Service explicitly required the corporation to break even financially within a dozen years.

"Many who wrote this bill this week will regret in years to come as they live with a deteriorating postal service," former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., said in 1970.

What's gone wrong? The answers so far heard, or suggested, by Congress include: precipitate economizing, staff reductions, poor management, too little attention to service demands, footdragging on equipment modernization, poor mailworker morale.

Klassen concedes some of this, but also insists not all of it is directly the fault of the Postal Service. He told Congress, for example, that "the economies we undertook last year permitted us to cancel a $900 million postage rate increase that was budgeted for January 1973."

The Postmaster General added that there aren't any "present plans" for general postal rate boosts, but that the outcome of labor contract negotiations which begin April 20 could alter this. The contract for the 600,000 postal employees expires July 20.

Under the postal reorganization, strikes, such as occurred in 1970, are barred, but hearings on legislation that would give workers the right to strike have been started before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Klassen, former president of American Can Co., admitted to the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee that mail service has been deteriorating, but said he was moving on several fronts to make improvements.

"I'm not telling you that we have solved all the problems; that we are providing consistently reliable service. We are not. Problem areas still do exist and they are compromising our service standards," he said.

Klassen listed previously disclosed moves such as increasing air taxi service, more mechanization of mail processing, and negotiating with commercial airlines for more space and a fixed schedule for first class mail that moves by air on a space-available basis as signs of improvement.

He said the service was "so hell bent" on reducing costs in the past year that "we didn't pay enough attention to service." He conceded that some failures were due to "damn poor management" and said he has decentralized authority in order to give district managers more flexibility.

The postal chief has attempted to improve morale of overworked postal employees by adding 6,000 mailworkers to the staff since February. Employment went from a high of 741,217 employees on June 30, 1970, to a low of 677,746 by February, 1972. Employment currently stands at 683,670. In the government, only the Defense Department has more people.

Klassen has called on Congress, and the public, for patience until new programs and policies are given a chance to work.

Rep. Louis Frey, R-Fla., whose state got nearly 800 new postal employees within the past month, said "much more must be done before the Post Office is let off the hook."

Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., Chairman of the Senate Committee, said "if the postal system remains the primary means of correspondence and delivery in this country, the cost of mailing a letter by 1984 will be between 20 and 38 cents." He said the lower figure represents an assumption that mechanization and productivity increases will absorb volume increases and that pay increases will conform to present wage guidelines.

Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., who is ranking majority member of the senate committee and a victim of the delayed Charleston mail bags, said "the failure of the special delivery stamp is a disgrace, really. Sixty cents for a stamp means nothing. It tends to slow a letter rather than give it special handling." The Charleston episode occurred during the Christmas mail rush when the postal service — despite repeated pleas to mail early which they conceded Americans observed — suffered its usual logjam.

When Randolph asked the Postal Service for an explanation, 900 mailsacks of the 3,475 lying untouched in the Charleston post office were rushed to post offices in Parkersburg, and Wheeling, W. Va., for sorting. However, those offices did not have enough transport facilities to cover the whole state, so workers just took out the mail for their areas and shipped the rest back to Charleston.

Charleston also sent sacks to a number of small third-class offices which put up temporary distribution cases. But because they didn't have enough slots to distribute mail to every West Virginia city that mail, too, had to go back to Charleston.

Randolph learned that the officer in charge at Charleston was a 27-year-old management trainee with no supervisory experience.

Postal officials now are aware that what happened in Charleston was not an isolated case. Klassen met with 85 district managers nationwide in Washington before Congressional hearings began and heard similar stories.

As the number of persons collecting, sorting and delivering the mail declines, the amount of mail being handled climbs. Before reorganization, the postal force handled 84.8 billion pieces of mail in 1970. Last year, 87.1 billion pieces of mail were handled and the Service forecasts that by 1977 the mail will have climbed to 97.9 billion pieces a year.

Congress may have to conclude that it will have to resume larger subsidies to the Postal Service if Americans ever are to get the improved mail delivery they are demanding. There are even some Congressman who propose returning the postal service to direct federal control, but that isn't likely because no one seriously believes that will solve the problem.

Climate Is Becoming Much Warmer For Soviet-Japanese Treaty Talks

By LEO GRULIOW

MOSCOW — The Soviet press is giving heavy play to the thaw in relations with Japan since the exchange of messages in early March between Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka and Soviet party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Now Tanaka has accepted an invitation to visit the Soviet Union, but no date has been set.

Diplomatic sources indicate that Tanaka has offered to separate economic negotiations from previously stalled World War II Peace Treaty talks, tried to resume the treaty negotiations.

Both sides are interested in exploring prospects of cooperation in constructing pipelines to carry Siberian gas and oil thousands of miles overland to Japan.

Meantime, the Soviet Union wants to conclude a peace treaty with Japan 28 years after World War II. Such a treaty would help generate momentum for the Asian security pact which the USSR has been urging.

The hindrance has been Japanese insistence upon return of four Kuril Islands which the Soviet Union took after the war. Out of a welter of rumors — that the Japanese are prepared to give up claim to the islands, that the Soviet Union is willing to surrender several of the islands, and that the issue might be settled by leaving the Soviet Union in possession without Japan's abandonment of legal claim to the islands — the following facts emerge, according to diplomats here:

Japan is willing to resume the treaty negotiations that stalled last autumn but is unwilling to drop the claim to all four islands.

The Soviet Union had previously proposed returning the two smallest and now may be ready to discuss the possibility of returning a third island. But Japan would be reluctant to settle for three. The Japanese public takes the issue too seriously to permit any administration to compromise on it, and the Japanese are in no hurry for a peace treaty.

A more immediate possibility is an agreement to give the Japanese fishing rights off the islands. Although fishing concessions would not settle the dispute over the islands, they would go far toward improving the climate of Soviet-Japanese relations.

While negotiations over the peace treaty may stretch out, it is thought progress can be made on the economic front. Although the Japanese are interested in Soviet fuel, the pipeline talks, involving many firms and a sum of at least $1 billion, require long, careful discussion, and perhaps coordination with American interests. The Japanese administration is prepared to back the deal if and when private interests conclude it. Meantime, both sides want to get on with the negotiations.

China has expressed objections to the planned pipeline, which would run along the Sino-Soviet border. Construction of the line would spur Soviet development of the frontier area. The Soviet-Japanese thaw also tends to counteract the attraction for Chinese-Japanese economic ties.

Social Service Program Poses A Problem To Cities

By FLORENCE MOUCKLEY

BOSTON — Cities and towns across the United States are saying "yes" to paying for police stations, fire trucks, tax rebates, and new town halls but "no" to saving poverty programs cut back by President Nixon.

The picture of poverty programs being squeezed out by other municipal needs emerges from a Monitor survey which asked city and town officials how they are spending their first general revenue-sharing checks.

By selecting city projects as their No. 1 priority, cities and towns are diverting the flow of federal money from the poor to the general population.

A new ray of hope was given for some of the cutback poverty programs when, in Washington, a federal court judge ruled that the administration's dismantling of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) is illegal.

U.S. District Judge William B. Jones said the termination of the agency could not take place unless funds run out or Congress decides to cut them off. He ordered acting OEO director Howard J. Phillips to refrain from closing down OEO agencies. The issue will likely be brought before the Supreme Court of the United States.

A statement by Stephen Cohen, an aide to Boston Mayor Kevin H. White, typifies what is happening in city and town halls throughout the country with respect to revenue sharing:

"We have made it clear the city does not want to lose any federally aided programs, but legally, the city must respond to municipal commitments before it can turn to federally abandoned programs."

If the trend toward putting city needs first continues and unless special revenue sharing — $6.9 billion in its first year covering urban community development, education, manpower training, and law enforcement — is passed by Congress, many poverty programs could be permanently wiped out. Even if new legislation is passed it will be July 1974, before this money becomes available.

Behind The News

Many city and town officials do not know which way to turn. They have pressing city needs and yet do not want to let social-service programs go down the drain. Many municipalities have not yet committed their revenue-sharing money. They are waiting to see what will happen to special revenue sharing.

For those cities already spending their share, this is the pattern:

In Boston, Mayor White's aides say the $18 million revenue sharing received so far will be used to offset the skyrocketing tax rate.

Chicago, too, is using revenue sharing to ease property taxes. Some $27½ million out of the $32 million it received in 1972 will be used to reduce bills payable in 1973.

Nearly $30 million out of $78 million in 1973 revenue-sharing money will be used to keep next year's taxes at the 1972 level.

Other Chicago allocations: meeting police and fire department payrolls, hiring additional staff for the Board of Health, $1 million for the Chicago Public Library, plus paying for other expenses scattered throughout the budget.

Boulder, Colo., so far is spending $156,000 of its $3 million 1972 and 1973 revenue-sharing money in a special anti-crime program in high crime areas. Additionally it is beefing up its citywide police services. Also slated: a city-county criminal justice center and a fire station.

In Wilmington, Del., a spokesman for the mayor's office says the $1.8 million in hand will go to ". . . balance the budget and patch holes."

New York City's relatively huge slice of $203 million for 1972 will be swallowed up by just three items: Police and fire departments $78 million; environmental protection, mostly sanitation, $25 million; $100 million for New York subways — the prime target to save the 35-cent fare.

MAYOR JOSEPH ALIOTO
Moving city cautiously

Atlanta is one of the few cities trying to salvage federal programs. At first it had decided to use federal money to reduce water and sewage bills to homeowners.

The money will be used this way: $750,000 for Economic Opportunity Atlanta, Inc. This is the local "war on proverty" agency which has a total budget of $18 million to $19 million, of which $16 million came from federal funds last year. OEO, now being dismantled, contributed some $3 million a year.

Other uses for revenue-sharing money: a new public-safety building, park acquisition and development, expanding library facilities, and traffic-control signals.

San Francisco's Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and the city's board of supervisors are moving cautiously because they say many federally funded programs are in jeopardy. "We are dealing with a lot of unknowns," said a city government spokeswoman.

Only $5.5 million out of $26.5 million available to the city through July, 1974, has been committed. It will go toward making up a sewer-deficit tax, paying off outstanding legal claims against the city's beleaguered railway system and equipment needs of many city departments.

Mayor Alioto believes city deficits should be paid out of city department surpluses — several are expected — so that revenue-sharing money can be spread as far as possible over as many programs as possible.

Tim Honey, revenue-sharing coordinator for the National League of Cities, says it is his feeling that not many cities are spending their funds on social services "because the cities traditionally have not been engaged in that role. It has been more a function of the county and state government."

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Developments in the Watergate case cast their shadows forward to 1976—the next presidential election year—and backward to the early 20s when the Teapot Dome scandal monopolized the headlines.

Any failure on the part of the administration to clear itself of any taint from the Watergate scandal could disenchant the elecorate and hurt the chances of any Republican with White House aspirations.

And in another major development Nixon yesterday accepted the resignation of Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III, submitted just hours earlier amid reports Gray burned "political dynamite" documents belonging to a confessed conspirator in the Watergate case.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler implied Nixon has asked Gray to step down, saying Nixon had held "a long discussion" with Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst Thursday night and that Kleindienst in turn had talked to Gray.

"This has happened," said Ziegler. "This is my comment. I have nothing further to say at this time."

Meanwhile, the Pentagon Papers trial in Los Angeles took a startling turn when the judge announced prosecutors in Washington had relayed information that two of the Watergate conspirators, G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt Jr., had burglarized the office of defendant Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

One possible contender in '76, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, spoke out this week about reports that he was displeased with White House handling of the Watergate case.

He said it was entirely possible that some of the "rumor, hearsay...and speculations" could be proven accurate.

But he added "I want to make it very clear that I have full confidence in the integrity of President Nixon and in his determination and ability to resolve the Watergate matter to the full satisfaction of the American people."

Watergate also provoked memories of the Teapot Dome scandal which occurred during the Republican administration of Warren G. Harding. In that case naval oil reserves were secretly assigned to a private oil company without competitive bidding. A member of Harding's cabinet served a jail term for bribery in that scandal.

Around the World, Around the Clock

WASHINGTON — Jeb Stuart Magruder, President Nixon's deputy campaign manager, resigned as assistant commerce secretary in the first top-level casualty of the Watergate bugging scandal, according to administration sources.

PHNOM PENH — Communist troops inching toward Phnom Penh by week's end had pushed to within two miles of the city, the closest they have ever been in their three-month-old offensive in Cambodia. The government launched a 1,000-man drive to rout them and U.S. warplanes flew more heavy raids in support of the government troops.

PARIS — The United States and North Vietnam began preliminary talks on the troubled Vietnam cease-fire but it remained doubtful whether a meeting in May between Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho would result.

PINE RIDGE, S.D. — Indians at Wounded Knee took time out from their meetings with federal negotiators to mourn the the first fatality from gunfire between the Indians and federal forces.

ST. LOUIS — The Mississippi River stood at its highest level in history at St. Louis and continued to edge upward, straining dikes and levees and leaving workers involved in what appeared to be a futile battle.

NEW YORK — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger said the United States wanted a new "Atlantic charter" to help solve problems which have arisen between this country and Europe.

A new ray of hope was given for some of the cutback poverty programs when, in Washington, a federal court judge ruled that the administration's dismantling of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) is illegal.

U.S. District Judge William B. Jones said the termination of the agency could not take place unless funds run out or Congress decides to cut them off. He ordered acting OEO director Howard J. Phillips to refrain from closing down OEO agencies. The issue will likely be brought before the Supreme Court of the United States.

A statement by Stephen Cohen, an aide to Boston Mayor Kevin H. White, typifies what is happening in city and town halls throughout the country with respect to revenue sharing:

"We have made it clear the city does not want to lose any federally aided programs, but legally, the city must respond to municipal commitments before it can turn to federally abandoned programs."

If the trend toward putting city needs first continues and unless special revenue sharing — $6.9 billion in its first year covering urban community development, education, manpower training, and law enforcement — is passed by Congress, many poverty programs could be permanently wiped out. Even if new legislation is passed it will be July 1974, before this money becomes available.

Many city and town officials do not know which way to turn. They have pressing city needs and yet do not want to let social-service programs go down the drain. Many municipalities have not yet committed their revenue-sharing money. They are waiting to see what will happen to special revenue sharing.

For those cities already spending their share, this is the pattern:

In Boston, Mayor White's aides say the $18 million revenue sharing received so far will be used to offset the skyrocketing tax rate.

Chicago, too, is using revenue sharing to ease property taxes. Some $27½ million out of the $32 million it received in 1972 will be used to reduce bills payable in 1973.

Nearly $30 million out of $78 million in 1973 revenue-sharing money will be used to keep next year's taxes at the 1972 level.

Other Chicago allocations: meeting police and fire department payrolls, hiring additional staff for the Board of Health, $1 million for the Chicago Public Library, plus paying for other expenses scattered throughout the budget.

Boulder, Colo., so far is spending $156,000 of its $3 million 1972 and 1973 revenue-sharing money in a special anti-crime program in high crime areas. Additionally it is beefing up its citywide police services. Also slated: a city-county criminal justice center and a fire station.

In Wilmington, Del., a spokesman for the mayor's office says the $1.8 million in hand will go to ". . . balance the budget and patch holes."

New York City's relatively huge slice of $203 million for 1972 will be swallowed up by just three items: Police and fire departments $78 million; environmental protection, mostly sanitation, $25 million; $100 million for New York subways — the prime target to save the 35-cent fare.

MAYOR JOSEPH ALIOTO

Atlanta is one of the few cities trying to salvage federal programs. At first it had decided to use federal money to reduce water and sewage bills to homeowners.

The money will be used this way: $750,000 for Economic Opportunity Atlanta, Inc. This is the local "war on proverty" agency which has a total budget of $18 million to $19 million, of which $16 million came from federal funds last year. OEO, now being dismantled, contributed some $3 million a year.

Other uses for revenue-sharing money: a new public-safety building, park acquisition and development, expanding library facilities, and traffic-control signals.

San Francisco's Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and the city's board of supervisors are moving cautiously because they say many federally funded programs are in jeopardy. "We are dealing with a lot of unknowns," said a city government spokeswoman.

Only $5.5 million out of $26.5 million available to the city through July, 1974, has been committed. It will go toward making up a sewer-deficit tax, paying off outstanding legal claims against the city's beleaguered railway system and equipment needs of many city departments.

Mayor Alioto believes city deficits should be paid out of city department surpluses — several are expected — so that revenue-sharing money can be spread as far as possible over as many programs as possible.

Tim Honey, revenue-sharing coordinator for the National League of Cities, says it is his feeling that not many cities are spending their funds on social services "because the cities traditionally have not been engaged in that role. It has been more a function of the county and state government."

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Developments in the Watergate case cast their shadows forward to 1976—the next presidential election year—and backward to the early 20s when the Teapot Dome scandal monopolized the headlines.

Any failure on the part of the administration to clear itself of any taint from the Watergate scandal could disenchant the elecorate and hurt the chances of any Republican with White House aspirations.

And in another major development Nixon yesterday accepted the resignation of Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III, submitted just hours earlier amid reports Gray burned "political dynamite" documents belonging to a confessed conspirator in the Watergate case.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler implied Nixon has asked Gray to step down, saying Nixon had held "a long discussion" with Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst Thursday night and that Kleindienst in turn had talked to Gray.

"This has happened," said Ziegler. "This is my comment. I have nothing further to say at this time."

Meanwhile, the Pentagon Papers trial in Los Angeles took a startling turn when the judge announced prosecutors in Washington had relayed information that two of the Watergate conspirators, G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt Jr., had burglarized the office of defendant Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

One possible contender in '76, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, spoke out this week about reports that he was displeased with White House handling of the Watergate case.

He said it was entirely possible that some of the "rumor, hearsay...and speculations" could be proven accurate.

But he added "I want to make it very clear that I have full confidence in the integrity of President Nixon and in his determination and ability to resolve the Watergate matter to the full satisfaction of the American people."

Watergate also provoked memories of the Teapot Dome scandal which occurred during the Republican administration of Warren G. Harding. In that case naval oil reserves were secretly assigned to a private oil company without competitive bidding. A member of Harding's cabinet served a jail term for bribery in that scandal.

Around the World, Around the Clock

WASHINGTON — Jeb Stuart Magruder, President Nixon's deputy campaign manager, resigned as assistant commerce secretary in the first top-level casualty of the Watergate bugging scandal, according to administration sources.

PHNOM PENH — Communist troops inching toward Phnom Penh by week's end had pushed to within two miles of the city, the closest they have ever been in their three-month-old offensive in Cambodia. The government launched a 1,000-man drive to rout them and U.S. warplanes flew more heavy raids in support of the government troops.

PARIS — The United States and North Vietnam began preliminary talks on the troubled Vietnam cease-fire but it remained doubtful whether a meeting in May between Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho would result.

PINE RIDGE, S.D. — Indians at Wounded Knee took time out from their meetings with federal negotiators to mourn the the first fatality from gunfire between the Indians and federal forces.

ST. LOUIS — The Mississippi River stood at its highest level in history at St. Louis and continued to edge upward, straining dikes and levees and leaving workers involved in what appeared to be a futile battle.

NEW YORK — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger said the United States wanted a new "Atlantic charter" to help solve problems which have arisen between this country and Europe.

Mission Trump Poses Problems; South's Method Proves Correct

What should you do about an opponent's high trump. Should you go about your business in the other suits, allowing the opponent to take his trump whenever he sees fit? Or should you take the time to lead an additional round of trumps to get rid of the menance?

A WISE MOVE

South wisely played a low spade from dummy at first trick. West continued with the ten of spades, and South ducked again. West led still another spade, and South ruffed. The idea was to keep East from leading diamonds, and South was therefore happy to let West win both of the spade tricks.

WHAT TO DO

Now South had to decide what to do about that queen of trumps. He could lead a trump to get rid of the queen, but that would take one trump from his own hand and one from the dummy — a cost of two for one.

In this situation it is often wise to ignore the opponent's trump. You play the other suits and let the opponent ruff in whenever he can

In this case, however, South couldn't afford to ignore East's trump. If South tackled the clubs, East would ruff the third club. South could discard a diamond on this trick, but he would still be stuck with a losing diamond. Down one.

PLAY TRUMPS

To avoid this danger, South led a third trump immediately. This forced out the queen. East returned a diamond, but South put up the ace. Now he could safely run the four good clubs, discarding both of the losing diamonds from his hand

Final Lecture Is Canceled

The final program in the College of Marin's "Consumer Advocates and Action" lecture series, originally scheduled for Monday at 8 p.m. in Olney Hall, has been canceled.

Low attendance at the consumer lectures didn't warrant continuing the series, according to community services director Jared B. Sharon.

With the exception of Ralph Nader's appearance on April 7, the consumer lectures have attracted audiences of only 30 to 40 in the 400-seat hall.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Birthday blunders! How many times have we goofed in setting down the facts about today's famous foursome. Answer "True" or "False."

1. ANN-MARGARET is a bouncy 32 today. This blue-eyed Swedish blonde came to the United States at the age of five, growing up in Wilmette, Ill. and studying at Northwestern University. Is it true her last name is Nelson?

2. CAROLYN JONES, 40 today, is that dark-haired beauty you've seen in Hollywood films for more than 20 years, starting with Paramount Pictures' 1952 production of "The Turning Point." Since then this gal from Amarillo, Tex., has appeared in more than 30 movies. Is it true she was the native girl who had Bob Hope and Bing Crosby panting heavily on the "Road to Bali"?

3. LIONEL BARRYMORE, (1878-1954) made his stage debut as a baby, appearing with his parents, Maurice and Georgia, not long after his birth in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Educated in New York schools, he became a great stage, screen, and radio star, one of the first to win an Academy Award. Is it true he was so handsome that during his lifetime he was called "The Great Profile"?

4. JAMES MONROE (1758-1831) was the fifth President of the United States. The eldest of a Virginia plantation owner and judge, he was a college student when the Revolutionary War broke out. He enlisted, fought in major battles, and was wounded at the Battle of Trenton. Afterward he was elected to the Continental Congress, governor of Virginia, and finally chief executive. Is it true the famous Monroe Doctrine was known in its time simply as "the principles of President Monroe"?

ANSWERS: 1 — False (Olson); 2 — True; 3 — False (his brother John); 4 — True.

DRAMA REVIEW

Ross Valley Production Has Locker Room Theme

By KAY KSANDA

"You Know I Cant' Hear You When the Water's Running," a Ross Valley Players production which opened last night, is built around themes that seem more appropriate for the locker room than the comedy theater.

Robert Anderson's play, which deals with middle-aged indecent exposure in three sketches, might succeed if done lightly like a French omelette but this version seemed broad and heavy.

The first sketch is set in a producer's office where the producer (Roger Garety) is trying to talk a successful playwright (Lorenzo Bernardini) out of a nude scene.

In desperation the producer auditions a homosexual (played by Ralph White) for the part. White, walked away with the scene even before he got down to his red and white shorts.

"You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running," a three-act play by Robert Anderson, produced by Carl Riznik for the Ross Valley Players, and directed by Mona Horwitz, Set design, Peter Weller, Mona Horwitz; set construction, Mario Gianetti; lighting and sound, Sherwin Johnson; costumes, Dorothy Smith; stage manager, Leonard Jared, Joan Breyer; set decorations, Faye Hendricks.

The second is a geriatric conversation between two septuagenarians, Herbert (Peter Weller) and Muriel (Mary Herschend) in rocking chairs.

The palsied shake miraculously stops in the old man's hands as he beams at his fond memories. She gigles and he snickers. They play their parts with exceptional finesse.

The third act concerns Harriet (Virginia O'Brien) and George (Ernest Widlund) who go shopping for twin beds instead of a marriage counselor. After 24 years, Harriet's back hurts, and George sees the doom of his sexual life with the separation between the beds.

A cute young thing comes in to test the springs and leaves her address and practically a road map for George's needs. How wonderful, his problems are solved.

George will dupe his wife and get three beds for the price of two. There is no talk about hidden costs. . . another happy ending.

Maybe this is real life for some, but it seemed more to me like a world of small minds and sick souls.

Director Mona Horwitz did a stunning job with her set, her production and her casting. The Ross Valley Players always put on a good show and though the froth slipped a bit, maybe the audience liked it naughty.

Additional performances are at 8:30 p.m. today and each Friday and Saturday night through May 26 at the Barn in the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

Further Study Of New Zone Ordinance Set

The Belvedere Planning Commission will continue consideration of a new zoning ordinance at an adjourned meeting set for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Community Hall.

The ordinance would bring Belvedere's zoning practices into line with the Belvedere planning study, which recommends several changes in city laws to discourage growth in the community.

City Mgr. William L. Cavalli said commissioners will discuss "The Meat of the Ordinance" — Section III — on Monday. That section deals with minimum lot areas and setbacks, density and open space requirements, height limits, parking regulations, lot coverage and additional building restrictions.

Celebration Of Whole Earth Set On Island

The Community Congregational Church of Tiburon will sponsor a celebration of the Whole Earth on Mt. Livermore, the high point of Angel Island, tomorrow.

The Tiburon ferry will begin taking people at 9 a.m. from the Angel Island ferry dock in downtown Tiburon. Rates are children under 5 free; children 5-11, 75c; all 12 and older, $1.75 round trip, which includes the 25c state parks landing fee.

Those attending should bring a lunch and be prepared for a hike. The state Department of Beaches and Parks will provide transportation for those unable to make the hike.

Dr. Martin Griffin will lead the hike and describe the flora and fauna on the way up. The music for the celebration will be provided by Dixie Piver.

The public celebration will take place about 11:30 a.m.

MUSIC REVIEW

Cellist's Performance Is Tops

By MARTIN FRICK

Angelico Hall at Dominican College has been transformed from an annoying echo chamber into a first-rate concert hall with just the right amount of acoustical tiles having been applied to crucial places on the side and rear walls. Now audiences can follow clearly words and melodic lines and distinguish easily instrumental colors and phrases

The improvements, of course, will require great discipline on the part of performers, for ragged cut-offs and bad tuning can no longer be concealed with ease.

Unfortunately, the Dominican College Chamber Orchestra which presented the first instrumental concert in the improved hall last night, did not always measure up to the challenge.

Only in Mozart's spirited Overture to "Marriage of Figaro" which opened the program did the ensemble achieve success. Conductor Richard Anastasio kept under firm control the brisk, difficult string figure at the beginning and as it plunged, well-tuned, through to the long coda.

The Concerto in B flat Major for Cello, No. 482 by Luigi Boccherini followed with Anastasio's student, Jed Barahal, as soloist. This tall, hulky youth took his cello firmly in hand to turn in a very impressive performance.

Although one is accustomed to more lyricism and less fire in Boccherini, Barahal's confidence and technical skill, particularly in the first movement cadenza, compensated for any stylistic lapses, and the audience responded with a hearty ovation.

Mozart's Symphony No. 35 ("Haffner) followed intermission. Anastasio established early in the first movement that in the five or six symphones that Mozart was yet to write, snatches of a stormy restlessness would penetrate the graceful symphonic forms. This mood was underlined best by the cello section which sang the second movement theme with a dark but clean unison in the second variation.

Satirical Variety Show Will Open Next Friday

The 19th annual Rhubarb Review a satirical variety show, will open Friday and Saturday at the Tamalpais Improvement Club Hall, Marin Avenue and Tennessee Valley Road.

The performances will be staged May 11-12, 18-19 and 25-26.

The doors open at 7:45 p.m. and the show begins at 8:45 p.m. each night, according to publicity director Jack Adams. Because of limited space, seating will be on a first-come, first-served basis.

Directed by Bernie Healey, the three-act review will feature a cast of 20 performers, including a mother and daughter team.

Gerald Kelly and Jack Walker are serving as co-managers of the show, which may be the longest-running community variety show in the Bay area.

DRAMA REVIEW

Ross Valley Production Has Locker Room Theme

By KAY KSANDA

"You Know I Cant' Hear You When the Water's Running," a Ross Valley Players production which opened last night, is built around themes that seem more appropriate for the locker room than the comedy theater.

Robert Anderson's play, which deals with middle-aged indecent exposure in three sketches, might succeed if done lightly like a French omelette but this version seemed broad and heavy.

The first sketch is set in a producer's office where the producer (Roger Garety) is trying to talk a successful playwright (Lorenzo Bernardini) out of a nude scene.

In desperation the producer auditions a homosexual (played by Ralph White) for the part. White, walked away with the scene even before he got down to his red and white shorts.

"You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running," a three-act play by Robert Anderson, produced by Carl Riznik for the Ross Valley Players, and directed by Mona Horwitz, Set design, Peter Weller, Mona Horwitz; set construction, Mario Gianetti; lighting and sound, Sherwin Johnson; costumes, Dorothy Smith; stage manager, Leonard Jared, Joan Breyer; set decorations, Faye Hendricks.

Soviets Agree To Share Their Knowledge Of Quakes With U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO AP — Russian scientists are ahead of the United States in earthquake prediction and research but have agreed to exchange information which should more than double knowledge in the field, U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston said here today.

Cranston, D-Calif., and Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., met with Russian scientists before launching a daylong hearing on bills they have introduced to encourage earthquake research.

The three Soviet seismologists appeared with Cranston at a new conference but declined to answer any questions. They have spent several days at the U.S. Geological Survey's National Center for Earthquake Research at Menlo Park, Calif. The Russians have successfully predicted three quakes but the system needs refinement before being considered reliable, Cranston said.

Cranston said he hopes the bills, one of which is geared to earthquake prediction, and the other toward engineering research on buildings can be passed without difficulty.

Asked whether President Nixon's budget cutbacks would allow much research, the Democrat said: "We do not have one-man government. Congress is going to find a way to make determinations within a ceiling where to spend money."

He said for a relatively small expenditure, considerable research can be done in the earthquake field. Cranston said he thought this country could come up with an earthquake prediction system "within five years."

Dr. Robert Wallace, chief of the center, said the U.S. budget for earthquake research is approximately $13 million while the Russians spend $25 million.

Cranston and Hollings, chairman of the Senate commerce subcommittee on oceans and atmosphere, conducted a similar hearing in Los Angeles Thursday and toured the wreckage of Olive View Hospital, a victim of the 1971 San Fernando Valley earthquake.

City Efforts Against Crime To Be Studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A select House committee will look next week at various cities' attempts to deal with people who commit repeat crimes, Rep. Claude Pepper, DFla., said yesterday.

Pepper said his Select Committee on Crime will hold a week's hearings, starting Tuesday, "to identify unique methods put in use by prosecutors and the courts to identify and expeditiously bring to justice individuals charged with repeat criminal offenses."

The committee will also examine the "victimless crimes," relatively minor offenses that often clog court dockets.

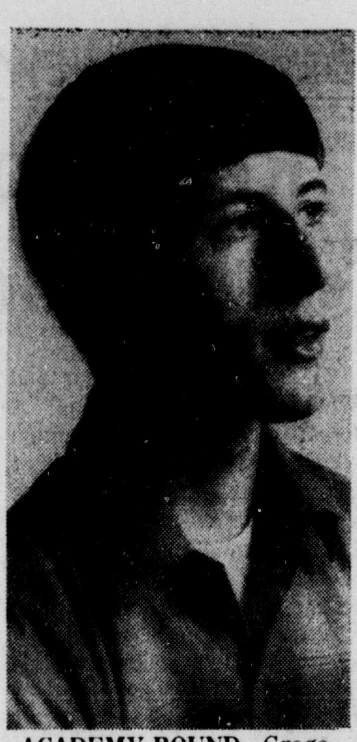
"If we hope to reduce significantly the frequency of street crime, then we must divert from the criminal court docket as many of the relatively minor offenses as is possible so that the repeat offender can be brought to trial and prosecuted without delay," Pepper said in a statement.

Tuesday's witnesses will be Philadelphia District Attorney Arlen Specter, Flint, Mich., District Attorney Robert Leonard, and Judge Lisa Richette of the major crimes division of Philadelphia Common Pleas Court.

Wednesday's witnesses will be Houston District Attorney Carol Vance, Los Angeles District Attorney Joseph Busch, and Judge Joseph Weis of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Pittsburgh.

Thursday's witnesses will be Judge Charles Halleck of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, U.S. Attorney Harold Titus of the District of Columbia, Professor Daniel Meador of the University of Virginia Law School, and Judge Albert V. Brown of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Alexandria, Va.

Witnesses Tuesday May 8 will be Baltimore District Attorney Milton Allen, Maryland Court of Appeals Judge Charles Moylan, and chief Judge Adrian Spears of the U.S. District Court in San Antonio, Tex.



ACADEMY BOUND—Gregory R. Semrau, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Semrau of Tiburon, has been appointed to the U.S. Air Force Academy. A student at College of Marin, he is a member of the Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Society and is the founder of the Tiburon Astronomical Society.

Nuclear Fusion Said Energy Key

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., a former nuclear research scientist, said yesterday that nuclear fusion -the source of the hydrogen bomb's awesome power — could solve the world's energy problems for millions of years.

The know-how, McCormack said, may become available within 20 years or so —and perhaps sooner if research is stepped up immediately.

McCormack said scientists feel that the use of nuclear fusion for the generation of electricity may become technically feasible within six to seven years. But to make the process economically feasible will take longer.

Because of its great promise, McCormack said, he will ask that $11.4 million be added to the Atomic Energy Commission budget for controlled thermonuclear fusion research in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The Washington Democrat, a researcher at the Hanford Project for 20 years before his election to Congress in 1970, is chairman of the energy subcommittee of the House Science and Astronautics Committee and a member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy.

"Nuclear fusion, the reaction that powers the sun, the stars and hydrogen bombs, offers the promise of limitless, economically feasible and virtually clean energy for all people for all time," McCormack said.

McCormack said the needed fuel —heavy hydrogen, or deuterium, as it is known to scientists —is available to all nations because it is found in minute quantities in all water.

"There is enough deuterium available on earth for boundless supplies of energy for all people for millions of years," he said.

The basic problem, McCormack said, is the need for a way to control the fusion reaction in order to convert its energy into electricity. Research in this area, he said, is still in its infancy.

But "extremely encouraging progress" has been made recently, he said, and scientists now feel that they are within "striking range" of a solution to the problem after "20 years of frustraion."

The congressman said major advances had been made in determining how the fusion reaction might be controlled through research at three U.S. laboratories — Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Los Alamos, N.M., and the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory.

For that reason, McCormack said, proposed spending for fusion research should be increased from the $47.3 million budgeted for fiscal 1974 to $58.7 million.

The $11.4 million proposed addition, he said, was not "just a blue-sky guess," but a carefully planned program for funding 10 specific projects at AEC laboratories and at several universities and research institutes.

"Having fusion electric power even one year nearer vastly strengthens our bargaining position with the oil-producing nations of the Middle East," McCormack said. Even one reactor, he said, could reduce oil imports by $500 million a year.

Gun Is Carried In White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan, who got himself made a deputy U.S. marshal so he can carry a pistol in Washington, has carried his pistol into the White House.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler was asked Thursday about Brennan's gun-carrying habit.

"He does carry his gun into the White House," Ziegler replied.

Two-Headed Boy Is Born In Argentina

TUCUMAN, Argentina AP — A two-headed baby boy was born this week in Tucuman, the doctor who delivered the child reported.

Dr. Raul J. Schwan said Thursday the heads react independently but that the torso has only one set of internal organs. Both heads are well-formed and the baby can be fed through either mouth, the doctor said. He said the baby was in good health and mentally alert. Schwan said the baby was delivered prematurely by Caesarean on Monday at a regional clinic. The doctor declined to identify the mother and father, but said the woman was young and in good health.

The baby was flown to Buenos Aires on Thursday and taken to the Genetic Institute for the Deformed to be examined by specialists.

Sonoma Hearing Is Slated On Revenue-Sharing

The Sonoma County Board of supervisors will hold a public hearing at 9 a.m. Wednesday on how to spend the $2.9 million in federal revenue-sharing money the county will receive.

The Petaluma City Council has asked that funds be set aside to help finance a new library while the Rohnert Park City Council has asked for funds toward the purchase of a regional park.

County department heads, other cities and groups will also request a portion of the funds.

Soviets Agree To Share Their Knowledge Of Quakes With U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO AP — Russian scientists are ahead of the United States in earthquake prediction and research but have agreed to exchange information which should more than double knowledge in the field, U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston said here today.

Cranston, D-Calif., and Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., met with Russian scientists before launching a daylong hearing on bills they have introduced to encourage earthquake research.

The three Soviet seismologists appeared with Cranston at a new conference but declined to answer any questions. They have spent several days at the U.S. Geological Survey's National Center for Earthquake Research at Menlo Park, Calif. The Russians have successfully predicted three quakes but the system needs refinement before being considered reliable, Cranston said.

Robert Carson Is A Man With Two Countries

Industrialist Divides Time Between England And Marin

By DOROTHY GARDINER

ROBERT N. CARSON, with industrial ties to two countries, the United States and Great Britain, divides his time now between homes in rural England and Marin County, as he continues an active life in retirement. His yearly stays in Marin enable him to keep in contact with old friends, and to observe, not always with approval, the changes in the county to which his father moved the family business after the 1906 earthquake.

(Independent-Journal photo)

Robert N. Carson, retired British industrialist and scion of an old San Rafael manufacturing family, contends, despite his background, that San Rafael should have kept industry out and remained a suburban community.

Now the head of an Anglo-American family, he spends eight months a year in a country home north of London and the remainder in an elegant Warren Callister-designed redwood and glass showplace in the San Rafael hills.

On his yearly trips to visit old friends ("there are fewer all the time,") to play golf and to occasionally hunt duck, he has been distressed to see Marin losing the "tops of its hills" to developers ("it looks a bit messy"), the filling-in of the Bay, and the way in which state-owned roads have cut through the county at their "own convenience,"

LAYING THE blame on oldtimers such as himself, "who should have taken responsibility and didn't," he said the county's development was left to newcomers — many of whom thought of Marin principally as a good place to make a living.

In 1929 as head of his family's San Rafael glove manufacturing firm, the 25-year old Carson became chairman of a local "booster committee" which fought to bring Hamilton Field, the Army's first fighter base in California, to Marin.

Believing the field would benefit a county which was "dependent on one rail line that didn't give decent service," he worked tirelessly for three years to locate the base north of San Rafael on land owned by the pioneer Pacheco family and California Packing Corp.

ON MAY 21, 1932, he was the first person to receive a telegram from Washington, D.C., stating the Army Bill authorizing the field had passed the U.S. House of Representatives.

A handsome, distinguished and witty raconteur at 71, he speaks freely about his childhood in Ross and San Francisco and school days at Lowell and the University of California where he played piano with two friends — Horace Heidt and Ernie Heckscher.

In the 1920s and '30s Carson was a popular performer in Marin, often invited to play the piano at parties.

ON THE SERIOUS side, he speaks of Socialist Norway's problem of the young people leaving the country; drugs and crimes in cities all over the world, and the Irish-English problem (he favors the English side and feels it's wrong for Americans to send money to lengthen the conflict.)

He was born in a Victorian mansion, the only house, he says, on Van Ness Avenue to survive the 1906 earthquake and fire. It was this disaster that motivated his father Robert N. Carson Sr. to move his firm across the Bay to San Rafael.

(The Carson Manufacturing Co. is now headed by Carson's nephew, T. Carson O'Connell, who is only five years his uncle's junior. Years ago the firm stopped manufacturing gloves and now makes plastic products.)

IN 1906 THE Carsons built a summer and weekend home in the Fernhill Tract of Ross.

In those days in Ross "everyone knew everyone else," Carson recalls. "Remember I only had a bicycle and pair of skates and couldn't get very far from home."

"Fires were great social occasions," he laughed, recalling his brother-in-law Thomas O'Connell and the town's two other volunteer firemen rushing along with all the neighbors to the scenes of the fire.

"The firemen had hats, phones, hoses and a cart, but no horse," he said, and few houses were saved.

BUT EVERYONE pitched in donating everything from bedding to clothing to give the victims "a new start."

After graduating from University of California at Berkeley (where he studied business) he married his English-born high school sweetheart, Eileen Robbins, whom he met at a Lowell-Tamalpais basketball game.

The couple moved to Ross and Carson became head of his family's firm on his father's death.

In 1937 the family now including a son and daughter, moved to England, "arriving just in time for World War II."

CARSON HAD gone abroad to become managing director of his father-in-law's firm, Elson and Robbins, which was manufacturing spring seating for automobiles, beds and furniture.

Ernest Robbins, a "fine marine engineer," left his England at the beginning of World War I when told he was too old to fight, came to the United States where he enlisted, and later became a U.S. citizen, Carson said.

After the war Robbins became Seattle Port Engineer and later moved to Corte Madera at which time Carson met his daughter.

Eventually forgiving the British, Robbins returned to England and took back his nationality.

DURING THE second World War the company switched to mechanical springs for planes and guns and in 1950 became the first European firm licensed to make vinyl foam paneling for automobile interiors.

Carson had conceived the idea to go into plastics on his yearly trip to San Rafael where the Marin family's firm was converting to plastic products.

By achieving "volume output with a marginal amount of labor," the English firm, from which Carson retired as managing director in 1965, has grown into a "thriving business."

It owns three plants — located within a few miles of his home at Attenborough — and employs more than 2,000 who work in three shifts around the clock. Fifty percent of the company stock is owned by two or three families including Carson's.

THE FIRM HAS never been struck, which, Carson pointed out, is a feat in a country of frequent labor disputes and stoppages.

Since his retirement, Robert Carson has continued to arise every morning to work in an office in "the back garden." At noon he goes to town for lunch, returning at night, which, he says, is ideal for his wife, Eileen, who "runs the house the way she wants."

As the Province of Derby's Masonic Grand Lodge Master, he is the highest ranking Mason in his county.

While in San Rafael he enjoys feeding some 60 or 70 quail and the many raccoons and foxes that roam the wooded hillside behind and around his home. He chuckles at the fact "the foxes are hooked on marshmallows."

Robert Carson remembers the days in Marin when "everyone knew everyone else" and when "fires were a great social occasion."

Industrialist Divides Time Between England And Marin

By DOROTHY GARDINER

ROBERT N. CARSON, with industrial ties to two countries, the United States and Great Britain, divides his time now between homes in rural England and Marin County, as he continues an active life in retirement. His yearly stays in Marin enable him to keep in contact with old friends, and to observe, not always with approval, the changes in the county to which his father moved the family business after the 1906 earthquake.

From The Deb Ball To A 20-Mile Hike

"Young lady, in Marin, it isn't who you are. . .It's what you are and what you contribute. . ."

This advice was given Mrs. Edgar Lindner of Kentfield, a founder and past president of the Marin Charitable Foundation, oundation, almost 30 years ago by a member of Marin's prominent Kent family.

For generations Marin women have volunteered time and energy, working for the betterment of Marin County and its people.

In recent years the dedicated women members of the Marin Charitable Foundation have labored to make their foundation the county's biggest contributor to youth.

AS FOUNDER and sponsor of the former Marin Debutante Ball and, for two years, cosponsor of the Marin Hike for Help, the Foundation has raised and given almost $90,000 to 21 youth agencies such as Big Brothers, Marin Civic Ballet Assn., Child Center, Marin City Boy's Club and Center Point.

Tomorrow the Foundation hopes to pass the $100,000 mark following the second 20-mile Marin Hike for Help through the Ross Valley. By 1975 it plans to increase the amount to $150,000, according to newly installed president Mrs. Gordon Jacobs of Mill Valley.

Youngsters of all ages, bankers, businessmen, housewives, Rotarians (three San Rafael Rotarians over 70 last year completed the trek), merchants and working men are expected to turn out tomorrow for hike registration at the College of Marin Gymnasium in Kentfield between 8 and 10:30 a.m.

THEY WILL WALK for pledges (from pennies to dollars) that will be multiplied by the total number of miles hiked. The proceeds will be divided equally between the Marin Charitable Foundation and cosponsor People-to-People Health Foundation's Project Hope.

The Marin Charitable Foundations' beginnings go back to the fall of 1961 when the Founders' Auxiliary of Marin General Hospital appointed a committee to initiate a debutante ball as a fund-raiser for the hospital.

Auxiliary President Mrs. Harrison McNear Leppo of Mill Valley along with Mrs. Fred Drexler Jr. of Mill Valley, Mrs. Ralph Noah of Belvedere and Maude Lindner asked Mrs. Wallace Scott of Belvedere and Mrs. Fred Herrington (then Mrs. Frank Stratford) both "very hardworking knowledgeable women" to act as cochairmen of a Debutante Ball committee.

FOLLOWING THE first Debutante Ball in 1962, the committee became the Debutante Branch of Marin General Hospital Volunteers and early in 1964 was incorporated as the Marin Charitable Foundation to donate proceeds "to various youth agencies and organizations in Marin County," according to Mrs. Leppo, who today is a member and past president of both the hospital's Founders' Auxiliary and the Foundation.

Deciding to pattern the Marin party on the East Bay's fundraising Winter Ball rather than the San Francisco Cotillion, "a party for its own sake" the ladies went to work.

The general planning chairman, Ida Scott, had a long history of executive experience as Belvedere's first city councilwoman and onetime city planning and fire commissioner. She also had been a founder of the Marin Art and Garden Center, the center's Northgate Group, its Laurel House Antiques, past president of the Marin Music Chest and longtime member and director of Sunny Hills.

"THERE WAS A great deal of interest, but we worked terribly hard," recalls Mrs. Frank Baumgarten of Fairfax, first chairman for the ball itself.

Mary Baumgarten, who made her debut in San Francisco in 1926, is also a former director of the San Francisco Junior League, Women's Athletic Club, Century Club and Ross Valley Guild of Sunny Hills, and form-

THE DEBUTANTE Ball, originated in 1962 by what was to become the Marin Charitable Foundation and held first at the Peacock Gap Golf and Country Club before being moved to the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel (where this photo was taken in 1968) was far more than just a social event. It was also a major fund-raising project for youth agencies and organizations in the county.

INTO ANY fund-raising event for charitable purposes must go a lot of labor and preparation on the part of volunteers. The Marin Charitable Foundation now directs the energies and talents that once went into the staging of the Marin Debutante Ball into the sponsorship of the very different Marin Hike for Help. Engaged in making posters and other publicity on behalf of the 1973 hike, to be held tomorrow, starting from the College of Marin campus at 10:30 a.m. and following a winding 20-mile course back to the college grounds in Kentfield, are Foundation and Junior Auxiliary members, left to right, Kathy Bowler, Foundation President Mrs. Gordon Jacobs, Lyn Arnold, hike coordinator Mrs. William Mosden, Kathy McCallister and Kathy Lee.

Dancing And Hiking For Marin Youth Service Agencies

er Marin chairman of Guide Dogs for the Blind Inc.

Mrs. Baumgarten began her assignment by getting bids from florists, clubs, caterers and orchestras.

She was assisted by Maude Lindner who remembers striving "to make the ball as economical, yet as beautiful as possible."

MRS. LINDNER, a member of the hospital's Founders' Auxiliary, had begun work for several years before 1961 "researching and planning a possible ball," according to Florence Leppo. (Mrs. Lindner was also a member of the Northgate Group, Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary, past president of the Sunny Hills board and former chairman of the Grape Festival.)

The women arranged for the first ball to be held Dec. 20, 1962, at the Peacock Gap Golf and Country Club. (The ball was held there for the next five years until it was moved to the St. Francis Hotel's Mural Room in San Francisco.)

Twenty young women chosen as "outstanding and representative" girls ("stable members of stable Marin families,") accepted invitations to bow at the first ball. Their parents agreed to donate $350. (Later as costs continued to rise, the contribution was increased to $500.)

DURING THE summer and fall the debutantes were honored at a long series of tea dances, supper parties, dances, luncheons and barbecues.

(Over the years the Marin Ball festivities became gala and on Nov. 6, 1966, the San Francisco Examiner's Gerald Adams wrote in the California Living section:

"Never in the annals of San Francisco debutante bashes has there been one to compare with the party Sonoma rancher Dewey Donnell and his wife threw for their (Marin debutante) daughter Nancy, 17, at their hilltop home recently. . ."

Members of Marin's "old guard society" were asked to support the ball by becoming honorary sponsors with a $100 donation. Early honorary sponsors included the late Mrs. Norman B. Livermore, the late Mrs. Benjamin Dibblee, the late Miss Louise Boyd, Mrs. Albert Evers, Miss Elsa Korbel, Mrs. Milton Esberg, Mrs. E. G. Schmiedell Sr. and Mrs. Harry Johnson.

ON THE NIGHT of the first ball a portable dance floor was set up in the clubhouse's main dining room and a buffet supper table in the cocktail lounge.

The outside paths and entrance were lighted by tiki torches and a canvas tent covered a dance floor on the club's terrace garden.

At 9 p.m. a white supper — consomme, creamed chicken in patty shells, white sherbet and coffee — was served to the debs and their escorts in the downstairs lounge area.

An hour later flood lights illuminated the dais, flanked by 10 feet tall Christmas trees trimmed with gold bows and lights, as the first of the 20 debs, dressed in floor length white gowns, long white gloves and white slippers, entered to make her curtsy.

BANDLEADER Ray Hackett (who was heard to say the ball "was the best in the Bay Area") struck a downbeat and the girls waltzed the first dance with their fathers.

The 88-year-old Percy King, who had been leading the San Francisco Cotillion for decades, was on hand to lead the Marin cotillion figure. The debs were introduced by Ernest Mendenhall of Belvedere, who continued doing so for the next four years.

(In later years, this service was taken over by Judge Jordan Martinelli of San Rafael; Russell Smith of Ross and Justice Richard Sims of Belvedere.)

Over the years the Marin ball

er Marin chairman of Guide Dogs for the Blind Inc.

Mrs. Baumgarten began her assignment by getting bids from florists, clubs, caterers and orchestras.

She was assisted by Maude Lindner who remembers striving "to make the ball as economical, yet as beautiful as possible."

MRS. LINDNER, a member of the hospital's Founders' Auxiliary, had begun work for several years before 1961 "researching and planning a possible ball," according to Florence Leppo. (Mrs. Lindner was also a member of the Northgate Group, Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary, past president of the Sunny Hills board and former chairman of the Grape Festival.)

The women arranged for the first ball to be held Dec. 20, 1962, at the Peacock Gap Golf and Country Club. (The ball was held there for the next five years until it was moved to the St. Francis Hotel's Mural Room in San Francisco.)

Twenty young women chosen as "outstanding and representative" girls ("stable members of stable Marin families,") accepted invitations to bow at the first ball. Their parents agreed to donate $350. (Later as costs continued to rise, the contribution was increased to $500.)

DURING THE summer and fall the debutantes were honored at a long series of tea dances, supper parties, dances, luncheons and barbecues.

(Over the years the Marin Ball festivities became gala and on Nov. 6, 1966, the San Francisco Examiner's Gerald Adams wrote in the California Living section:

"Never in the annals of San Francisco debutante bashes has there been one to compare with the party Sonoma rancher Dewey Donnell and his wife threw for their (Marin debutante) daughter Nancy, 17, at their hilltop home recently. . ."

Members of Marin's "old guard society" were asked to support the ball by becoming honorary sponsors with a $100 donation. Early honorary sponsors included the late Mrs. Norman B. Livermore, the late Mrs. Benjamin Dibblee, the late Miss Louise Boyd, Mrs. Albert Evers, Miss Elsa Korbel, Mrs. Milton Esberg, Mrs. E. G. Schmiedell Sr. and Mrs. Harry Johnson.

ON THE NIGHT of the first ball a portable dance floor was set up in the clubhouse's main dining room and a buffet supper table in the cocktail lounge.

The outside paths and entrance were lighted by tiki torches and a canvas tent covered a dance floor on the club's terrace garden.

At 9 p.m. a white supper — consomme, creamed chicken in patty shells, white sherbet and coffee — was served to the debs and their escorts in the downstairs lounge area.

An hour later flood lights illuminated the dais, flanked by 10 feet tall Christmas trees trimmed with gold bows and lights, as the first of the 20 debs, dressed in floor length white gowns, long white gloves and white slippers, entered to make her curtsy.

BANDLEADER Ray Hackett (who was heard to say the ball "was the best in the Bay Area") struck a downbeat and the girls waltzed the first dance with their fathers.

The 88-year-old Percy King, who had been leading the San Francisco Cotillion for decades, was on hand to lead the Marin cotillion figure. The debs were introduced by Ernest Mendenhall of Belvedere, who continued doing so for the next four years.

(In later years, this service was taken over by Judge Jordan Martinelli of San Rafael; Russell Smith of Ross and Justice Richard Sims of Belvedere.)

Over the years the Marin ball

Marin Charitable Foundation Raises Funds For Youth

Event Tomorrow Should Boost Contributions To $100,000 Mark

became a "three generation party" and an occasion for intimate family gatherings with grandparents and parents attending, recalled Mrs. Linder, 1966 ball chairman whose daughter Jane bowed at the 1967 party.

"THE FATHERS liked it — they came into their own and were so proud," recalls Mrs. Russell Smith of Ross, one of the original founders and early presidents whose two granddaughters bowed at the Marin party.

"The ball was good training for the girls. They were taught to walk across the floor, curtsy," she added.

Mrs. Smith, a hardworking volunteer who had been a founder of the Ross Valley players, the Marin Art and Garden Center, its Northgate Group and Decorator's Guild as well as the Thursday Music Club, and the beginner of the Sunny Hills Guilds during the World War II years, was impressed with "the way people worked on the debutante balls."

Following the 1963 ball, the Marin Charitable Foundation was incorporated with the purpose "to raise monies for charitable purposes."

THREE MEN who worked on the incorporation — Frank Baumgarten, a San Francisco attorney; Fred Enemark, a Marin County businessman, and Russell Smith, a Bank of America executive — were elected honorary members of the Foundation.

(Today the Foundation has 25 men working on an advisory committee.)

Mrs. Baumgarten, who was president at the time, set about to recruit young married women in the county to build up the Foundation membership.

Other presidents over the years include: Mrs. Scott; Mrs. Russell Smith; Mrs. Leppo; the late Mrs. Samuel D. Archibald of Kentfield; Mrs. Lindner and Mrs. F. William Mosden of Ross, the first to serve two consecutive terms.

IN 1970 FOLLOWING a beautiful ball — the last social event held in the now defunct Mural Room — the Marin Charitable Foundation cancelled its annual event.

High costs and the fact "the girls were no longer interested in making debuts" contributed to the cancellation, Mrs. Lindner, Foundation president at the time, related.

"Times have changed and the Marin Charitable Foundation had to change with them in order to survive," added Eleanor Mosden.

"The girls were committed to community activities," Mrs. Lindner said, and considered money "spent on gowns and parties, a waste."

DURING ELEANOR Mosden's first year in office a number of "think tank" meetings were held as Foundation members and officers sought a fund-raising plan to replace the ball. ("1971 was the one year we existed without raising money.")

It was up to Eleanor Mosden — an energetic and imaginative founder of the San Francisco Symphony Assn.; Junior Auxiliary of Arts and Sciences at Oakland's Mosswood Park; past president of the Pinocchio Chapter of the Children's Home Society; founder of Kappa Kappa Gamma Alumnae Assn. of the East Bay and sustaining member of the San Francisco Junior League —to find a way to save the Foundation.

Seventy girls, possible debutante candidates, were invited to a meeting and asked what would interest them.

AS A RESULT an integrated Junior Auxiliary open to all girls in Marin's public and private high schools was formed. These girls are involved in fund-raising and groomed to be the dedicated civic leaders of tomorrow, Mrs. Mosden said.

As a result last year the Marin Charitable Foundation and Project Hope co-sponsored the first Marin Hike for Help which turned out 1,200 hikers and grossed almost $27,000.

The two foundations divided the net proceeds with the local organizations turning its $11,000 over to 10 Marin youth agencies.

LOCAL AGENCIES requesting a Foundation grant are required to apply in writing before Sept. 1. Applications are reviewed by a 12-member committee including the Foundation's president, a representative from the Junior Auxiliary and a member of the men's advisory committee.

After receiving a written application for funding, the Allocations Committee visits the agency, interviews its staff, reviews its findings and if approved, presents the application to the Marin Charitable Foundation board of directors and membership for final approval.

Checks are mailed June 1 with the Foundation requiring a brief written progress report on use of its funds and an evaluation of the program six months later.

TODAY UNDER the leadership of President Mary Jacobs, the Foundation is working to increase its membership and income. She is a sustaining member of the San Francisco Junior League and past president of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority of the Bay Area, the Arthritis Foundation of San Mateo County and Katharine Branson Parents' Assn.

There are now 127 women members and 85 girls in the Junior Auxiliary.

There will be more fund-raising projects — a supper concert featuring the George Shearing Trio is already scheduled at the Windsor Wineries near Healdsburg July 22 —and possibly more hikes in the future.

The Foundation for the first time in its history is now appealing for donations, gifts and bequests, and according to some members, some day Marin may once again have a Debutante Ball.

According to Eleanor Mosden, hike coordinator for the last two years, "the Marin Charitable Foundation will continue to help today's youth, and train that youth to contribute to the youth of tomorrow."

WHAT IS TODAY the Marin Charitable Foundation had its beginnings as a committee formed to promote and conduct a debutante ball as a fund-raising project for Marin General Hospital, and was first known as the Debutante Branch of the Marin General Hospital Volunteers. But in 1964, with incorporation as the Foundation, came a broadening of the list of beneficiaries to include various youth causes. Included in 1965 was the representation of the Carol Farley Memorial Fund scholarship for nursing through the San Rafael General Hospital. And a news photo that year showed, left to right, Mrs. James Pressley, 1964 debutante ball chairman; Mrs. Harry Johnson, 1965 ball chairman; and Mrs. Frank Baumgartner, Foundation president, with Dr. Aaron Undersma, president of the Marin Mental Health Foundation, at that hospital watching a demonstration of an anesthetic machine by nurse Gladys Young.

The Hillside House That Yonkow Built

You don't have to destroy a hill in order to build a home on its slopes or peak.

This is the firm conviction of John Yonkow, landscape gardener and member of the Fairfax Design Review Board.

The house and terrain, no matter how steep, can coexist in perfect compatibility, Yonkow believes. And as proof of this he can point to his own home at 151 Canyon Road, Fairfax, constructed on a hillside with a minimum excavation and loss of trees, and with little other injury to the area's existing ecology.

YONKOW WAS born in Bulgaria, in the Balkan mountains, and says: "I'm a mountain boy at heart." Thus his choice of a hillside building site for his home.

But there were other influences in John Yonkow's background that are also reflected in his feeling for nature, and in his abhorrence of its defacement.

Yonkow came to this country from Europe as a young man of 30 immediately after World War II. His last years in Europe had been made rootless and his profession as a ski instructor and competitor uncertain by the war.

HE CAME TO Marin in 1950 "because this county looked to me like Switzerland, and Switzerland, in turn, reminded me of that section of the Balkans where I was born," and for a time he was associated with the late landscape architect Hermann Hein.

Many of his ideas on the preservation of the ecology he attributes to Hein.

Yonkow for a time was also the gardener in charge of the grounds of the late conservationist and civic leader Caroline Livermore, with quarters on the estate.

WITH HER DEATH, in 1968, Yonkow pressed all the harder a search he had begun years earlier for a building site upon which to construct a home of his own. One absolute requirement: a slope — the very kind of location avoided by most builders.

Yonkow found what he wanted at the Canyon Road address, and proceeded with the building of the home. But unlike so many developers and builders, Yonkow approached his project with a determination to fit the structure to the plot of ground, rather than to employ the bulldozer to scrape and level and mold the hillside into an easy but uninteresting building site.

"The only trees we removed were those growing upon the actual ground upon which the house was to rest," Yonkow says. And thus native oaks, madrones, buckeyes, toyons "and other trees whose names I do not even know" still grace the premises.

"THESE ARE far superior to eucalyptus and acacias or other imported species that often cannot survive in our climate, succumbing to frost or drouth," the landscape gardener says.

Spared, too, were the fields of wildflowers — California poppies, larkspur, columbines, wild forget-me-nots and, again, flowers Yonkow cannot identify but can admire.

The interesting rock formations of the area were retained. And in the one small area where some excavation was required, Yonkow healed the wound by returning native stone to create a miniature rock garden. He is still at work on a backyard waterfall.

YONKOW ADDED color to his landscape by sowing additional flowers, many of them Alpine varieties that flourished in the craggy rocks. English daisies, too, thrived, to add their beauty to the grounds. And Yonkow chose the rougher, tougher grasses in preference to less durable, more cultivated strains, for those areas not covered by rocks or trees.

The house itself was completed in 1969 after two years of work — a cantilevered redwood structure that nestles comfortably amidst the trees and rocks. A designer friend, Walter Stevens, drew up the plans, refining the ideas brought to him by Yonkow. And the owner, with a carpenter's help, did most of the actual building.

Yonkow estimates that 60 per cent of the work is his own. Exceptions include the plumbing and electrical installations.

PURPOSELY, Yonkow acquired the 15,000 square feet that gives him, wife Annegret and two children, Barbara, 5, and Nikolina, 11, complete privacy from neighbors, their trees and hillside serving as a natural screen.

"I wanted a home that integrated rather than clashed with the natural environment," Yonkow says, and he confesses to being a crusader for the cause of "adjusting our development and our buildings to our hill environment, and not vice versa."

"I was an ecologist before that term was popularized," he laughs.

THERE ARE, he says, two concepts for building houses on hills:

1. Using the grader indiscriminately to level or terrace the slope, and thus creating a flat surface for the building — "a very wasteful approach."

2. Adapting the house to the existing terrain with a minimum of excavation and tree-cutting and a maximum use of the natural materials.

"I chose that second concept," he says. And the result, he adds, is "a happy marriage between the natural landscape and the building architecture."

THE BENEFITS have been many, Yonkow adds. In addition to the preserved beauty of the site, and to the privacy, there is the view the Yonkows enjoy from their yard and home of the wooded Cascade Valley beneath them. And the security afforded them by trees, plants, grasses and rock when other denuded hillsides give way to erosion under the onslaughts of rain and wind.

And finally there is the joyful feeling that Yonkow revels in at never being far from nature, even inside his home.

"I call it my little Matterhorn," he says of the hillside refuge.

A Weaver Who Works From A Wheelchair

By DON KEOWN

In 1955, just before the genius of Dr. Jonas Salk tamed the savage crippler, polio struck down a young San Francisco housewife and mother along with thousands of others.

Since then, for 18 years, Gayle Luchessa has lived in a wheelchair.

And yet today she can say, without irony, in utter sincerity: "I guess it was a good thing that it happened to me. I never thought then that I would ever say such a thing. But it is really the way I feel now."

She explains that her confinement has forced her to concentrate her time, energy and talent upon her art. "I am painting and weaving now when, otherwise, I might be out on the tennis courts with my husband." And art has enriched her life immeasurably.

MR. AND MRS. Donald Luchessa never let her encounter with the dreaded ailment gain the upper hand or limit her horizons.

From the moment of her release from the hospital, the Luchessas resumed a life style aimed at providing the fullest possible freedom for the young woman who would never walk again.

The first step was a change of home, from their San Francisco flat to Marin County and a new house at 55 Green Valley Court in San Anselmo's beautiful Sleepy Hollow district that was built on a single level especially for Gayle Luchessa and her wheelchair.

Further freedom came with the gift by Donald Luchessa, who is with Pacific Telephone, to his wife of an automobile equipped with hand controls.

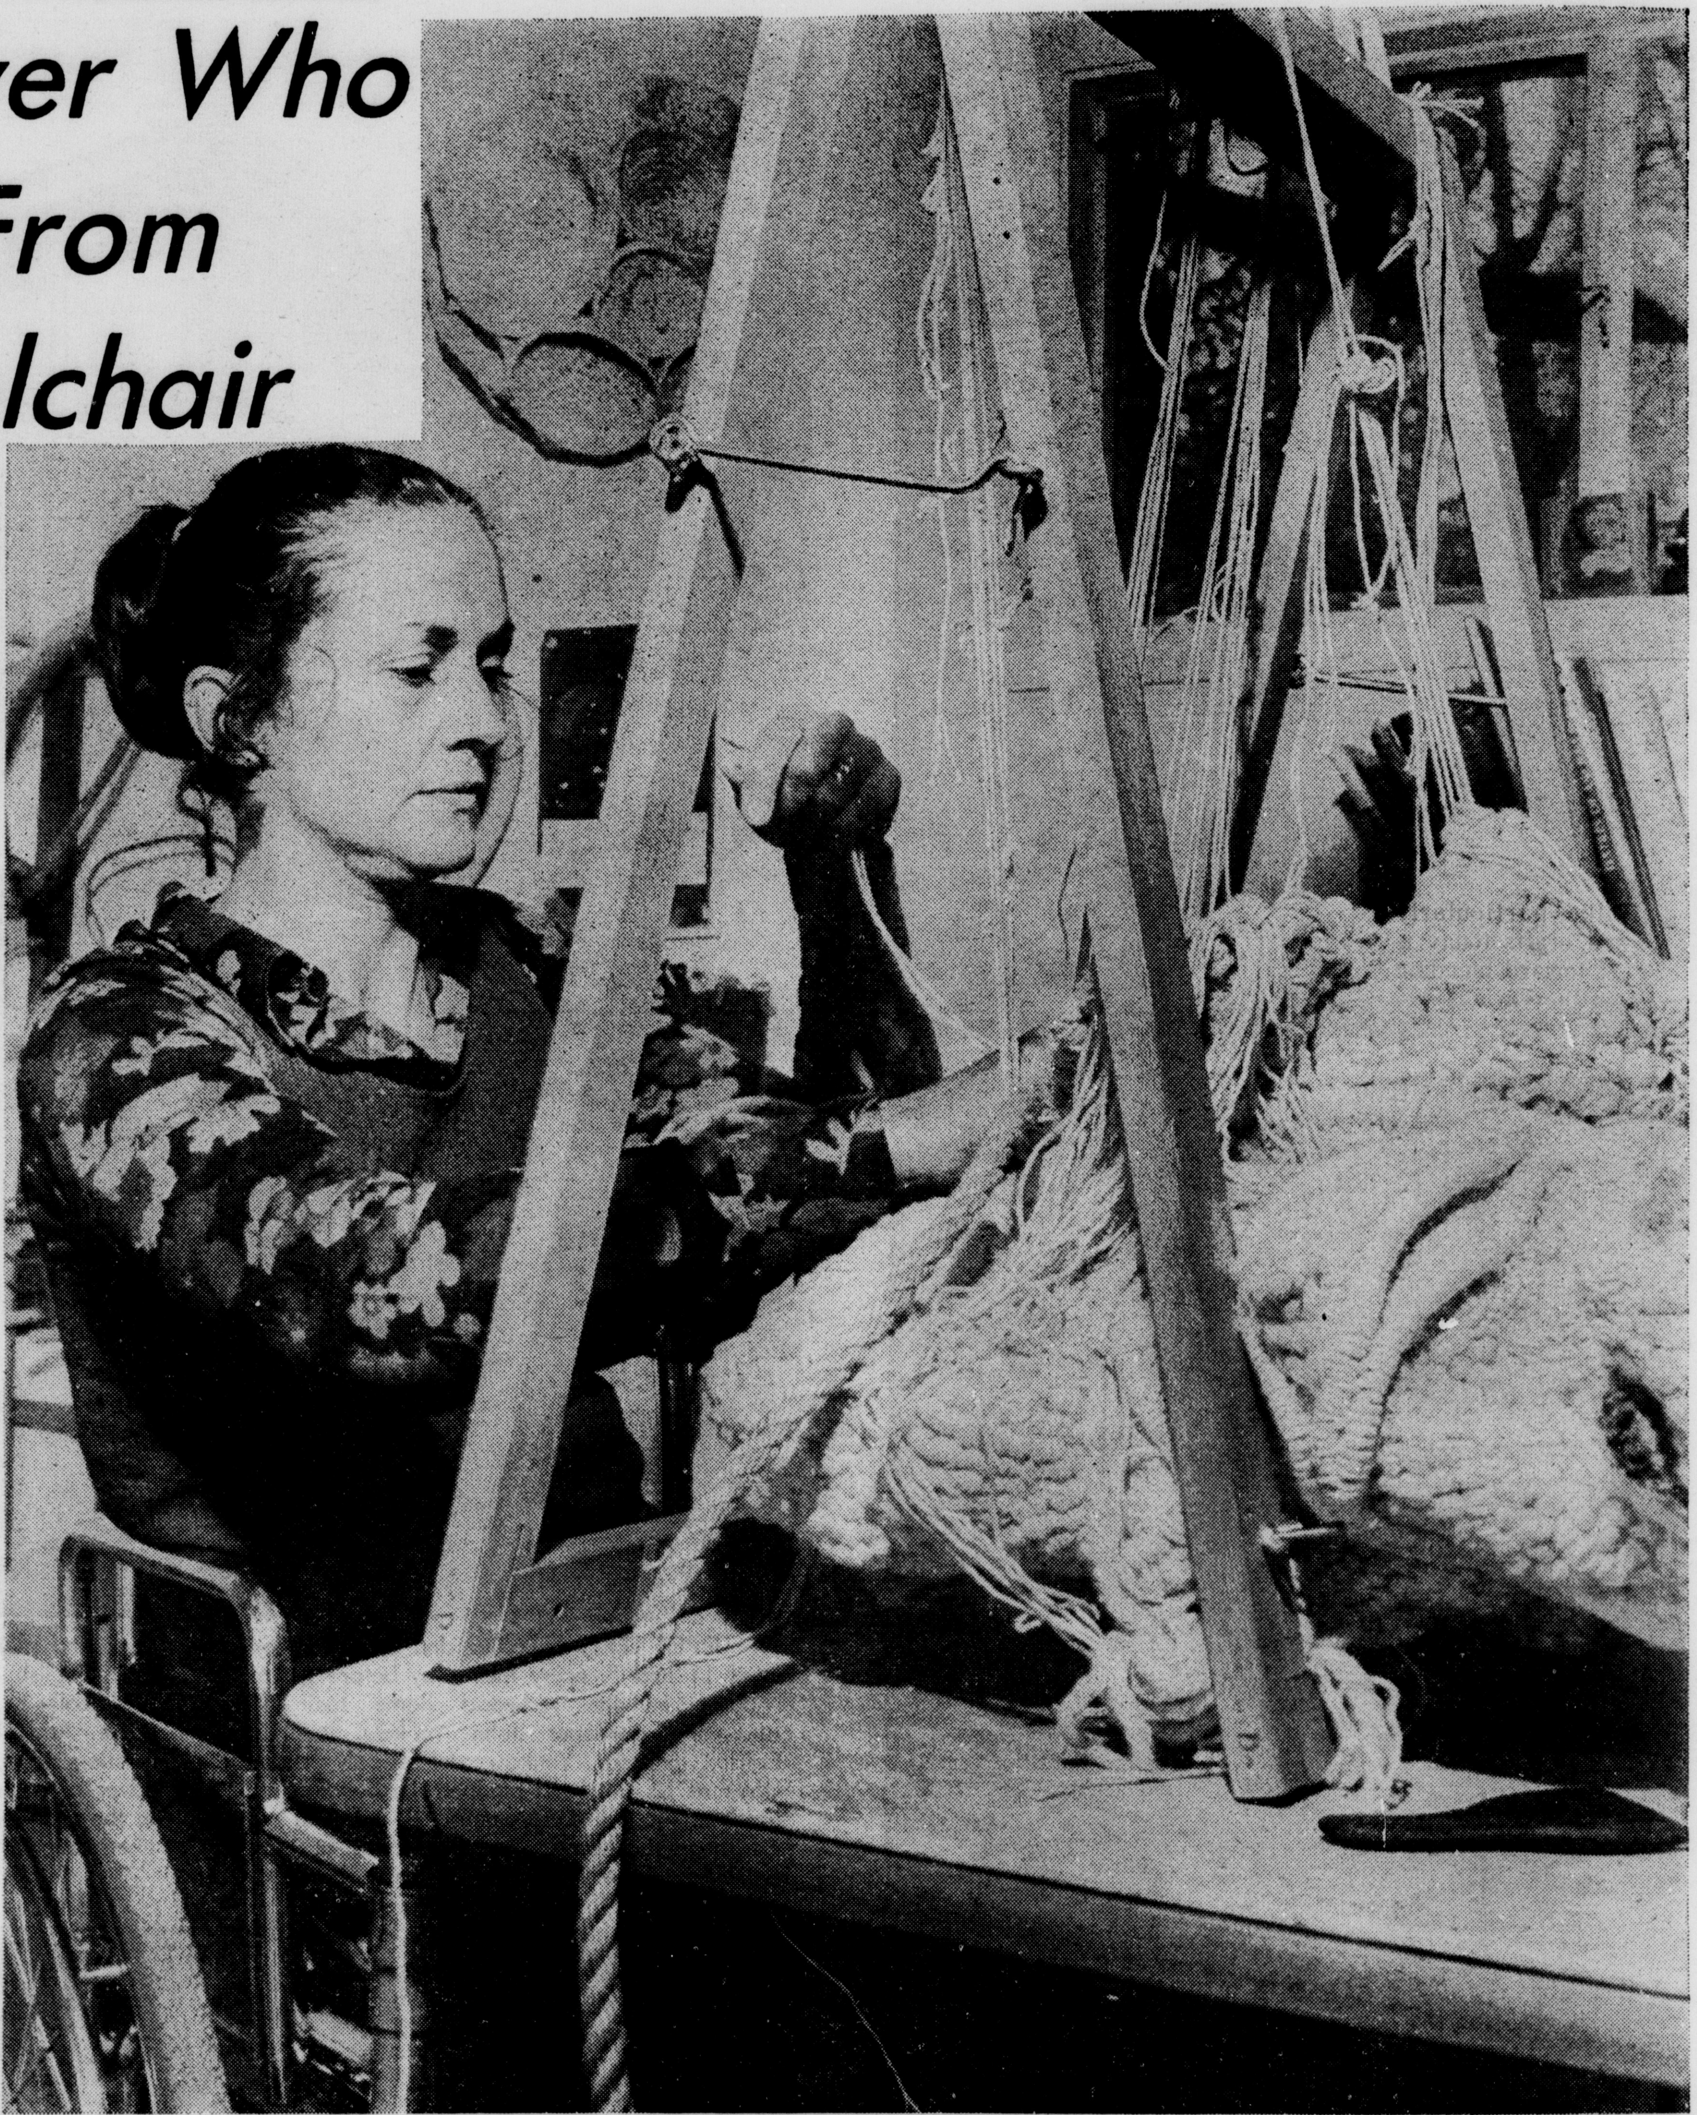
"THAT WAS MY liberation," she says. "I still drive everywhere. I'm always on the go."

Before polio struck, the Luchessas were already parents to two children. And there were two more youngsters afterwards. Their ages now range from 10 to 22.

Along with her family and her car, Gayle Luchessa's great joy has been her art, practiced in a studio that is a converted cabana beside the backyard pool. Hours that might have been tedious and dispiriting have been filled, instead, with the zest and challenge of creativity.

BORN AND REARED in San Francisco, Gayle attended Lowell High School, San Francisco City College and the University of California at Berkeley, majoring in art.

Painting was her principal preoccupation until about 10 years ago when she became involved in Ann O'Hanlon's perceptual workshops for University of California Extension.



AT THE FRAME LOOM in her studio at her Sleepy Hollow home, seated in her wheelchair, Gayle Luchessa works intently upon a weaving she describes as "a fiber sculpture." She tries to spend four days a week at the work, but this weekend she will be in Richmond, attending the two-day Conference of Northern California Handweavers.

The stimulus of the workshops caused her to plunge into a spree of experimentation with various media for expression, ranging from printing to stitchery, and not excluding her old favorite, painting.

BUT IN WEAVING she discovered what was for her perhaps the most satisfying of all the media. And her involvement with it grew until today weaving claims more of her studio hours than painting or any of the other techniques at which she is accomplished.

But there is a wide difference between the weaving practiced by Gayle Luchessa and the approach and products generally associated with that old skill.

The divergence begins, she says, with her regard for weaving as a fine art, rather than as a craft.

Indeed, her work often can be described correctly as being as much a soft sculpture as weaving.

"I AM FASCINATED by the manipulation of materials," she says.

She has a traditional frame loom in her studio and uses it frequently and with skill. But just as often she employs non-loom, handweaving techniques.

She has been exploring a combination of warp-weighted loom weaving zith the old hand coiling method used by the Indians to make their baskets.

Other Bay Area weavers are engaged in similar experimentation, she says.

OFTEN THE products she creates are freestanding, although she sometimes produces the more traditional wall-hangings as well.

This weekend, today and tomorrow, the Conference of Northern California Handweavers is being held in Richmond at the Memorial Auditorium and Art Center in Civic Center Plaza.

Mrs. Luchessa, as an active member of the participating Contemporary Handweavers, one of the hostess guilds, will be very much involved in the conference.

Today's program included lectures, demonstration, a luncheon and a fashion show, principally of interest to the weavers.

TOMORROW there will be public admission from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. to displays of materials and equipment, demonstrations of techniques, and competitive exhibits by 20 member guilds of the Northern California Conference of Handweavers, including Marin County's Tamalpais Weavers Guild, and the Contemporary Handweavers who meet in San Francisco.

It is, Mrs. Luchessa says, the big event of the year for weavers of the area, held annually at a different city, in Turlock in 1972.

She will have on display a freestanding, woven sculpture that she calls "Spring Thaw," measuring three feet by three feet, "with a kind of landscape feeling about it." For it she used both the loom and the traditional tapestry weave, and the hand basketry technique of the Indians, combining the two.

SOME OF THOSE present this weekend will consider themselves craftsmen, and others like Mrs. Luchessa will regard their work in the newer light of fine art.

But there is a comraderie that joins all the weavers, artists and artisans, and adds to the enjoyment of the conference program and its opportunity to mingle and exchange ideas, Mrs. Luchessa says.

Mrs. Luchessa tries now to spend four full working days in her studio at her weaving, but still finding some time to paint abstracts in acrylics and to experiment with other media.

"What I like particularly about arts and crafts today is the movement toward blending and combining the various media," she says.

SHE HAS HAD a number of one-woman shows and has participated in major group shows. Her work sells periodically, "but that is not my motive for creating it. I work for personal satisfaction."

She teaches now in the U.C. Perception Workshops program, and is a member of its offshoot, the Sight and Insight Gallery, at The Cannery in San Francisco.

She belongs, too, to the Marin Society of Artists and currently serves on its Artists' Advisory Council. The recent Easter week showing of local artists' work in the display windows and store interiors of downtown San Rafael merchants was conducted under her energetic chairmanship.

OF WEAVING, Gayle Luchessa says: "It is not a fast procedure. You can't rush it. But I find it immensely relaxing and satisfying. It teaches you patience and self-discipline.

"While you are at work, you don't think in terms of time, but only of the creative, exciting thing that is taking form before you."

She is pleased that the current boom of interest in weaving has swept up all age levels, and is particularly delighted that the young have adopted this very old craft (or art).

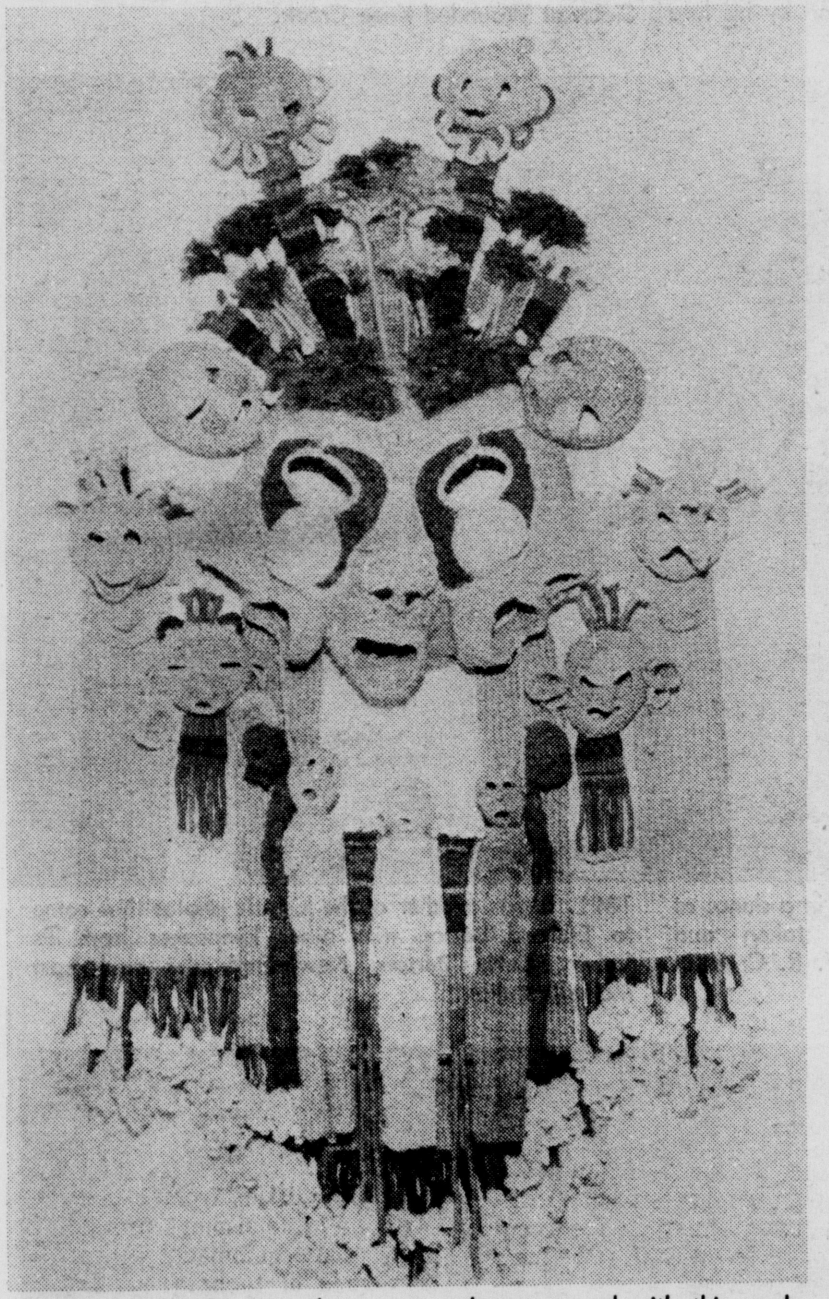
"They bring fresh, young ideas to weaving," she says. "They have played a large role in emphasizing the fine art possibilities."

SHE SEES THE trend as a part of the general revulsion for over-industrialization.

"People have a need to do things with their hands, and not just to operate push-button machines," she says.

Gayle Luchessa's hands are rarely idle. And much of their activity is directed toward turning fibers, yarns and fabrics, even rope and shredded palm fronds, into things of beauty and utility.

The observer, as she works, or the recipient of the magnetically enthusiastic conversation of the attractive, always cheerful 41-year-old artist-housewife as she talks about her favorite form of art, soon forgets all about that wheelchair. Gayle Luchessa may be overstating the case when she refers to her bout with polio as "a good thing." But certainly she has minimized and surmounted its bad aspects.



GAYLE LUCHESSA recently won a sculpture award with this work, "The Great Mother," that she describes as "an anthropomorphic wall piece," with its primitive, mask-like figures, produced through a combination of knotless netting, twining and weaving.

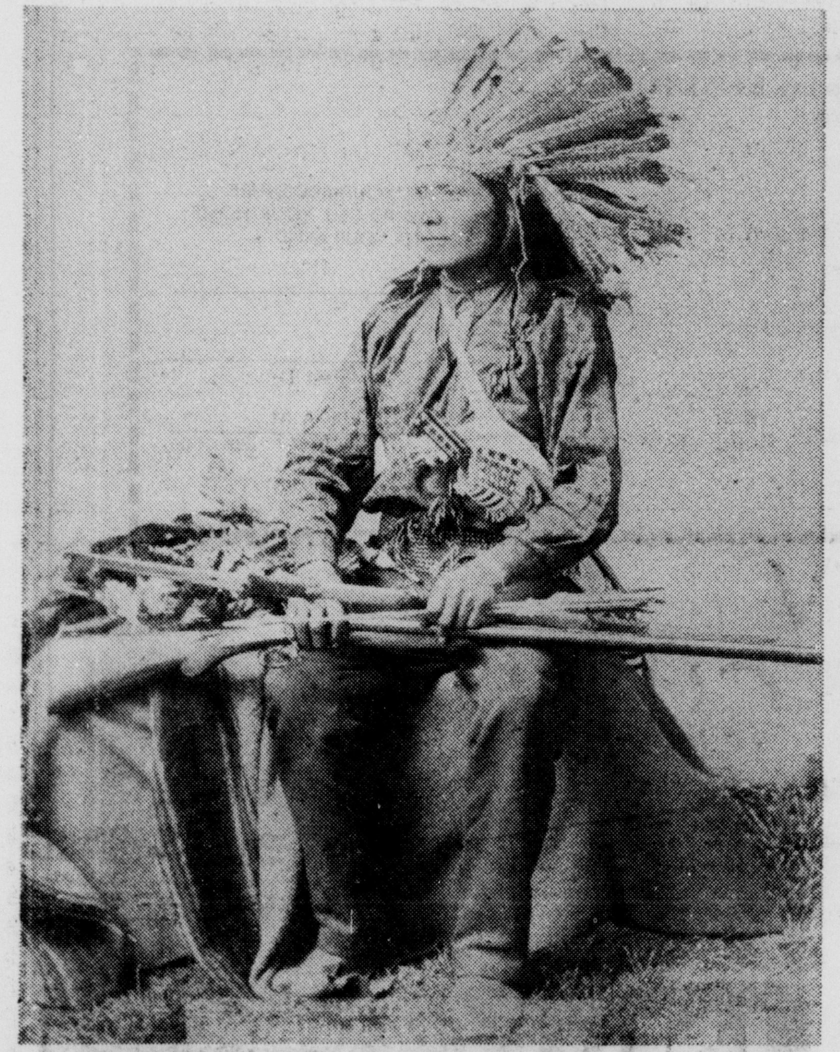
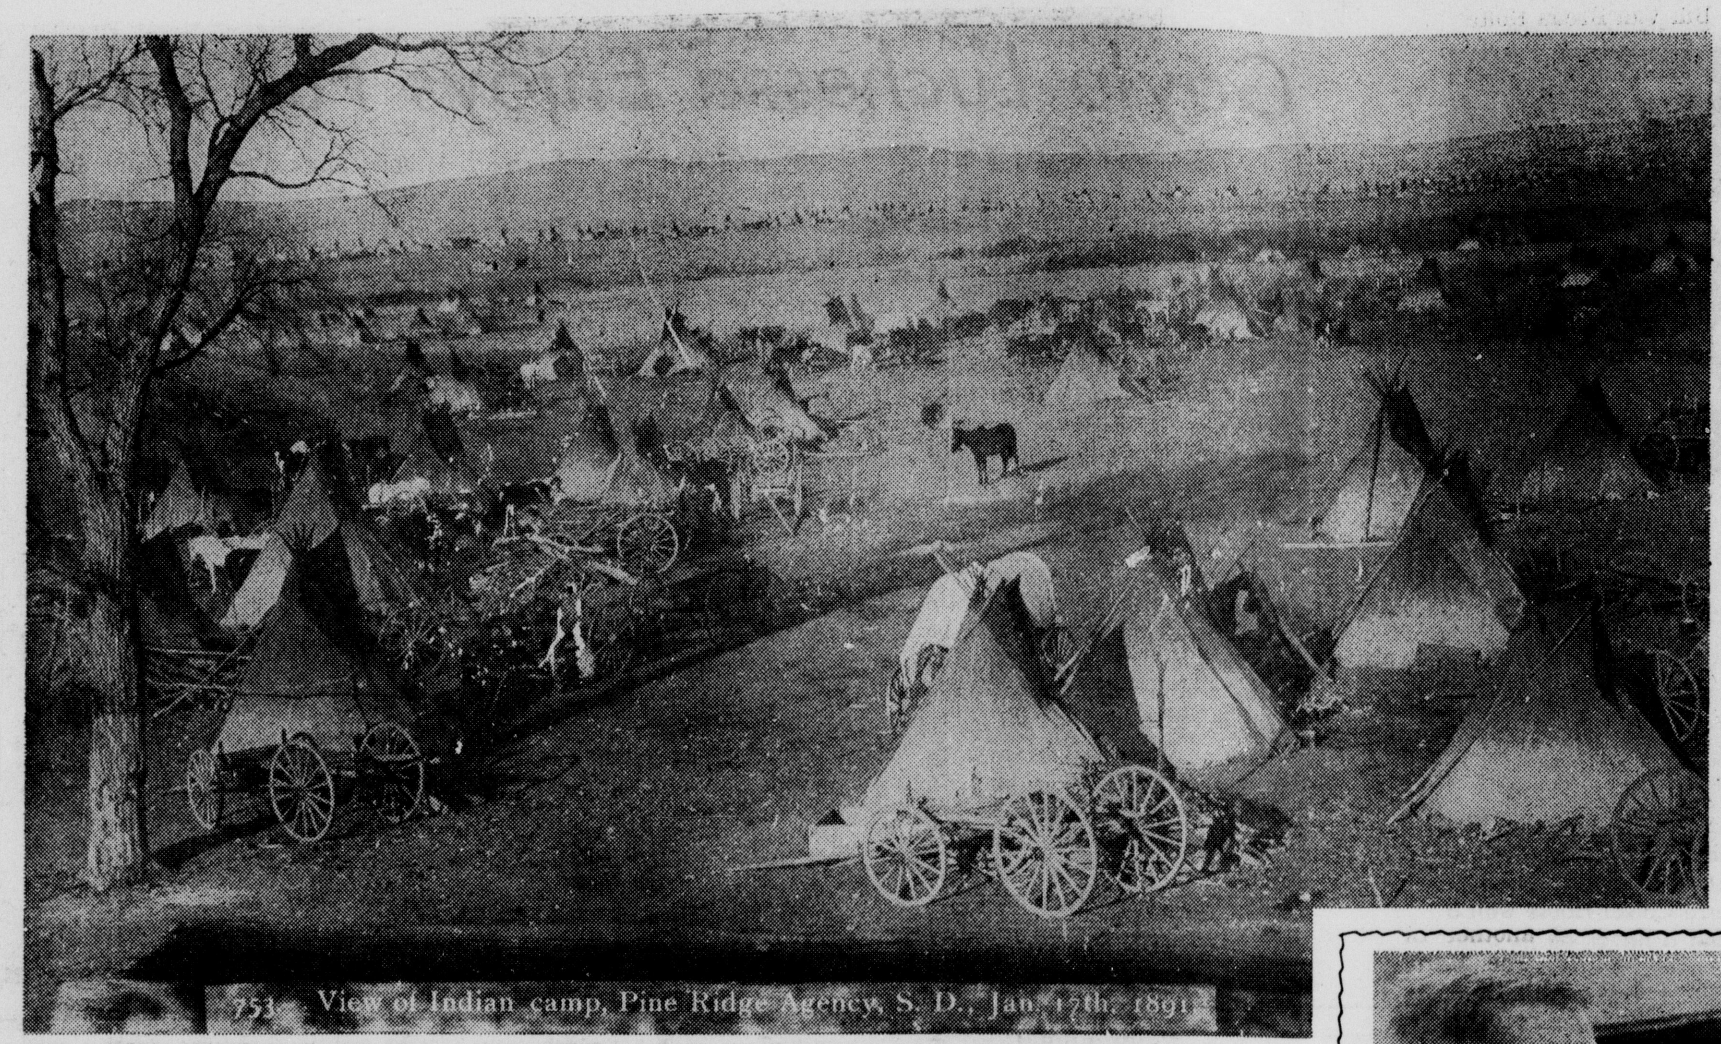
THIS PHOTOGRAPH in the Edward Burton collection shows an Indian identified as "Chief Crazy Bear, killed in the Battle of Wounded Knee, Dec. 28, 1890," also shows the "ghost shirt" worn by followers of Wovoka, the Paiute messiah whose religion swept through the Indian country, to the alarm of white settlers and officials.

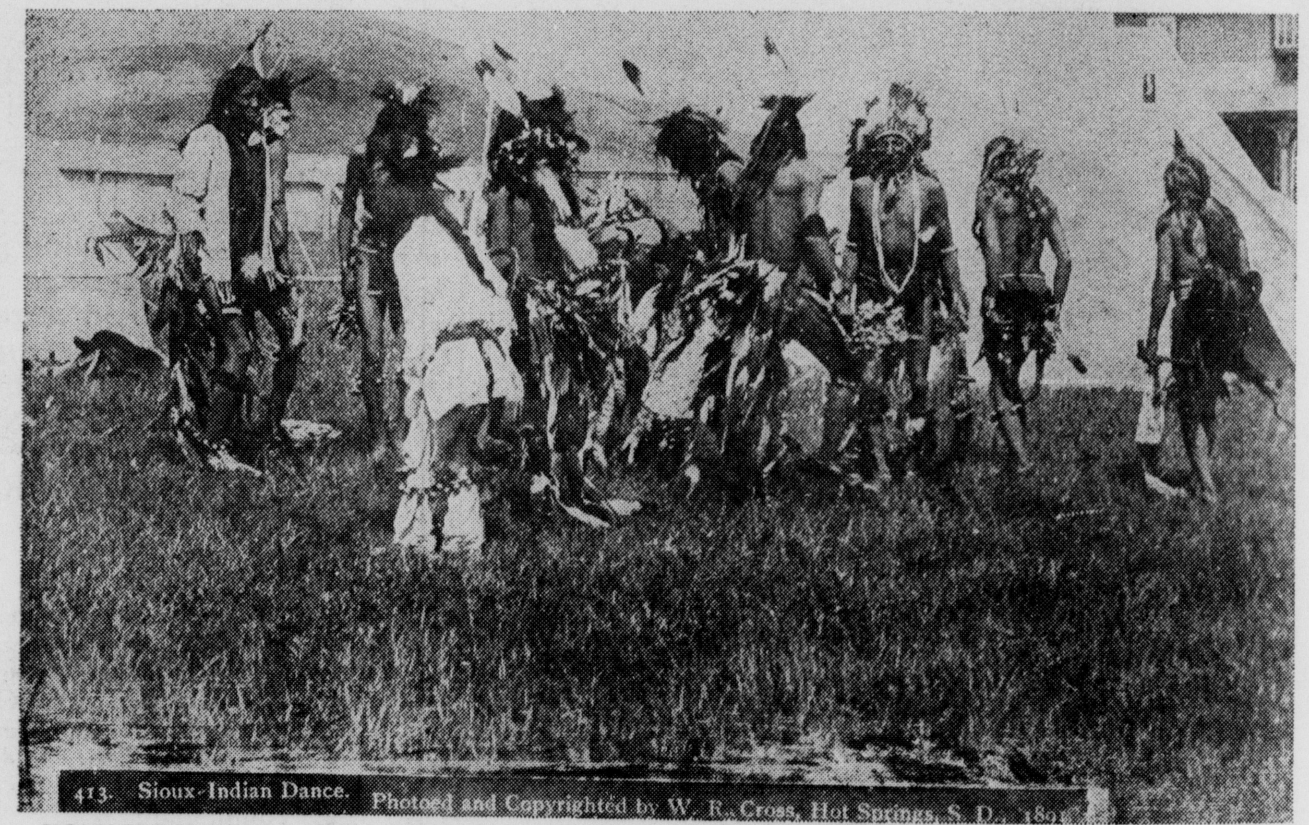


LITTLE WOUND, a "high priest" of the ghost dance religion, was blamed by Army officers on the scene with being the instigator of the Pine Ridge Agency revolt that led to the massacre on Wounded Knee Creek on Dec. 28, 1890.



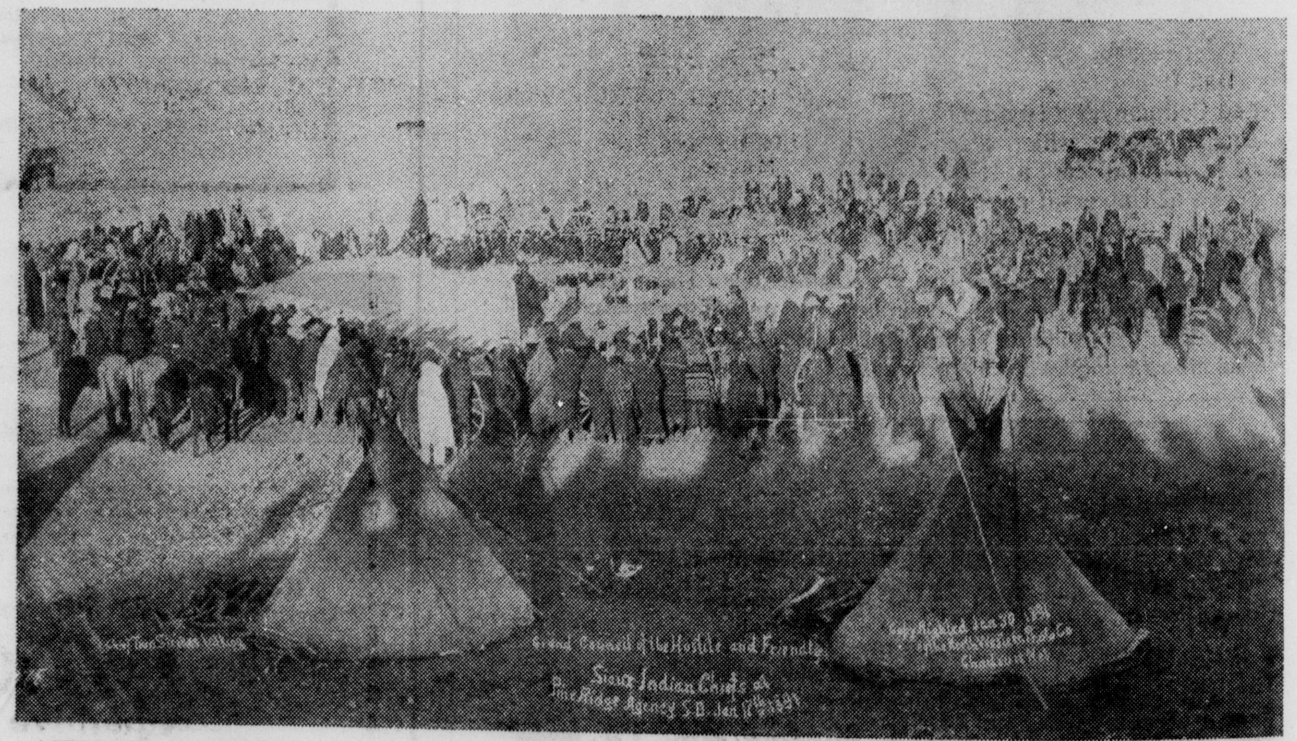
751. View of Indian camp, Pine Ridge Agency, S. D., Jan. 17th, 1891.

THE INDIAN CAMP at the Pine Ridge Agency, S.D., was pictured in January of 1891 in this photograph from the collection given Edward Burton by his late father and only recently rediscovered. The date was less than a month after the infamous massacre of the Sioux at Wounded Knee Creek.



413. Sioux-Indian Dance. Photoed and Copyrighted by W. R. Cross, Hot Springs, S. D., 1891.

SIOUX TRIBESMEN were photographed in a dance at Hot Springs, S.D., in a picture taken and copyrighted by pioneer cameraman W. R. Cross in 1891. It was another of the historic photos that came to Edward Burton with other keepsakes from his father, Orrin Burton, New Englander and part Mohawk Indian.



Grand Council of the Hostile and Friendly
Sioux Indian Chiefs at Pine Ridge Agency S.D. Jan 17 1891

AFTER THE MASSACRE at Wounded Knee, the Army rounded up the bands of Sioux that had left the reservation and compelled them to attend this grand council or pow-wow at the Pine Ridge agency. The speaker here is identified as Chief Two Strikes, the date as Jan. 17, 1891.

THIS SNAPSHOT was taken in 1956 in Vermont where Edward Burton, right, of San Rafael, was visiting his father, Orrin Burton. It was then that the elder Burton turned over to his son a collection of historic Indian photographs.

WHEN WOUNDED KNEE FIRST MADE HISTORY

Twice the place name of Wounded Knee has been prominent in American history.

In 1890, at Wounded Knee Creek, U.S. cavalrymen massacred more than 200 Sioux tribesmen, many of them women and children. It was one of the darkest of many dark and violent pages in the chronicle of the relationship between white man and red man.

And now, 83 years later, the hamlet of Wounded Knee, S.D., on the Pine Ridge Reservation has emblazed newspaper headlines as the site of tension and violence where militant Indians, reacting in anger and desperation to the plight of their race, seized and held the trading post community in defiance of the U.S. government.

For one Marin man the gap of more than eight decades was bridged suddenly by a recent discovery in a box of keepsakes in his home.

Edward Burton, preparing to move from one San Rafael address to another, opened the almost forgotten box to find among its contents a cache of old photographs.

The top photograph of an Indian in tribal regalia including feathered headdress bore the legend: "Chief Crazy Bear in Ghost Dance Suit; Killed at Wounded Knee Dec. 28, 1890. Pine Ridge, S.D."

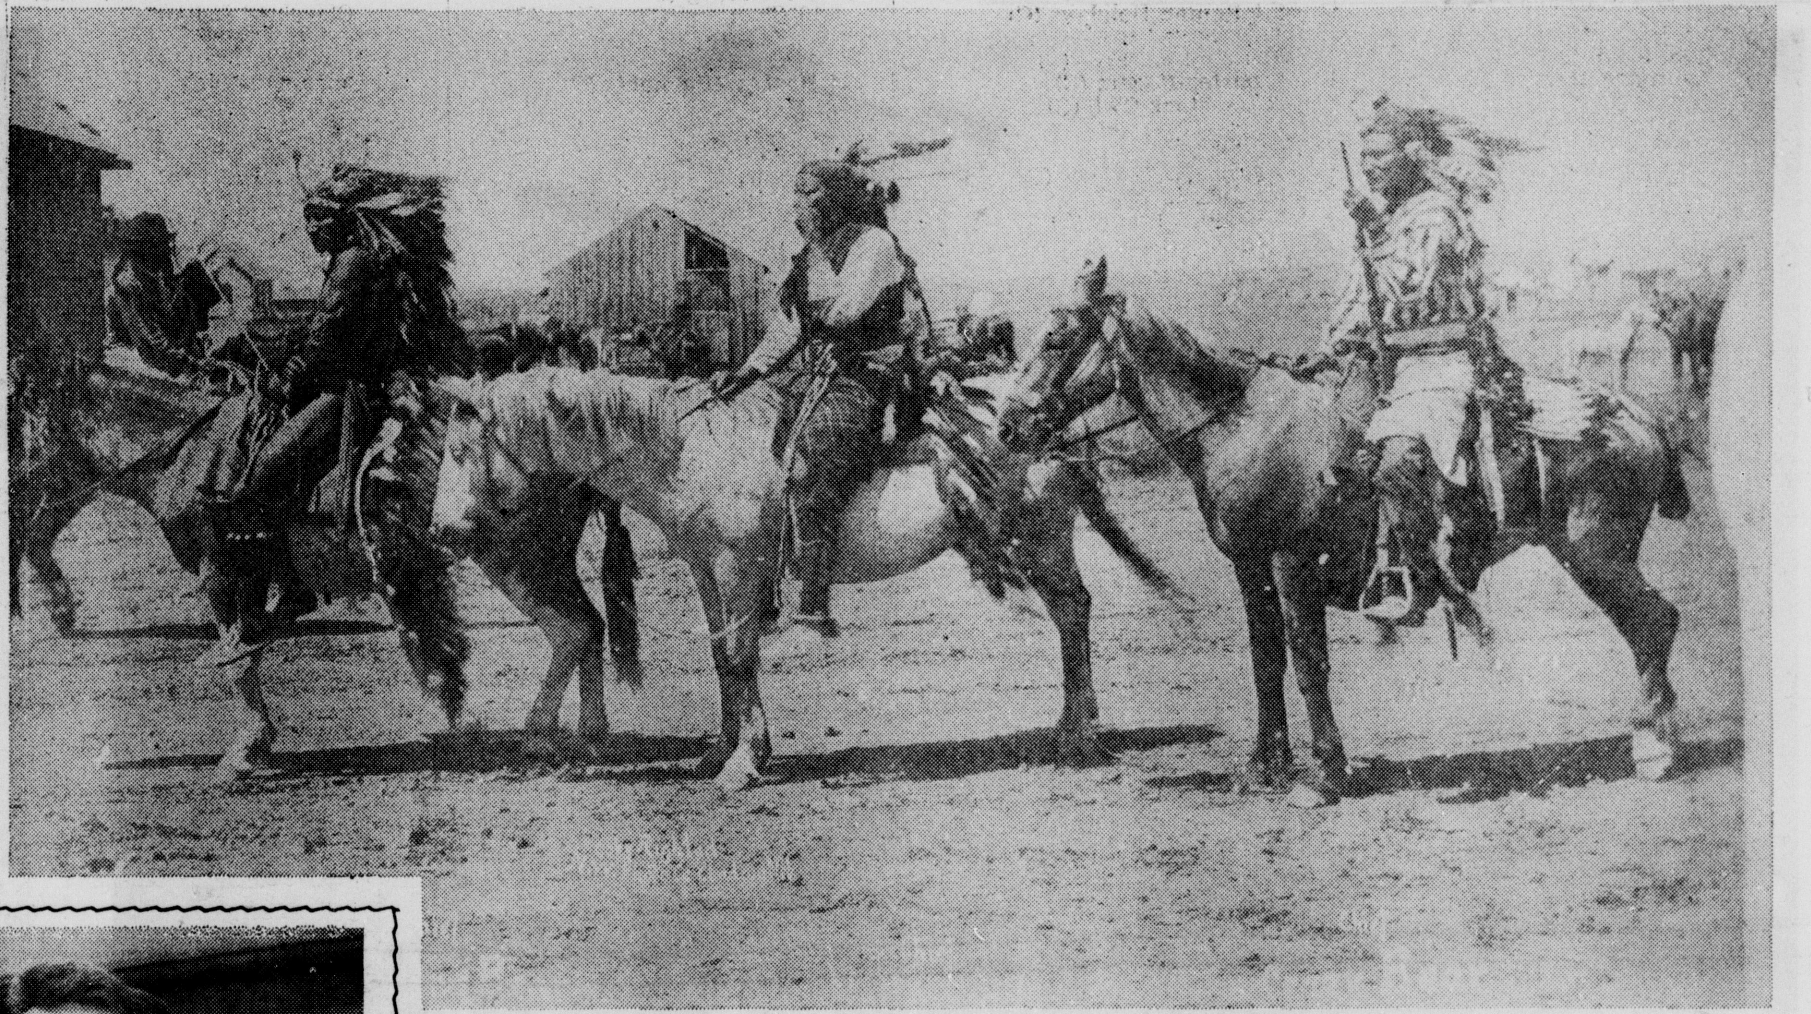
Other photographs were likenesses of other principals in the historic drama played out to its bloody conclusion in the wild Dakotas.

"Views: Wounded Knee battle, Indian camps, war camps, Indian chiefs — everything of interest in the late Pine Ridge War are held by us for sale. Agents wishing to make $10 to $15 per day wanted. Northwestern Photographic Co., Chadron, Neb." reads printing on the back of some of the pictures. Other photos are credited to other photographers and distributors.

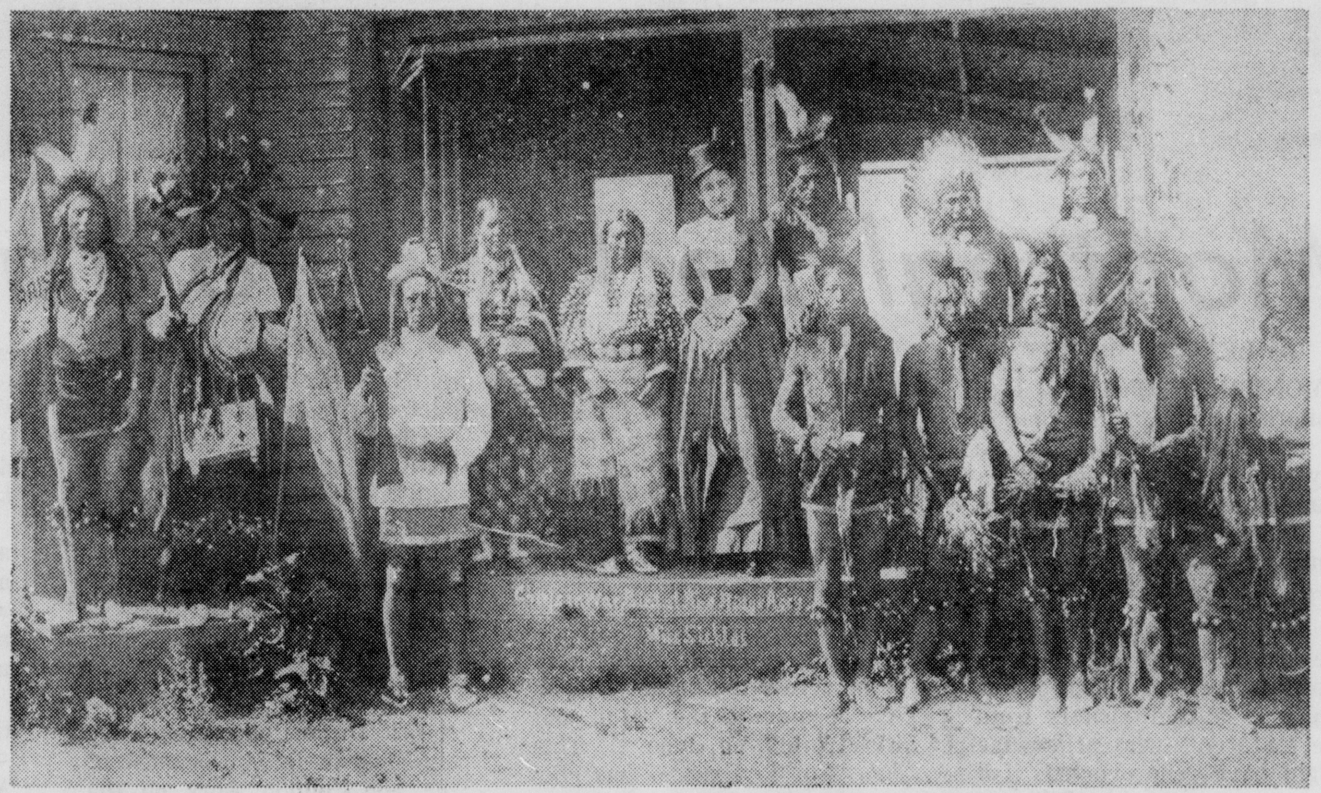
Burton, who is in the transport clearing business, admits that he did not recall immediately how the photos came into his possession. Then he remembered a trip back to New England in 1956 to visit his late father, Orrin A. Burton, at his Rutland, Vt., home. It was then the parent turned over to his son a part of his collection of Indian memorabilia and other historical relics — including the Wounded Knee photographs.

Edward Burton says that his father "to my best recollection" had acquired the photographs many years earlier, during the Depression, at an estate auction of the belongings of a collector.

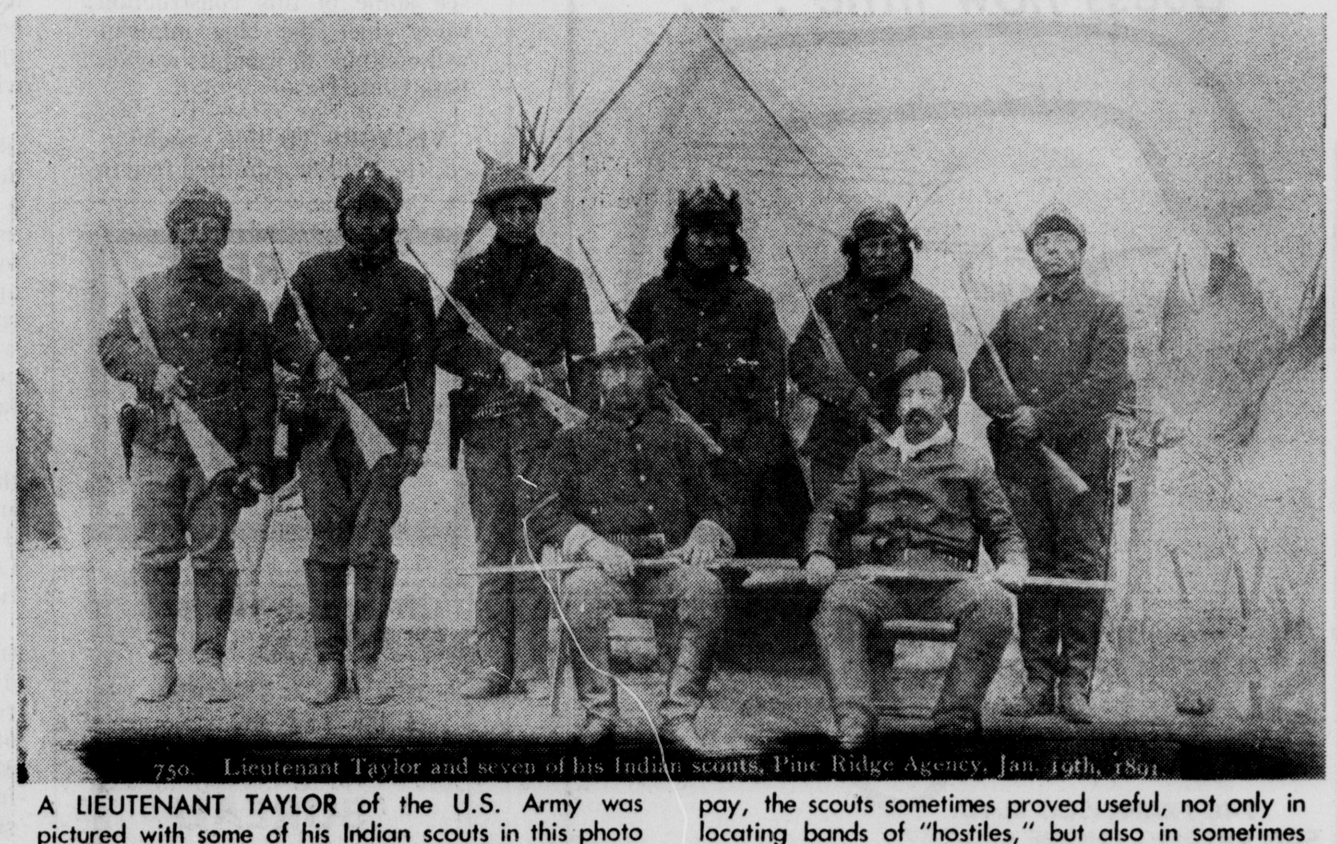
His father, Burton adds, had good reason for his interest in Indian artifacts and history. He was himself part Mohican, yet another tribe that did not fare well in their relations with the whites, their numbers decimated by firearms provided to their enemies by Dutch settlers.



THE LEGEND ON this photograph identifies the three mounted Indians as Chief Stinking Bear, Chief Wallawood and Chief Crazy Bear, but history of the events of 1890-91 make no mention of any of the trio. On its back: advertisements for "King, the Black Hills Jeweler" and for spring waters as an epilepsy cure.



THE INDIAN CHIEFS and braves wore warpaint, but their facial expressions were friendly enough as they lined up along a porch to have their pictures taken with a Miss Sickles at the Pine Ridge Agency. Along side the white women are Indian women in their finery.



750. Lieutenant Taylor and seven of his Indian scouts, Pine Ridge Agency, Jan. 19th, 1891.

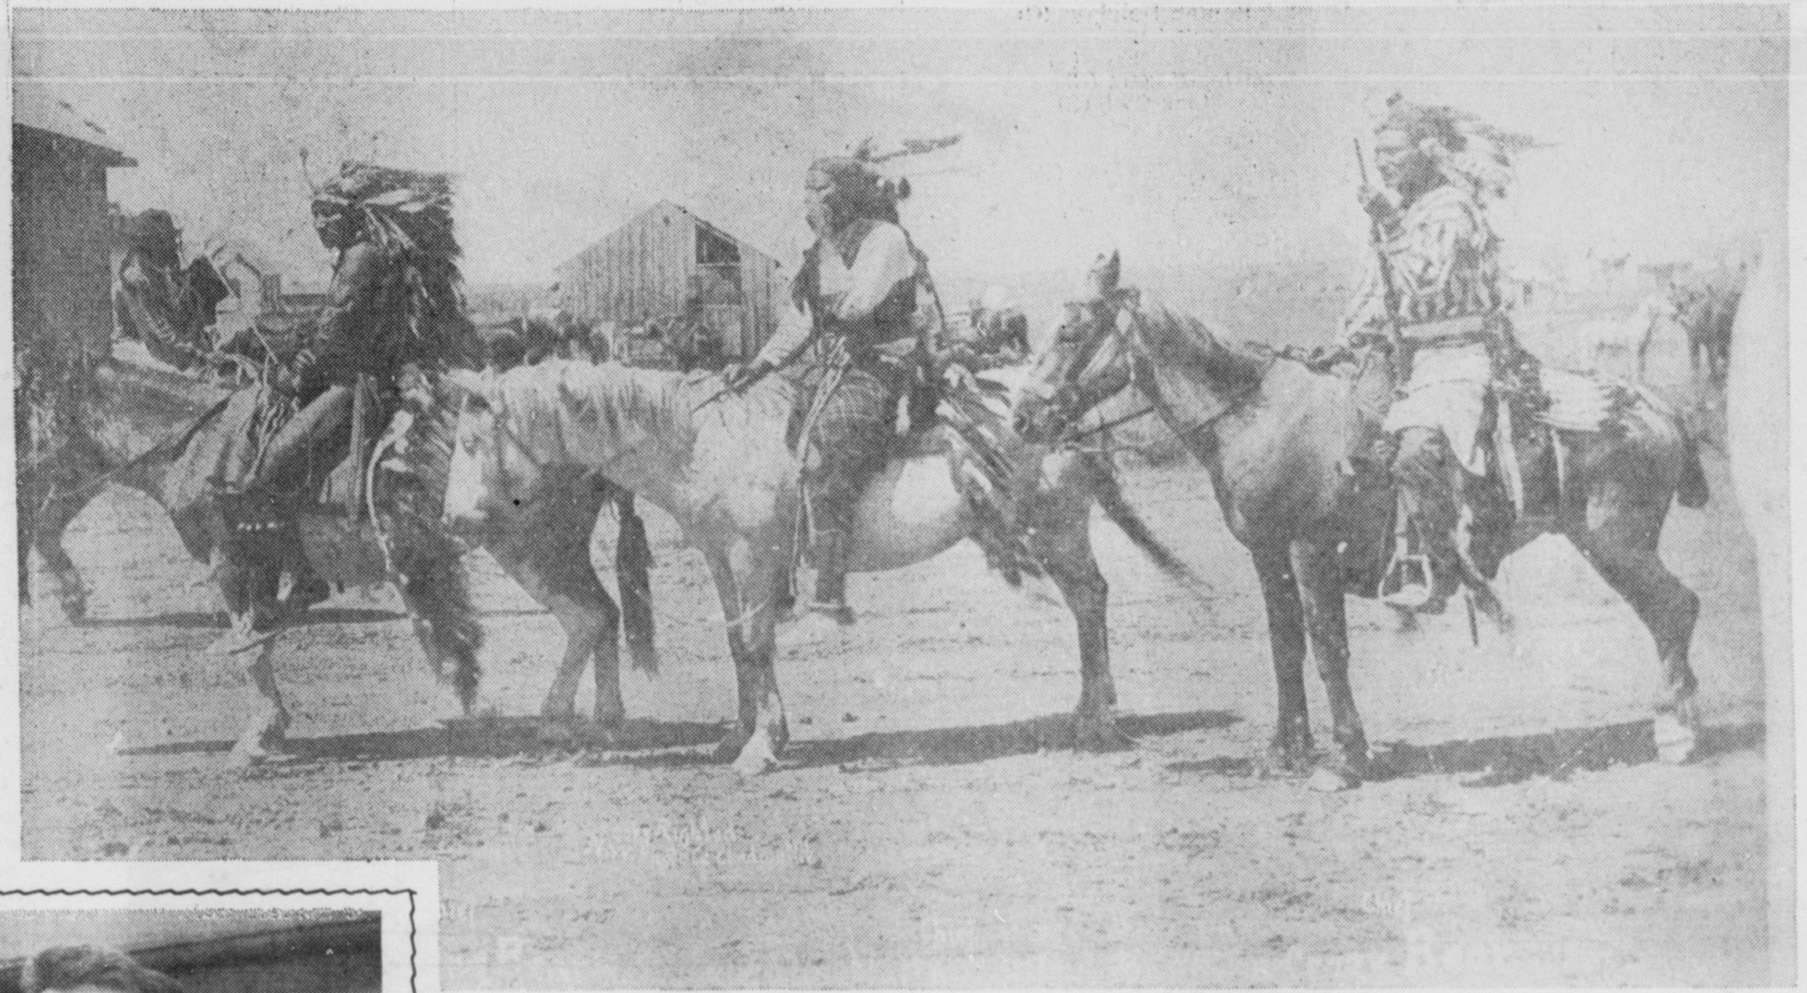
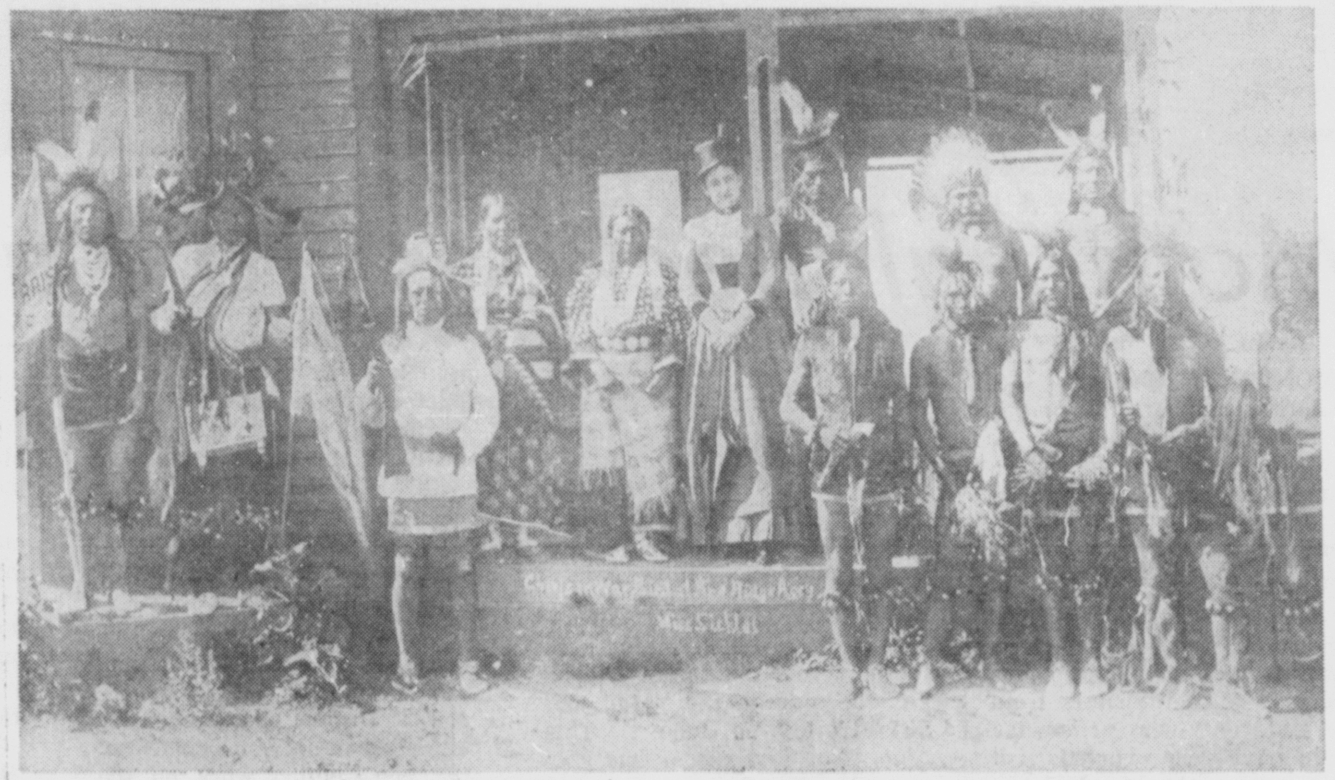
Edward Burton says that his father "to my best recollection" had acquired the photographs many years earlier, during the Depression, at an estate auction of the belongings of a collector.

His father, Burton adds, had good reason for his interest in Indian artifacts and history. He was himself part Mohican, yet another tribe that did not fare well in their relations with the whites, their numbers decimated by firearms provided to their enemies by Dutch settlers.



THE LEGEND ON this photograph identifies the three mounted Indians as Chief Stinking Bear, Chief Wallawood and Chief Crazy Bear, but history of the events of 1890-91 make no mention of any of the trio. On its back: advertisements for "King, the Black Hills Jeweler" and for spring waters as an epilepsy cure.



THE INDIAN CHIEFS and braves wore warpaint, but their facial expressions were friendly enough as they lined up along a porch to have their pictures taken with a Miss Sickles at the Pine Ridge Agency. Along side the white women are Indian women in their finery.

Montreal Beckons To Yankee Tourist

By LEAVITT MORRIS

MONTREAL, Quebec — U.S. visitors to Canada this year in all probability will not have to pay a premium when they exchange their dollars for Canadian money if present trends continue.

Canada, which depends heavily on the influx of tourists from the United States to bolster its economy, sees a golden opportunity to attract visitors from the "States" who otherwise might have gone overseas if it were not for the instability of the dollar in many European countries.

Montreal, with its "foreign" atmosphere flavored by many French-speaking people, expects to profit handsomely this year as the result of a favorable rate of exchange for the U.S. visitor.

AMONG THE major attractions for travelers coming here from across the border will be the opening of the "Man and His World" on June 21. This successor to Expo 67 has chosen the all-embracing theme of "Civilization" with approximately 26 pavilions open to the public this summer.

After an absence of a few years, Japan will be returning with an exhibit. Other foreign countries to exhibit will include Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, France, Switzerland and the Soviet Union.

The exhibits this year will be situated on one of the two manmade islands — St. Helen's. Notre Dame Island will be closed to the public because of the construction work on the rowing canal for the 1976 Olympics to be held here in Montreal. Visitors will be able to see some of this construction work since the blue minirail will continue to wend its way on both islands.

VISITORS TO this "enchanted isle" will be admitted free to wander where they will. In order to visit the exhibits a "visa" is required — $5 for the entire season or $2.50 for a one-day visa. Children under 8 will be admitted free.

The "visa" does not cover admission to the La Ronde amusement area where adults will pay a 50-cent entrance fee and those between the ages of 8 and 17, 25 cents.

Another worthwhile attraction — and usually overlooked — is the walking bout of Old Montreal, a historical site of 95 acres in which a number of buildings are being restored. Because of the historical significance of this area a law has been passed which forbids any alterations to existing buildings without a government permit.

The walking route covers about two miles and can be done in less than two hours, but a half-day is recommended so as to include a refreshing stop for lunch or dinner at one of the appealing old-fashioned restaurants in the area. Time can well be spent browsing in the antique shops, art galleries and fashion boutiques.

THE BEST PLACE to start the walking tour of Old Montreal is from the Place d'Armes, according to Paul Leduc, director of public relations for the City of Montreal.

He gives two reasons: 1) It is truly the rallying point of the district and can easily be reached by metro: 2) A statue of Paul de Chomedey, Sieur de Maisonneuve, leader of the founders of Montreal (in 1642), stands in the middle of the square which is bordered, on the south, by the oldest building in Montreal — the Sulpician Seminary.

A booklet entitled "A Walking Tour of Old Montreal," written by Leduc, can be obtained from the Public Relations Department, City of Montreal, 1010 St. Catherine St. West, Montreal, P.Q.

Montreal's "Underground City" is a shopper's paradise.

SITUATED IN the heart of downtown Montreal, this subterranean city envelops some 185 acres. In this "always fair weather" underground city are facilities for just about everything. There are sauna baths, restaurants, movies, boutiques, theaters, swimming pools, hotels, art galleries, barber shops, grocery stores, business offices and exhibition halls.

As Montreal looks ahead to the 1976 Summer Olympics, a hotel building boom is already under way. By the time the Olympics open, Montreal will have increased its hotel facilities by more than 4,000 rooms. Among the new hotels will be three representing international chains and one national.

Airline, train and bus schedules all serve the city.

Getting To Know Hokkaido Through Three Of Its Most Interesting Citizens

By ELIZABETH POND

Hokkaido is Japan's frontier. Or at least it used to be a century ago, when samurai loyal to the deposed Shogun in Edo were exiled to the north to develop Hokkaido and defend it against any Russian expansion.

Sapparo, now the eighth-largest city in Japan and host to last year's Winter Olympics, doesn't look very rustic any more. But Hokkaidoans still have a nostalgia for the old days of forests, homesteaders and figuring out how to make rice grow in such a cold climate.

And Hokkaido still has a character different from the rest of Japan.

IT HAS THE proto-Caucasian Ainu, the one exception to the racial homogeneity of the Japanese. It has bears, cranes, crab, salmon, cattle, timber, coal. Above all, in this supercrowded nation, it has space. With 20 per cent of Japan's total land area, Hokkaido has only 5 per cent of the country's population and industry. Sapporo schoolboys can ski on nearby slopes in winter, hike in the wilderness in summer.

The people are like their landscape, too. They are open friendly, freer, and less formal than their compatriots to the south.

The best way to show this is to introduce some Hokkaidoans — Japan's second richest landowner, a fisherman, and an artist.

YUSUKE MATSUZAKA of Sapporo is one of Japan's newly rich. He is a self-made man, a poor fisherman's son with a junior high school education, a man who endured plenty of failures before he started to succeed about 15 years ago.

His face is broad. He looks the sort who could hold his own on a fishing boat or on a construction crew. He is also somewhat unusual as a ninth-generation Hokkaidoan; his ancestors came to a little Japanese enclave on the southern tip of the island four centuries ago.

Unusually, too, despite his wealth, Matsuzaka still lives in a modest house, still bows politely to employees who open the door for him.

Matsuzaka amassed his fortune through land. Hokkaido has more open land than the rest of Japan does, so the price hasn't skyrocketed as astronomically here as in Honshu, where Tokyo is. (Prime land in Sapporo sells for about half the price of prime land in Tokyo.)

BUT LAND HAS shot up, even here. And Matsuzaka bought in the right places at the right times.

Often he acquired land, a decade ago, by going out in his old clothes and helping farmers with odd jobs for a week or two, meanwhile persuading them to sell land that no one thought would be worth very much. Matsuzaka foresaw Sapporo's expansion and its housing and leisure boom accurately, and by last year he was second on Japan's much vaunted taxpayers' list.

He expanded his operations to Southeast Asia last year and intends to invest in Honshu (the main Japanese island) this year and probably in Brazil after that. He thinks it's a little late to get in on Guam and Hawaii, but he does have his eye on Alaska.

MATSUZAKA, who is in his 40s, now wants to do something lasting with his new position. Typically, in Japan, this would mean entering politics. So far, however, Matsuzaka has resisted urgings in this direction.

What he is doing instead is uniquely his own idea. He has just established a foundation aimed at developing his beloved Hokkaido, fighting pollution and promoting international goodwill, all at the same time. The essential concept is over the next 10 years to sponsor pollution research, invite foreigners to study in Hokkaido, and send young Hokkaidoans abroad to study the laser and other industrial technology of the future.

Then, as Japan gradually implements its present plans to shift away from heavy industry, Hokkaido could take the lead in establishing the new generation of industry.

HOPEFULLY, this could spur Hokkaido's lagging economic development without bringing all the oollution that afflicts the rest of Japan; it could stop the exodus of young Hokkaidoans to the brighter lights of Nagoya and Osaka; and it could establish a name for Hokkaido internationally.

The last is a key point. Hokkaido came of age with the Winter Olympics, perhaps, but many Hokkaidoans still have an inferiority complex toward the sophisticated Japan to the south and find themselves little known in the world at large.

ANOTHER WAY would be to strengthen Hokkaido's ties with other northern regions — Scandinavia and Canada primarily — with which Hokkaido feels such affinity. As a start in this direction, Matsuzaka has already bought and transplanted the entire Scandinavian pavilion from the 1970 Osaka Expo to a wooded Scandinavian-like spot outside of Sapporo.

No, Matsuzaka replies immediately. Some of it still remains in his generation, but the younger generation has lost it altogether.

Hokkaido still has many other good qualities, though. It still has a lot to contribute to the world. To Matsuzaka, in fact, Hokkaido is "the most beautiful, most wonderful, and auspicious society in the world."

SADAJI MIYASHITA of Ishikari is one of a vanishing breed — the fishermen that Hokkaido was once famous for. A robust 68, he has reached an age when most Japanese have retired. But he still goes out in his boat every night to fish long hours on Japan's second-largest river, the Ishikari.

Miyashita is the last of the line in his family, however. None of his five grown children wanted to remain a fisherman. The income is too poor and erratic, the work too hard, the prestige too low. His sons all work in offices now.

Miyashita talks with affection about his fisherman's life and with some regret about the passing of the old era. His father emigrated to Hokkaido at the age of eight, and Miyashita has lived here since he was born. His family goes back almost a hundred years, to the time of the great Japanese colonization of Hokkaido.

FIFTY YEARS ago, Miyashita recalls, the Ishikari River was like an aquarium, with carp, Hokkaido's delicious salmon, and all sorts of other fish. He caught a lot of salmon in those days.

Even 25 years ago there were still enough fish to give 350 fisherman their livelihood in Ishikari town. And the ice was so clear you could cut it out of the river and put it in drinking water.

Now there are only 120 fishermen left in this town that was founded by fishermen. And a lot of these depend on seasonal farm work, an occasional factory job, and working wives to keep themselves going.

IT'S HARD TO pin down the primary cause of pollution. But there are pulp and lumber mills on the upper reaches of the river, a lot of other industrial discharges in the middle regions, and Sapporo's sewage and farmers' fertilizers in the lower reaches.

"Everyone has been dumping things into this river for years," Miyashita exclaims.

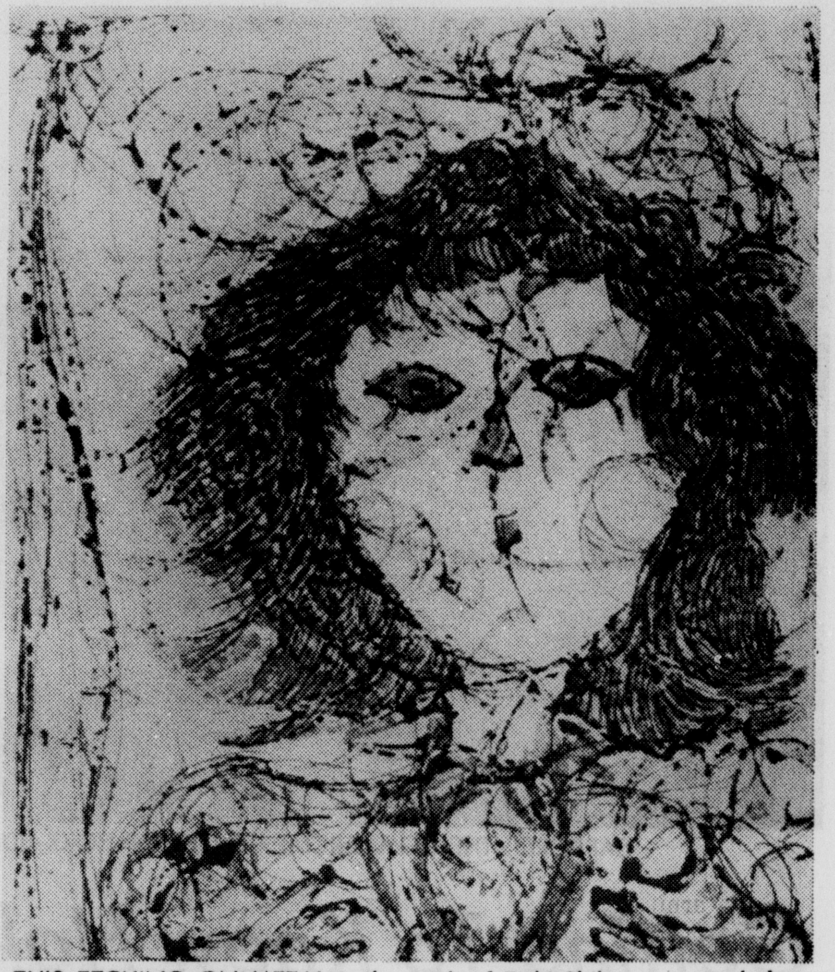
More than 10 years ago a lot of trout and salmon began dying and stopped laying eggs. Ishikari town gave up two years ago and just stopped holding its traditional salmon-running festival.

Some government standards were set, some industrial filters were installed, and the river got a little cleaner. A few salmon came back, and Miyashita still catches a few. But they are often dirty, and he has to throw them back. He now spends most of this time catching a tough little fish no longer than a man's hand that has somehow survived the ravages of filth.

HIS CATCH averages about a million yen a year ($4,000), of which he gets $2,000 — or about a fifth of the income of a wage-earner in Sapporo.

As Miyashita talks in his thick Hokkaido accent, everyone sits on the mat floor around a gas stove with a kettle on it. Miyashita's wife has pushed the dinner table aside and is showing full hospitality to unexpected visitors, even though they arrived just at supper-time. Miyashita's granddaughter alternately hangs on to Mr. Miyashita's shoulder and scuffs about the room in adult-size slippers. There is a pendulum clock on one wall over the color TV, a barometer on a facing wall.

Miyashita's son leaves for his night job, and a gust of cold air from the snowy outdoors enters the room. Icicles crack and drop from the eaves. Later, at about 2 a.m., Miyashita will go out alone in his boat.



THIS ETCHING ON METAL is the work of Eichi Shibuya, regarded as Japan's leading practitioner of the medium, and a confirmed booster of the island of Hokkaido.

Is there any chance of getting the river cleaned up? Mr. Miyashita's friend explains, "No! Never!" Miyashita is more judicious. He breaks into one of the easy smiles that lines his face with weatherbeaten wrinkles. "If it gets any worse, you won't be able to eat anything, so I'm hopeful," he says.

EICHI SHIBUYA is described by some art collectors as Japan's leading contemporary metal printer. His etchings sell in Tokyo and in the U.S., and he may be best known in America for the Time magazine cover a few years back of then Prime Minister Eisaku Sato.

Shibuya works at his Sapporo home, in the studio house he designed, his walls full of treasured prints he has winkled out of the stalls of La Rive Gauche and Nihombashi. The house is cozy and ordered at the same time. It somehow blends Sharaku, Rouault, Chagall, old kites, French posters, wooden masks, driftwood mobiles and memorabilia in a compatible profusion.

It's a notably disciplined home, given its compact size and the abundance of artwork and just plain living that goes on in it. Printers have to be clean, Mrs. Shibuya explains matter-of-factly, and adds that things were good and messy when she was painting oils. She is an accomplished artist herself, but she now devotes most of her professional time to the five-color printings of her husband's etchings.

Eichi Shibuya teaches art at a teachers' college in Sapporo. His mother lives with the family. His grandfather came to Hokkaido with other samurai from Hiroshima: Shibuya still has his sword.

THE SHIBUYAS like living in Hokkaido. It may not have the same cultural stimulation that Tokyo or Kyoto do. (It is only now that a Sapporo gallery is beginning to handle Shibuya's prints, making it unnecessary for Hokkaido collectors to go to Tokyo to purchase his works.) But Tokyo is too noisy and rushed.

The Caves Of Cacahuamilpa An Underground Kingdom

CUERNAVACA, Mexico — Beneath the surface of Cuernavaca's surrounding mountains and now quiescent volcanoes lies a labyrinth of awesomely spectacular grottos, great underground kingdoms often overlooked by tourists.

American Airlines travel writers report that the most popular caverns are Las Gutas of Cacahuamilpa. These grottos are just half an hour's drive (on paved roads) from Cuernavaca via the old highway south toward Taxco, turning west on the route to Ixtapan de las Sal and Toluca. The cavern area has more than adequate parking facilities, as well as several restaurants and a swimming pool.

IDLING NEAR the cavern entrance are a profusion of guides, available for a modest fee. The cavern entrance is a huge natural doorway some 70 feet high and 150 feet wide. A stairway leading down to the first vast gallery, or room, has hand rails and electric lights, standard equipment throughout the caves.

The tour takes visitors through long tunnels of lacy volcanic rocks past glistening stalactites and stalagmites — looming in eerie formations that resemble whatever the visitor's imagination dictates. The various galleries bear such names as the Ovens, the Fountains, Dante's Pass and Little Inferno.

One of the subterranean halls is half a mile long, 400 feet wide and 300 feet from floor to ceiling.

About six miles of this seemingly endless maze has been explored. And although the guided tour takes about four hours, it still does not include all the chambers.

IT'S HARD TO pin down the primary cause of pollution. But there are pulp and lumber mills on the upper reaches of the river, a lot of other industrial discharges in the middle regions, and Sapporo's sewage and farmers' fertilizers in the lower reaches.

"Everyone has been dumping things into this river for years," Miyashita exclaims.

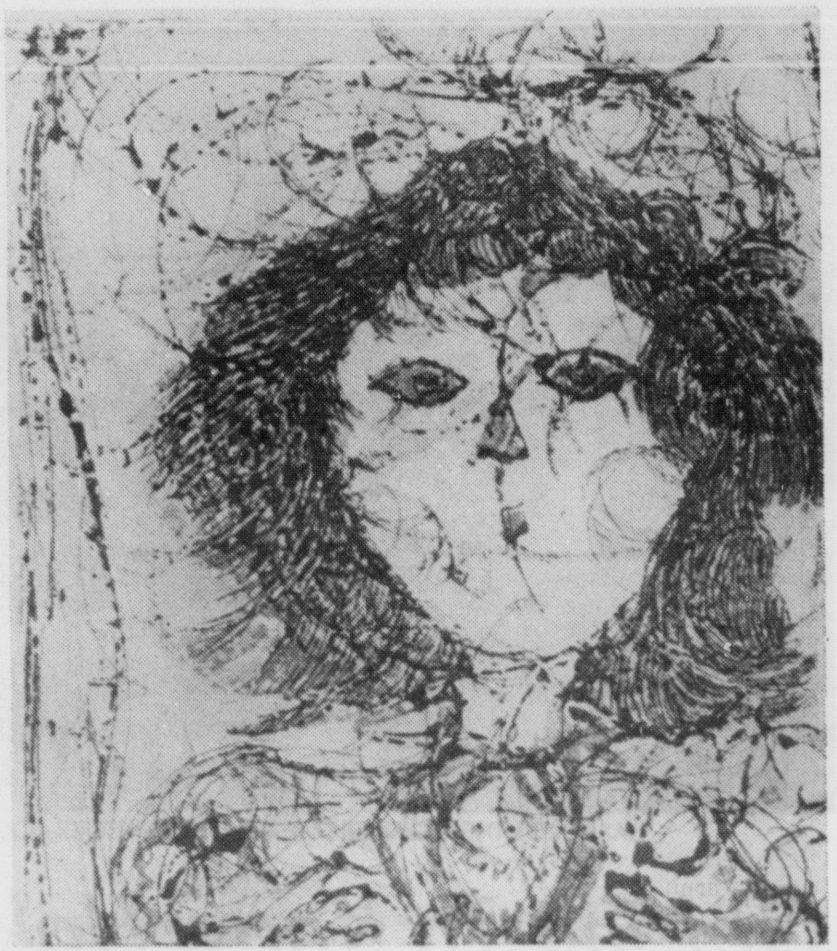
More than 10 years ago a lot of trout and salmon began dying and stopped laying eggs. Ishikari town gave up two years ago and just stopped holding its traditional salmon-running festival.

Some government standards were set, some industrial filters were installed, and the river got a little cleaner. A few salmon came back, and Miyashita still catches a few. But they are often dirty, and he has to throw them back. He now spends most of this time catching a tough little fish no longer than a man's hand that has somehow survived the ravages of filth.

HIS CATCH averages about a million yen a year ($4,000), of which he gets $2,000 — or about a fifth of the income of a wage-earner in Sapporo.

As Miyashita talks in his thick Hokkaido accent, everyone sits on the mat floor around a gas stove with a kettle on it. Miyashita's wife has pushed the dinner table aside and is showing full hospitality to unexpected visitors, even though they arrived just at supper-time. Miyashita's granddaughter alternately hangs on to Mr. Miyashita's shoulder and scuffs about the room in adult-size slippers. There is a pendulum clock on one wall over the color TV, a barometer on a facing wall.

Miyashita's son leaves for his night job, and a gust of cold air from the snowy outdoors enters the room. Icicles crack and drop from the eaves. Later, at about 2 a.m., Miyashita will go out alone in his boat.



THIS ETCHING ON METAL is the work of Eichi Shibuya, regarded as Japan's leading practitioner of the medium, and a confirmed booster of the island of Hokkaido.

Is there any chance of getting the river cleaned up? Mr. Miyashita's friend explains, "No! Never!" Miyashita is more judicious. He breaks into one of the easy smiles that lines his face with weatherbeaten wrinkles. "If it gets any worse, you won't be able to eat anything, so I'm hopeful," he says.

EICHI SHIBUYA is described by some art collectors as Japan's leading contemporary metal printer. His etchings sell in Tokyo and in the U.S., and he may be best known in America for the Time magazine cover a few years back of then Prime Minister Eisaku Sato.

Shibuya works at his Sapporo home, in the studio house he designed, his walls full of treasured prints he has winkled out of the stalls of La Rive Gauche and Nihombashi. The house is cozy and ordered at the same time. It somehow blends Sharaku, Rouault, Chagall, old kites, French posters, wooden masks, driftwood mobiles and memorabilia in a compatible profusion.

It's a notably disciplined home, given its compact size and the abundance of artwork and just plain living that goes on in it. Printers have to be clean, Mrs. Shibuya explains matter-of-factly, and adds that things were good and messy when she was painting oils. She is an accomplished artist herself, but she now devotes most of her professional time to the five-color printings of her husband's etchings.

Eichi Shibuya teaches art at a teachers' college in Sapporo. His mother lives with the family. His grandfather came to Hokkaido with other samurai from Hiroshima: Shibuya still has his sword.

THE SHIBUYAS like living in Hokkaido. It may not have the same cultural stimulation that Tokyo or Kyoto do. (It is only now that a Sapporo gallery is beginning to handle Shibuya's prints, making it unnecessary for Hokkaido collectors to go to Tokyo to purchase his works.) But Tokyo is too noisy and rushed.

The Caves Of Cacahuamilpa An Underground Kingdom

CUERNAVACA, Mexico — Beneath the surface of Cuernavaca's surrounding mountains and now quiescent volcanoes lies a labyrinth of awesomely spectacular grottos, great underground kingdoms often overlooked by tourists.

American Airlines travel writers report that the most popular caverns are Las Gutas of Cacahuamilpa. These grottos are just half an hour's drive (on paved roads) from Cuernavaca via the old highway south toward Taxco, turning west on the route to Ixtapan de las Sal and Toluca. The cavern area has more than adequate parking facilities, as well as several restaurants and a swimming pool.

IDLING NEAR the cavern entrance are a profusion of guides, available for a modest fee. The cavern entrance is a huge natural doorway some 70 feet high and 150 feet wide. A stairway leading down to the first vast gallery, or room, has hand rails and electric lights, standard equipment throughout the caves.

The tour takes visitors through long tunnels of lacy volcanic rocks past glistening stalactites and stalagmites — looming in eerie formations that resemble whatever the visitor's imagination dictates. The various galleries bear such names as the Ovens, the Fountains, Dante's Pass and Little Inferno.

One of the subterranean halls is half a mile long, 400 feet wide and 300 feet from floor to ceiling.

About six miles of this seemingly endless maze has been explored. And although the guided tour takes about four hours, it still does not include all the chambers.

"The implications of this finding are not that the organizational structure of television needs to be radically altered — a different set of requisites might simply mean that the contours of network news would be propelled in different directions — but that alternative sources of national news are necessary for balance. Presumably, different news media with different organizational requirements would produce different versions of the news." —

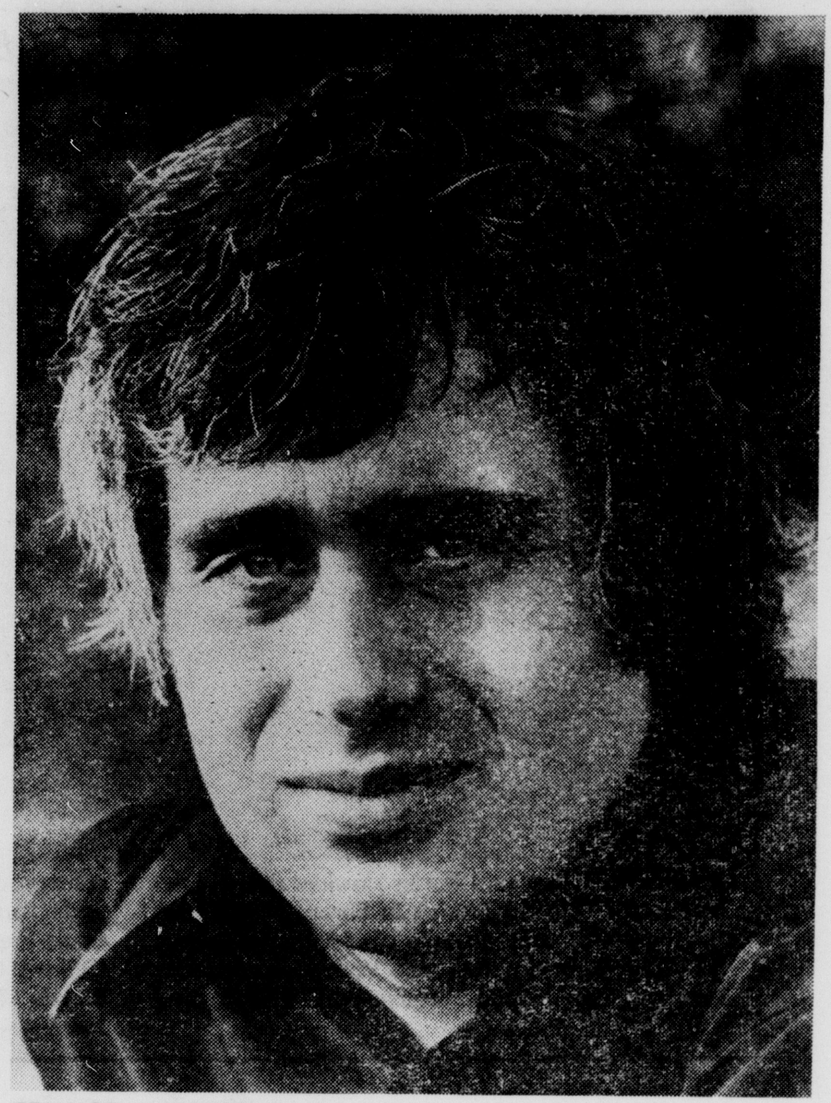
Behind The Brinkleys



EDWARD JAY EPSTEIN, New York-born political scientist and writer, resumes his role as an investigative reporter in "News From Nowhere," an analysis of television network news coverage.

NEWS FROM NOWHERE by Edward Jay Epstein; Random House, 321 pages, $7.95.

By DON KEOWN

Millions of Americans say they get their news solely or principally from television. How completely and how accurately are they being informed about the world around them?

Edward Jay Epstein, who zoomed to prominence as an investigative reporter with his "Inquest" about the John F. Kennedy assassination and the subsequent Warren Commission report, focuses upon the network arm of TV news in his "News From Nowhere" and concludes that the answer is not at all completely and not always accurately.

Strangely, Epstein finds, the weakness lies not in the liberal bias of commentators and reporters so often cited by conservative critics of the media, Vice President Spiro Agnew among them. That personnel has little opportunity to slant the news, such are the organizational restraints under which they work. And, besides, the network newsmen are something less than an army of committed idealists — indeed, they have been recruited with the avoidance of strong personal persuasions in mind.

The factors that do distort network news and make absurd television's claim to serve as "a mirror of reality" are the nature of the networks themselves — profit-oriented, entertainment-minded, always mindful of their affiliates and the regional and local feathers that must not be ruffled.

Working, too, against a totally objective and honest coverage of the news is the government regulation to which television is subjected, and the particular political vulnerability of the medium. Every controversial issue, regardless of merits, must be carefully presented on a balanced point and counterpoint basis.

Finally, there is the nature of television news itself. The relatively cumbersome crew and equipment system restricts the mobility and freedom of the coverage. And the camera emphasizes the visual, the dynamic, the spectacular, sometimes at the expense of significance. Film and tape sometimes invite an editing process that achieves effect but damages the integrity of the final product.

On a logistics basis alone, the TV networks confront a difficult obstacle. They have news teams stationed in only a limited number of cities. Schedules must generally be planned in advance of the news event. Time differences across the continent work against the networks. Large sections of the country — and the world — must be left uncovered. The effort is to give the appearance of national and international coverage without achieving anything like the real thing — the old sizzle without the steak.

Finally, the time allotted the news programs prevents the choice of more than a few of the many news stories breaking every hour. Methods used by network news brass in making those selections are somewhat less than objective.

Epstein touches, too, upon news specials and documentaries, showing them in the "poor cousin" status they are accorded in network and affiliate scheduling, always subjected to pressures to avoid the controversial, always watered down by the compulsion to equivocate and balance views.

"The main finding of this study is that the pictures of society that are shown on television as national news are largely — though not entirely — performed and shaped by organizational considerations," Epstein writes. "To maintain themselves in a competitive world, the networks impose a set of prior restraints, rules and conditions on the operations of their news divisions. Budgets are set for the production of news, time is scheduled for its presentation, and general policies are laid down concerning its content. To satisfy these requirements — and keep their jobs — news executives and producers formulate procedures, systems and policies intended to reduce the uncertainties of news to manageable proportions . . .

"In short, the tendency of network news to focus their attention on certain causes to the comparative neglect of others proceeds more from organizational problems than from the political biases of individuals."

As with so many of these expose-type books, "News From Nowhere" began as a doctoral dissertation, at Harvard University. Epstein has gone directly to the network news centers for personal observations and has not relied upon secondary sources and impressions, giving his book authority and impact. His material is interestingly and effectively presented. And his conclusions are important. The essence of his message is that television network news is all well and good, but that it is not substantial enough to serve as a really basic fount for an informed public. Its proper role is purely supplemental.

Epstein's profession as a political scientist and teacher is fortunate. Any newspaper journalist aiming similar criticism at the rival medium could not help but feel uneasy in the knowledge that his own medium contains flaws and weaknesses enough to occupy his and others in the profession fullest attention. The profit motive and organizational interference are not unknown in the city newsroom.

SUPERIOR Publishing Co., a Seattle house, has specialized in pictorial histories, building its books around collections of old photographs. Sometimes the device comes off, and sometimes it does not.

For "Remarkable Flying Machines" by Henry R. Palmer Jr., billed as "A Pictorial Account of Certain Extraordinary Aircraft that have been Built and Flown Since 1783," the verdict will no doubt vary with the reader. Pictures that range from Alberto Santos-Dumont's 1910 Demoisells (described variously as looking like an "infuriated grasshopper" and "birdcage parasols") to the most modern of supersonic jets have been collected and captioned by Palmer for his book. Avaiation buffs are bound to be intrigued. Yet those especially knowledgeable will also experience disappointment, knowing that it is a decidedly superficial coverage of a really fascinating subject. Many bases go untouched.

Also new from Superior: "More Than Meets the Sky," a pictorial history of Northwest Orient Airlines by Stephen E. Mills, Washington state's flying author.

As with all Superior books, pictures take precedence over text, and there are some 400 well reproduced photos in this book. And what there is of the text borders at times on puffery. But those who delight in photos of old planes and pioneer pilots, as well as newer equipment and younger men, will be well entertained.

Both books carry a $12.95 price tag, and Superior lives up to its own name in the quality of the design and printing.

JANE AIKEN HODGE
Tripping through Greece

Jane Aiken Hodge, second daughter of Conrad Aiken, has built herself a reputation as an author of adventure-intrigue-suspense fiction. "Strangers in Company," despite its defects, should enhance her prestige.

The novel follows a tour group through Greece. Its members are plagued by a series of mishaps that may or may not be accidental. Mrs. Hodge begins her story strongly in control of its several threads, but as the novel progresses, the strands begin to unravel, so that the conclusion appears both predictable and undisciplined.

Some characters — notably headstrong young Stella Marten — are well done. It is difficult to make a moody young teenager appealing, but Mrs. Hodge succeeds. Other characters do not fare so well, notably Marion Frenche, Stella's paid companion and a rather tiresome one at that.

But the best thing about the novel is the Greek background. Mrs. Hodge uses its rich potential splendidly. And she works Greek politics, both past and present, into her plot, although here she is less accomplished in her weaving.

Still, "Strangers in Company" is pleasurable escapist reading.

She Called Everyone Darling, And They Loved Her For It

TALLULAH — DARLING OF THE GODS, AN INTIMATE PORTRAIT by Kieran Tunney; Dutton, 228 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Jim Williams.

As Kieran Tunney recalls it, Tallulah and he were friends from the start.

"Two hours after we met, Tallulah was in the bathtub, I on the edge of it, drinking champagne."

What Tunney has assembled is an intimate and personal portrait of the famed actress who was a legend in her lifetime. At all times Tallulah is center stage. There's happiness as well as sadness. And Tallulah comes across as a vibrant and warm person.

Shortly before her death Tallulah asked Tunney, whose success as a playwright has been limited, to "write about me . . . what you saw and heard."

One of the most delightful chapters centers around Tunney taking Tallulah to Manhattan's Little Church Around the Corner to pay honor to the retiring rector, one of Miss Bankhead's southern kinsman. A classical Tallulah statement after receiving the Communion wine: "The communion wine, darling — much too sweet! . . . Why can't they serve something dry? I mean, early in the morning, one isn't feeling all that strong!"

As her close friend, actres-author Anita Loos, said in her eulogy to her dead friend: "Tallulah never bored anyone and that I consider to be humanitarianism of a very high order indeed."

Tunney closes his personal account of the actress whose fame spread across two continents by stating "Bankhead was unique . . . ah, how I miss Tallulah — that true Darling of the Gods.!" Don't we all.

One Man's Fight For Justice In South Africa

Once more, in "No Neutral Ground," we are told of the injustice of man toward man. And we read of the struggle of the author, a bespectacled attorney named Joel Carlson, against this injustice.

The iniquity is racism; apartheid, to be precise, as conceived and practiced in South Africa. Even if one were to dismiss much of what Carlson tells us as the hysteria of a civil libertarian possessed, racial division in this land still emerges as cruel, stark truth.

For 20 years, Carlson fought the system, defending black people against what he describes in his moving book as the "final, binding and irrevocable" authority of the white man. Finally, fearing for his family and employees and in the belief his work was enabling the apartheid government to present a false image of judicial honesty, Carlson renounced his citizenship.

Carlson reflects compellingly on his work in South Africa. With each chapter, the complexity of the task grows with the agony of the blacks' plight. Carlson fights pass laws, ghost squads, farm labor horrors. He defends Zulus, blacks beaten up by security police as "terrorists," simple people who enter his office with accounts of injustice.

Victories are not easy; frustrations many.

He describes conditions in a jail where women clients were held virtually incommunicado: "There was one unshaded light bulb in each cell, encircled by wire mesh, which stayed on day and night. The cells were dank and cold, and a coco mat, less than an inch thick and about thirty inches wide by seventy-two inches long, was the prisoner's bed. The blankets stank from years of unwashed use. There was no furniture in the cells, only a mug for drinking purposes and a sanitary pail."

Carlson writes vividly, except for spots where he lapses into legal jargon and ponderous sightseeing that disrupt the tempo of his work. There is a beautiful line in the beginning that sums up what the book is all about. It comes when Carlson is looking back at his days of discovery as a clerk in a dingy courthouse near Johannesburg.

"Perhaps one day," he said of the building, which had been built as a temporary structure but remained in use more than 50 years, "it will be destroyed when justice is done to it, for justice was never done in it."

An Excellent Book On A Remarkable Family

THE LODGES OF MASSACHUSETTS by Alden Hatch; Hawthorn, 328 pages, $10.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

After a brief sketch of their most notable ancestor, George Cabot, author Alden Hatch tells the story of the Lodges in Massachusetts politics, beginning with Henry Cabot Lodge the elder, remembered as the man who torpedoed United States membership in the League of Nations.

It wasn't that way, insists Hatch in "The Lodges of Massachusetts."

Henry Cabot Lodge's reservations on the League covenant as part of the World War I peace treaty were soundly based on protecting United States independence from foreign entanglements. But Wilson was too obdurate to accept Lodge's proposed amendments.

The same pro-Lodge view runs through Hatch's biographies of grandsons Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. and John Davis Lodge. "The Lodges of Massachusetts" is definitely a "positive" account of the family — sometimes a little too much so. For instance the view it gives of America's and Lodge's role in Vietnam is, to put it mildly, somewhat distorted.

But "The Lodges of Massachusetts" is an excellent book for all that. And the family it describes is without doubt a remarkable family..

Two Composites That Don't Work

PEOPLE WILL ALWAYS BE KIND by Wilfrid Sheed; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 374 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

The first half of this novel is a vivid recreation of Casey's fight against disease and despair. He marshalls, with a selfish instinct for survival, the souls and finances of his parents; undergoes the then available treatments of hot packs and hot springs; and in desperation, turns to quacks and finally to prayers.

Author Sheed has obviously been there. The dustjacket says he "has plumbed the depths of his own experience," and his portrait of a wise-cracking kid floored by fate is poignant and gripping.

Part two of his book is about Casey today — a middle-aged politician, successful enough to capture the nomination for president, a cynical yet sentimental composite of Roosevelt, Kennedy, McGovern.

Sheed shows us Casey through the eyes of Sam Perkins, a self-styled "eastern smarty," youthful product of the Ivy League, political innocent, a composite of all the hopeful young people who worked for Kennedy and McGovern in recent years.

Unfortunately, composites usually aren't believable fictional characters — and Casey the politician and Perkins the youth are not exceptions, despite pages of glib conversation.

An 'Old Lion' Cavorts In Cannes At Festival Time

EVENING IN BYZANTIUM by Irwin Shaw; Delacorte, 368 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

The trouble with Craig is that though his problems are real, author Shaw is unable to make the reader (at least, this reader) care what happens to him.

Nevertheless, the novel moves rapidly. Craig's conversations are glib —he may show up on your TV screen — and the descriptions of Cannes at festival time are designed to titillate middle-calls, stay-at-home folks.

"Two hours after we met, Tallulah was in the bathtub, I on the edge of it, drinking champagne."

What Tunney has assembled is an intimate and personal portrait of the famed actress who was a legend in her lifetime. At all times Tallulah is center stage. There's happiness as well as sadness. And Tallulah comes across as a vibrant and warm person.

Shortly before her death Tallulah asked Tunney, whose success as a playwright has been limited, to "write about me . . . what you saw and heard."

One of the most delightful chapters centers around Tunney taking Tallulah to Manhattan's Little Church Around the Corner to pay honor to the retiring rector, one of Miss Bankhead's southern kinsman. A classical Tallulah statement after receiving the Communion wine: "The communion wine, darling — much too sweet! . . . Why can't they serve something dry? I mean, early in the morning, one isn't feeling all that strong!"

As her close friend, actres-author Anita Loos, said in her eulogy to her dead friend: "Tallulah never bored anyone and that I consider to be humanitarianism of a very high order indeed."

Tunney closes his personal account of the actress whose fame spread across two continents by stating "Bankhead was unique . . . ah, how I miss Tallulah — that true Darling of the Gods.!" Don't we all.

One Man's Fight For Justice In South Africa

Once more, in "No Neutral Ground," we are told of the injustice of man toward man. And we read of the struggle of the author, a bespectacled attorney named Joel Carlson, against this injustice.

The iniquity is racism; apartheid, to be precise, as conceived and practiced in South Africa. Even if one were to dismiss much of what Carlson tells us as the hysteria of a civil libertarian possessed, racial division in this land still emerges as cruel, stark truth.

For 20 years, Carlson fought the system, defending black people against what he describes in his moving book as the "final, binding and irrevocable" authority of the white man. Finally, fearing for his family and employees and in the belief his work was enabling the apartheid government to present a false image of judicial honesty, Carlson renounced his citizenship.

Carlson reflects compellingly on his work in South Africa. With each chapter, the complexity of the task grows with the agony of the blacks' plight. Carlson fights pass laws, ghost squads, farm labor horrors. He defends Zulus, blacks beaten up by security police as "terrorists," simple people who enter his office with accounts of injustice.

Victories are not easy; frustrations many.

He describes conditions in a jail where women clients were held virtually incommunicado: "There was one unshaded light bulb in each cell, encircled by wire mesh, which stayed on day and night. The cells were dank and cold, and a coco mat, less than an inch thick and about thirty inches wide by seventy-two inches long, was the prisoner's bed. The blankets stank from years of unwashed use. There was no furniture in the cells, only a mug for drinking purposes and a sanitary pail."

Carlson writes vividly, except for spots where he lapses into legal jargon and ponderous sightseeing that disrupt the tempo of his work. There is a beautiful line in the beginning that sums up what the book is all about. It comes when Carlson is looking back at his days of discovery as a clerk in a dingy courthouse near Johannesburg.

"Perhaps one day," he said of the building, which had been built as a temporary structure but remained in use more than 50 years, "it will be destroyed when justice is done to it, for justice was never done in it."

An Excellent Book On A Remarkable Family

After a brief sketch of their most notable ancestor, George Cabot, author Alden Hatch tells the story of the Lodges in Massachusetts politics, beginning with Henry Cabot Lodge the elder, remembered as the man who torpedoed United States membership in the League of Nations.

Henry Cabot Lodge's reservations on the League covenant as part of the World War I peace treaty were soundly based on protecting United States independence from foreign entanglements. But Wilson was too obdurate to accept Lodge's proposed amendments.

The same pro-Lodge view runs through Hatch's biographies of grandsons Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. and John Davis Lodge. "The Lodges of Massachusetts" is definitely a "positive" account of the family — sometimes a little too much so. For instance the view it gives of America's and Lodge's role in Vietnam is, to put it mildly, somewhat distorted.

But "The Lodges of Massachusetts" is an excellent book for all that. And the family it describes is without doubt a remarkable family..

Two Composites That Don't Work

PEOPLE WILL ALWAYS BE KIND by Wilfrid Sheed; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 374 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

The first half of this novel is a vivid recreation of Casey's fight against disease and despair. He marshalls, with a selfish instinct for survival, the souls and finances of his parents; undergoes the then available treatments of hot packs and hot springs; and in desperation, turns to quacks and finally to prayers.

Author Sheed has obviously been there. The dustjacket says he "has plumbed the depths of his own experience," and his portrait of a wise-cracking kid floored by fate is poignant and gripping.

Part two of his book is about Casey today — a middle-aged politician, successful enough to capture the nomination for president, a cynical yet sentimental composite of Roosevelt, Kennedy, McGovern.

Sheed shows us Casey through the eyes of Sam Perkins, a self-styled "eastern smarty," youthful product of the Ivy League, political innocent, a composite of all the hopeful young people who worked for Kennedy and McGovern in recent years.

Unfortunately, composites usually aren't believable fictional characters — and Casey the politician and Perkins the youth are not exceptions, despite pages of glib conversation.

An 'Old Lion' Cavorts In Cannes At Festival Time

EVENING IN BYZANTIUM by Irwin Shaw; Delacorte, 368 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Irwin Shaw, also author of "The Young Lions," shows us this old lion cavorting in restaurants and bars, on beaches and (of course) in bed.

The trouble with Craig is that though his problems are real, author Shaw is unable to make the reader (at least, this reader) care what happens to him.

Nevertheless, the novel moves rapidly. Craig's conversations are glib —he may show up on your TV screen — and the descriptions of Cannes at festival time are designed to titillate middle-calls, stay-at-home folks.

Cooking Without The Cholesterol

Medical science is not in agreement upon the role cholesterol intake plays in America's cardiovascular disease crisis, some proclaiming it the major villain, others regarding it as only a secondary factor, a few holding it blameless.

But the American Heart Assn. recommends a diet low in saturated fat and cholesterol for those with heart problems. Thus, when Jack Zane suffered a mild heart attack, it is not surprising that his doctor instructed Polly Zane that henceforth her husband's diet would have to forego the dairy products, the marbled meats, the fried foods, the commercial baked goods, the shellfish, etc., that had previously pleased his palate. Even eggs had to be limited.

Mrs. Zane set about a study and research course aimed at making this new eating style for her husband —and herself — as interesting and tasty as possible, exploring libraries and shops for books and pamphlets, testing those and her own ideas in her kitchen.

Her effort brought her into contact with other housewives with the same problem and interest and brought home the realization of the need for a cookbook covering low cholesterol cooking. This is it: thick, attractively designed, crowded with 600 recipes that have the gourmet flavor without the fat. There are dishes like beef stroganoff with mushrooms, prune pudding spice cake, cream of asparagus soup, pumpkin chiffon pie, citrus salad with dates, creamed turkey curry, veal scallopine marsala and sole veronique —hardly the kind of foods that require a sacrifice on the part of the dieter. In fact, the recipes have a fancy, festive flair, over and beyond the general run of cookbook recipes.

There is, however, one worrisome aspect to the collection. With all the attention given to avoiding fats and cholesterol, a great many of the recipes contain generous or overly generous amounts of sugar, an ingredient that many experts consider as much a suspect in the heart attack syndrome as cholesterol or fat — perhaps more so. The inclusion here is puzzling, especially since the book bears the endorsement of Dr. Campbell Moses, medical director of the American Heart Assn., in a foreword, and includes introductory material and an appendix provided by Dr. Daniel Steinberg, professor of medicine and head of the Division of Metabolic Disease, at the University of California at San Diego.

Whether it makes sense to curtail cholesterol and continue with sugar is a question to be decided by the individual and his or her doctor. But undeniably, Polly Zane's recipes are an appetizing array, and the material from Dr. Steinberg — "A Primer on Diet and Heart Disease," — is interesting.

For Writers, By Writers

Whereas most books are produced by writers for readers, "Writer's Yearbook '73" by writers is intended for other writers.

Writer Digest published the guide annually, and the 1973 edition along with the usual lifting of markets — short fiction, poetry, cartoon, articles, books and a special section of Midwestern markets — offers a bevy of features in the "how to write it" vein from "Secrets of the Short Short Story" by F. A. Rockwell and "Plotting the Novel" by Walter Sheldon to "How to Get Started Writing and Selling Greeting Cards" by Barbara Bartocci and "Myths About Writing and Marketing Poetry" by John D. Engle Jr. Alex Haley covers researching, and Bill Keil offers travel tips for writers and photographers. Brian Garfield has a piece on selling the novel. Tax, insurance and retirement topics are covered. And there is an interview of Harold Robbins.

Kirk Poling again edits the Yearbook and has done a brief piece on the passing of Life magazine. "Writer's Yearbook," in magazine format and containing advertisements, sells for $1.50. This is volume 44. D.K.

A PAINTING

The painting was imperfect —
Ten years work in creating it,
Yet still the flaws showed through;
With a slash of the knife destroyed.

Now I have nothing . . .
I could have had a fine painting, with
Some minor flaws.

A PAINTING

The painting was imperfect —
Ten years work in creating it,
Yet still the flaws showed through;
With a slash of the knife destroyed.

Now I have nothing . . .
I could have had a fine painting, with
Some minor flaws.

HOW TO DIAGNOSE A SICK SOIL

You may not be the "doctor" when it comes to diagnosing and treating serious ailments of the soil in your yard and garden. But there are certain "first aid" measures that you can use, as recommended by the experts, to recognize, prevent and correct such maladies.

The general subject, of course, is fertilizers for the soil. And before you can really begin, you should have an accurate, scientific study of your specific soil that will tell you what your problems are.

In Marin County, for a soil analysis, you can go to the Pink Shutter Nursery at the Strawberry Town and Country Village, Mill Valley, which makes analyses for a fee, or take your sample to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service at 1613 Second St., Petaluma, which will make the analysis free.

Then, with the help of the soil test information, your farm adviser or a nurseryman can help you plan a sound fertilizing program tailored to your special needs.

Along with the soil analysis results, there are a variety of symptoms that can be seen with the naked eye that will tell you that certain vital nutrients for your plants are missing in the earth. And available at garden centers is a wide selection of both organic and non-organic fertilizers to meet those needs, available under many and various commercial names.

Here are signs to look for that indicate that one of the important nutrients, nitrogen, is deficient in your soil: erosion in the topsoil, a very sandy soil, yellowing or stunted foliage in the plants growing in the soil, early-falling leaves from the trees.

Many of those same symptoms can indicate the lack of another nutritional element, potash. Plan to add a fertilizer including potash if the soil is quite sandy, or if older leaves take on a yellow tint between the veins and appear scorched at the margins.

Phosphorus is called for if plants remain stunted, or if subsurface drainage is poor, or the soil has an especially fine texture.

Good nursery centers can suggest the right fertilizer to provide the nutrition you need for any of these soil conditions. Instructions for applying the material and the quantities to use will usually come with the commercial fertilizer you buy, and the garden center can give you advice for others.

However, the American Assn. of Nurserymen offers some suggestions which will be helpful in any case.

Fertilizers should be spread as evenly as possible over the soil surface. Small amounts can be distributed more easily if they are first mixed with fine, dry soil or sand. Fertilizer spreaders that move on wheels help to insure even distribution.

It's a good idea to cultivate or rake in the fertilizer after spreading to prevent its hardening on the surface or washing away.

Especially during dry seasons, newly fertilized areas should be well watered immediately.

The three "first aid" lessons important to every gardener are: learn to recognize symptoms of sick soil; know the kind of nutrient to look for in the fertilizer you choose to correct the situation; and be sure to apply the fertilizer in the right way for the best results.

Why Not A Plant For Mother's Day?

It's a rare Mother, today, who isn't interested in living greenery.

And, whether it is a foliage plant for indoor enjoyment, or a longed-for tree or shrub for her garden, a living gift plant is sure to please her on Mother's Day, May 13.

Indoor foliage plants add dramatic beauty to their surrounding, and highlight furnishings while serving as unique decorations. Perhaps this is the year that Mom gets that Fiddle Leaf Fig, or the Boston Fern she's been wanting.

Mothers who enjoy cooking gourmet meals would thrill to receiving a gift selection of Herbs. Nurseries have small containers of herb plants; you can re-plant them in decorative pots to enjoy up-close, while she grows her own seasonings.

Shopping and browsing at a nearby nursery will reveal countless gift possibilities. Roses are in bloom in nursery containers; Azaleas, Rhododendrons and Camellias are to be found in flower, and this is an excellent time for planting.

You'll also find blooming annual flowers, which are in nursery pots, and which will continue to provide color through the warm season. Grow these in containers at the entryway.

Such traditional and sure-to-please favorites as Hydrangeas, Chrysanthemums, Gloxinias and African Violets are in full bloom and never fail to bring smiles of satisfaction and appreciation.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓Hurry to plant Dahlia and Gladiolus bulbs. Nurseries still have a good selection for summer-time color.

✓Yellowed leaves on Camellias, Gardenias and other shrubs, or defoliated citrus often indicate a need for iron. Supply one of the chelating compounds that hold the iron in suspension until it is absorbed by the roots.

✓And brighten your home with flowering sprigs from your blooming trees and shrubs. You are also pruning at the same time.

✓Dwarf marigolds are easily grown and ideal for edging purposes, providing a summer-long show of color.

✓Let annuals transplanted from nursery flats into the garden get a good start; then pinch back the plants to encourage side branching and more bloom.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: A New Spirit For An Old Bath

By CAROLYN MURRAY

So many of us are buying 30 and 40-year-old homes because we like the extra space. But we have to accept the 40-year-old plumbing fixtures we inherit with these spacious oldies!

As long as there's life left in older plumbing fixtures, I see little reason for total replacement. But there are a few things a family can do with paint and some ingenuity.

One young couple has given a 1929 bathroom a bright dress-up with color.

THE TUB AREA was surrounded by tiles in an off-white finish, then framed in a goofy arch. They decided to paint the tiles in hot pink, orange and bright yellow. There's no rigid pattern to the placement of the color, just "what seemed natural" to this designing team of amateurs.

The look was so effective that they carried their paint brushes into the stall shower and repeated one band of colored tiles. Then hubby decided to border the arch in hot-pink paint and trim it with orange stripes in a way they had noticed in small Mexican villages.

It's great fun and they expect to have to renew the paint every two or three years — but they look forward to the idea. "We may change our coats of many colors next time around!"

THE BIG, expensive mistake they made was the purchase of a fancy shag rug in those three colors of orange, pink & yellow. It looked terrible, wouldn't fit under the door and seemed to make everything else dowdy. So they stowed the rug and bought simple pile orlon carpeting in a fern-green color. (They still haven't found a use for the supersexy shag!)

It's important to allow yourself an occational error in judgment. (Husbands are you listening?)

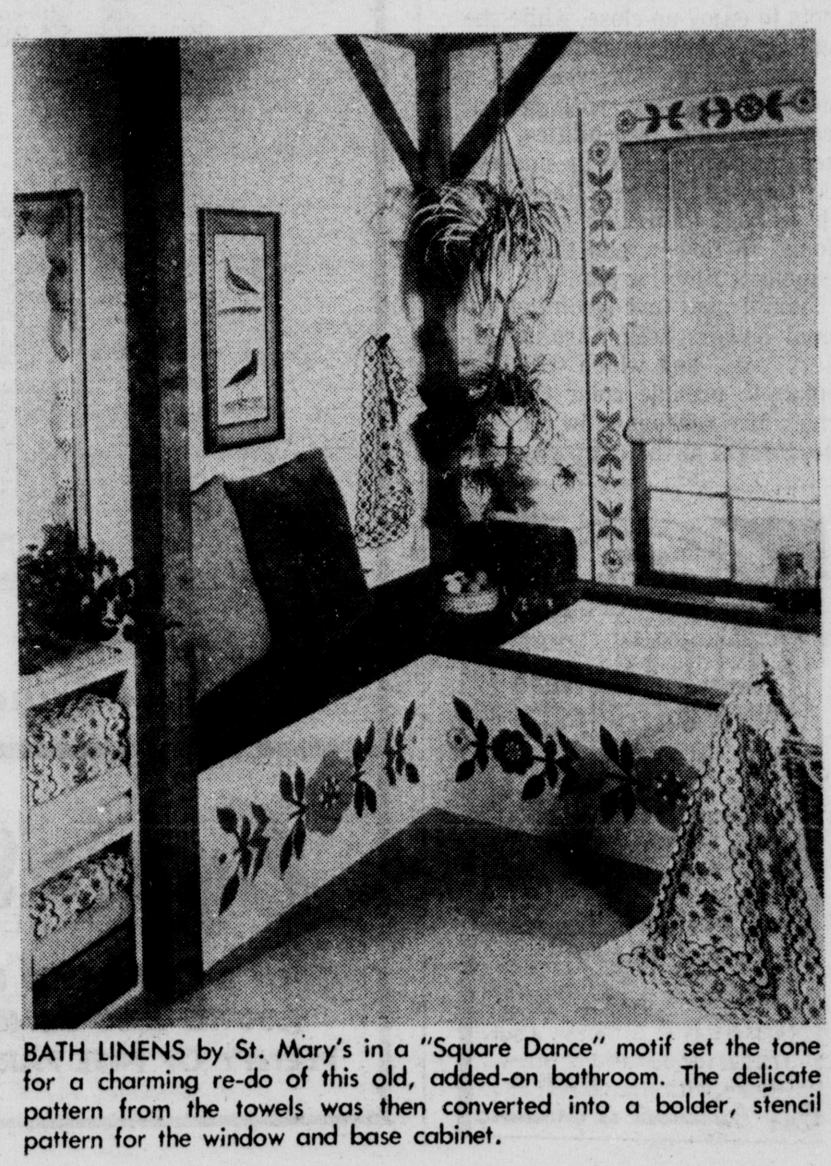
The main idea with home embellishments is experimentation. Sometimes an experiment fails, other times it's an eye-opener. The fixed-over bath shown here is an example.

THE PREVIOUS owner had added this extension bath area to an older house but had never integrated it into any kind of decorative motif. So the young couple who moved in decided to build a simple seat-shelf all around the tub.

Again paint was a creative tool. Walls were painted yellow, then they created a stencil inspired by a pattern in St. Mary's "Square Dance" bath linens.

This gay multicolored motif frames the window and the base of their new seat. Fake beams add interest and encourage them to add hanging plants.

Another neat trick was the provision they made under the seat for bulk storage. Now a dozen rolls of tissue paper, cans of cleanser and extra bathmats are ever present and handy right in the bathroom.



BATH LINENS by St. Mary's in a "Square Dance" motif set the tone for a charming re-do of this old, added-on bathroom. The delicate pattern from the towels was then converted into a bolder, stencil pattern for the window and base cabinet.

Your Gardening Tools—Keep Then Dry, And In Good Repair

By ANDY LANG

Garden tools are especially subjected to abuse.

Home owners who meticulously care for the tools in their workshops are often careless about maintaining the equipment used in and around the garden.

Why this is so is difficult to explain. Perhaps there is a feeling that garden tools, having been made for outdoor use, are better able to withstand the vagaries of the weather. Not so in most cases. Handles split and break; spades bend; edges get dull; bolts and rivets come loose; metal rusts.

WHEN A wooden handle has split, it usually can be repaired by winding tape around it, but not before first applying some waterproof glue to the split portion. In pushing glue into the break, great care must be exercised to avoid splitting the handle even further.

A handle repaired with both glue and tape will last indefinitely.

If the split extends all the way down the handle or is otherwise likely to be difficult to repair, it is best to get a new handle. The cost of one is a lot less than the cost of a new tool.

IN MAKING the purchase, be sure to get a handle that fits. If necessary, take the tool to the store with you.

Handles are attached in various ways. You can use the same method of attachment as the old one, but if you decide to use a different one — which is perfectly all right — avoid driving a nail through the wood. Most handles are made of hardwood and will split unless a pilot hole is drilled for the nail.

A wire brush is excellent for removing rust and caked dirt from the metal parts of garden tools. Following with steel wooling will restore the original smooth finish. If the rust is deep and cannot be entirely removed, get it as smooth as possible, then coat with a rust-inhibiting paint.

PREVENTING rust is simple.

Each time the tool is used, wipe it dry, then wipe it a second time, this time with a rag dipped in oil. When the tool is to be put away for a considerable period, apply some oil or rust preventative to the metal portion and store it in a tool chest or box which will keep moist air from getting to it.

Sometimes the rivet that holds a handle to the metal comes loose. It can be removed by splitting one end, then pulling it out. It can be replaced with another rivet, sold at hardware stores and lumberyards, or a nut and bolt.

Planning The Yard For High Use, Low Care

The trouble with a park-like yard is that the average citizen can't call the City Park Department to come out and mow it.

Effective yard planning allows for gardening, games and outdoor entertaining, while holding down upkeep time and costs.

Sunny, well-drained areas should be set aside for garden, and lawn planted at a distance where lively games of badminton, croquet or tag will not echo through the house.

SPACE NEAREST the house might be reserved for a roomy patio or deck where the family can enjoy open-air dining or entertain friends. Plantings and an arbor or two will make the area cool and livable during day and evening hours.

A practical decking species is Douglas fir, for strength and availability. It wears and weathers well and its medium tone takes a full range of stain colors for coordinating house and garden decor.

LUMBER SHOULD be two-inch stock such as two-by-fours or two-by-sixes for adequate strength to avoid cupping of boards as the deck is used.

Benches along one or more deck edges are a simple addition that adds charm as well as utility. With comfortable, slanted backs, they can be built of the same fir deck boards, thus eliminating hauling and storing lawn furniture.

They replace railings as a safety feature and make an inviting border for the deck.

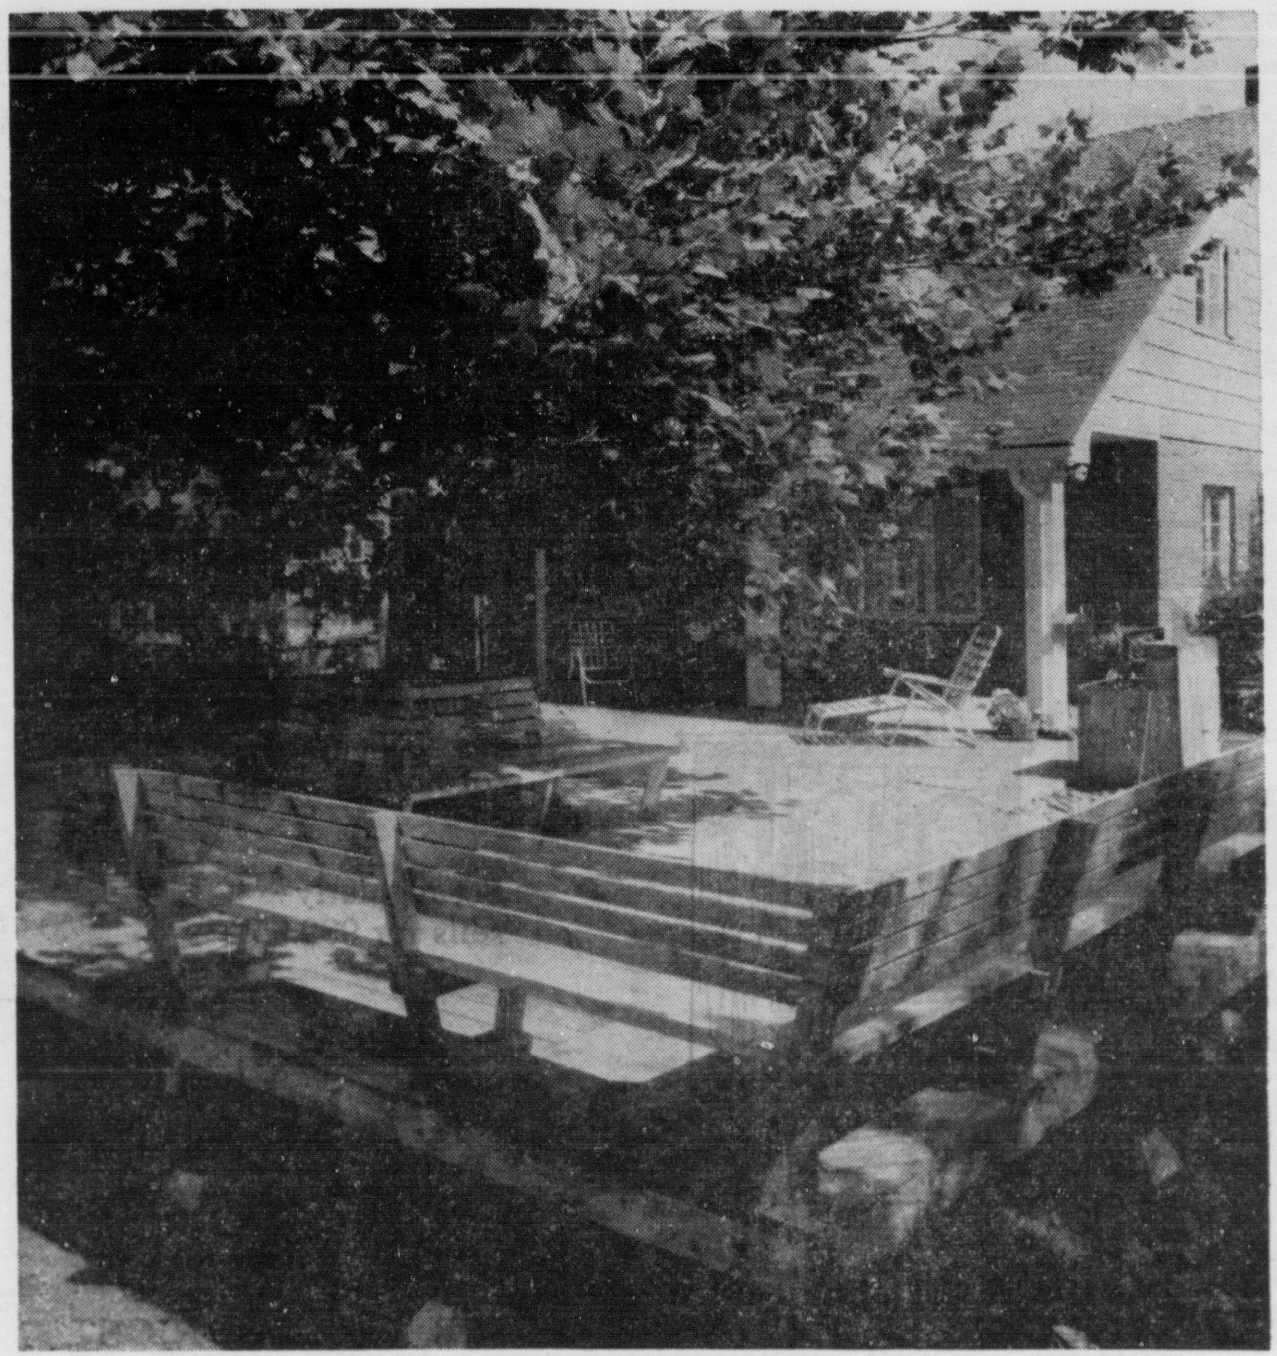
Planning The Yard For High Use, Low Care



A DECK OF parquet-patterned two-by-six-inch Douglas fir expands this slab patio for outdoor dining and entertaining, and benches, center and two sides, offer inviting conversation areas.

The trouble with a park-like yard is that the average citizen can't call the City Park Department to come out and mow it.

Effective yard planning allows for gardening, games and outdoor entertaining, while holding down upkeep time and costs.

Sunny, well-drained areas should be set aside for garden, and lawn planted at a distance where lively games of badminton, croquet or tag will not echo through the house.

SPACE NEAREST the house might be reserved for a roomy patio or deck where the family can enjoy open-air dining or entertain friends. Plantings and an arbor or two will make the area cool and livable during day and evening hours.

Decking works especially well for garden living because wood is completely compatible with plant materials. Existing beds or trees can form a pleasant scheme of cut-outs, color highlighting the deck.

A practical decking species is Douglas fir, for strength and availability. It wears and weathers well and its medium tone takes a full range of stain colors for coordinating house and garden decor.

LUMBER SHOULD be two-inch stock such as two-by-fours or two-by-sixes for adequate strength to avoid cupping of boards as the deck is used.

Benches along one or more deck edges are a simple addition that adds charm as well as utility. With comfortable, slanted backs, they can be built of the same fir deck boards, thus eliminating hauling and storing lawn furniture.

They replace railings as a safety feature and make an inviting border for the deck.

Your Gardening Tools—Keep Then Dry, And In Good Repair

By ANDY LANG

Garden tools are especially subjected to abuse.

Home owners who meticulously care for the tools in their workshops are often careless about maintaining the equipment used in and around the garden.

Why this is so is difficult to explain. Perhaps there is a feeling that garden tools, having been made for outdoor use, are better able to withstand the vagaries of the weather. Not so in most cases. Handles split and break; spades bend; edges get dull; bolts and rivets come loose; metal rusts.

WHEN A wooden handle has split, it usually can be repaired by winding tape around it, but not before first applying some waterproof glue to the split portion. In pushing glue into the break, great care must be exercised to avoid splitting the handle even further.

A handle repaired with both glue and tape will last indefinitely.

If the split extends all the way down the handle or is otherwise likely to be difficult to repair, it is best to get a new handle. The cost of one is a lot less than the cost of a new tool.

IN MAKING the purchase, be sure to get a handle that fits. If necessary, take the tool to the store with you.

Handles are attached in various ways. You can use the same method of attachment as the old one, but if you decide to use a different one — which is perfectly all right — avoid driving a nail through the wood. Most handles are made of hardwood and will split unless a pilot hole is drilled for the nail.

A wire brush is excellent for removing rust and caked dirt from the metal parts of garden tools. Following with steel wooling will restore the original smooth finish. If the rust is deep and cannot be entirely removed, get it as smooth as possible, then coat with a rust-inhibiting paint.

PREVENTING rust is simple.

Each time the tool is used, wipe it dry, then wipe it a second time, this time with a rag dipped in oil. When the tool is to be put away for a considerable period, apply some oil or rust preventative to the metal portion and store it in a tool chest or box which will keep moist air from getting to it.

Sometimes the rivet that holds a handle to the metal comes loose. It can be removed by splitting one end, then pulling it out. It can be replaced with another rivet, sold at hardware stores and lumberyards, or a nut and bolt.

Guy With The Grin

By VERNON SCOTT

Paul Lynde's stop-and-go grin of ecstacy and agony are as much a part of him in private life as they are on his weekly situation comedy show playing a harried suburban lawyer.

He is a study in contrasts and unravelled nerves.

Lynde's hillside Hollywood home once belonged to the late Errol Flynn, a man with whom Paul has almost nothing in common.

When he moved into the New Orleans-French style home Paul had it completely renovated, mistakenly believeing he would save money. In the end it would have cost half as much to build a new house.

A native of Mount Vernon, Ohio, and former resident of New York, Lynde felt compelled to build or buy as high in the hills as possible to obtain a city lights view. He succeeded.

The house is built on six separate levels and each room has a balcony with an iron railing.

"Many of my friends only visit once," he says with misgivings.

There is plenty of room for bachelor Lynde, including three bedrooms, one of which has been transformed into memory lane. It contins pictures, awards and other memorabilia collected over the years.

"I have my whole career in that room," Paul says, flashing his toothy grin. "I don't want that stuff spread all over the house."

Paul is a passable cook, depending on beef stew or steaks and salad when he entertains. But recently he's hired a cook for those evenings when he hosts six or eight friends for dinner.

A maid comes in twice a week to clean, a gardener stops by three times a week, and there's a live-in house boy whose principal duty is to care for Paul's only pet, Harry MacAfee, a dandie dinmont dog.

"The Paul Lynde Show" is filmed at Warner Bros. every Friday evening.

ABC-TV requires Paul to rehearse Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. On Fridays, however, he works from noon until midnight.

While the comedian is not overburdened with work on the series, he makes life more difficult — and more fun — by appearing regularly as a panelist on the wacky "Hollywood Squares" game show.

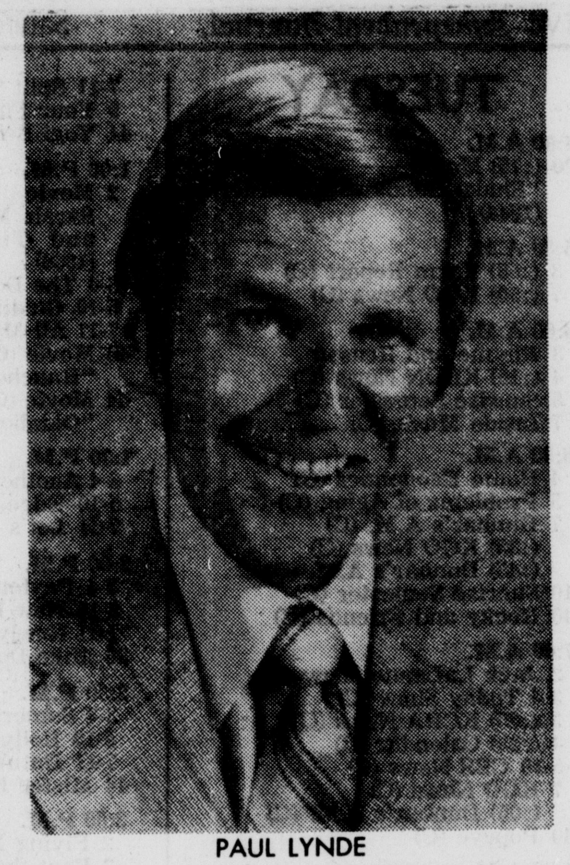
Lynde has virtually no hobbies and he collect nothing.

He hasn't been in his swimming pool for almost a year. He uses it as a backdrop for publicity pictures and magazine layouts.

Weekends are often spent flying to various cities around the country to promote his show.

Because he gets no exercise Lynde is on a constant diet, a fact of life that drives him to the brink. If he doesn't watch his calories Paul can gain 10 or 15 pounds without trying.

Before he gained fame Lynde enjoyed visiting the beach. Now sandy little children surround him asking for autographs.



PAUL LYNDE
A study in contrasts

His wardrobe on the show reflects his own taste. He's found a Beverly Hills haberdashery which caters to young executives.

Paul's chief pursuit away from the studio is relaxation. It doesn't come to him easily. He lets down best when such friends as Jonathan Winters and Robert Clarey stop by with their wives for dinner.

LUCIANO MAGGIORA, right, maitre d' of the elegant Blue Box Restaurant, prepares one of that establishment's specialties as part of Dinah Shore's salute to San Francisco on "Dinah's Place" Thursday at 9 a.m. on Channels 3 and 4. San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, left, is a guest of Miss Shore for the occasion.

Tortured for Christ!

Milan Haimovici

Lutheran pastor Milan Haimovici spent eight years in Romanian jails passing through indescribable tortures. The Communists placed him barefoot on burning coals. He was savagely beaten in the groin and made to empty barrels filled with the human waste of thousands of prisoners with his own hands. However, his faith withstood all these trials. Even Communist officers as they spoke later about it, were filled with such respect that they took off their hats when speaking about this living saint. Thousands of Christian prisoners died in Romanian Communist jails. A complete account of their courageous faith and stand for the Lord is contained in the book TORTURED FOR CHRIST, by Rev. Richard Wurmbrand, a bestseller in 25 languages.

Be interested in the plight of our persecuted brethren behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains. You can help! Mail coupon for the book, "Tortured for Christ" by Rev. Richard Wurmbrand.

Tortured for Christ!

Milan Haimovici

Lutheran pastor Milan Haimovici spent eight years in Romanian jails passing through indescribable tortures. The Communists placed him barefoot on burning coals. He was savagely beaten in the groin and made to empty barrels filled with the human waste of thousands of prisoners with his own hands. However, his faith withstood all these trials. Even Communist officers as they spoke later about it, were filled with such respect that they took off their hats when speaking about this living saint. Thousands of Christian prisoners died in Romanian Communist jails. A complete account of their courageous faith and stand for the Lord is contained in the book TORTURED FOR CHRIST, by Rev. Richard Wurmbrand, a bestseller in 25 languages.

IN THE YUKON

Sesame Street, Cannon Hits, But Commercials Are Not

WHITEHORSE, Canada (UPI) — Up here in the Yukon, the biggest show in town these days is live television which has finally come to Whitehorse and a dozen other towns in the far north, thanks to Anik 1, Canada's first communications satellite.

Designed and developed by Hughes Aircraft, Co., Anik 1 is the world's first domestic synchronous communications satellite. A sister ship, Anik 2, has just been launched April 19.

At Hougen's Department Store in Whitehorse, Anik has set off a small sales boom of such sets, according to store Manager Don Jones.

"People are coming in from all kinds of places out in the country," he said. "They weren't much interested in buying new sets when we had the frontier package taped material. Now all that is changed."

Nellie Cournoyea, Canadian Broadcasting Corp. northern service station manager at Inuvik, reported the Hudson Bay store there sold 17 color sets in two days.

But one elderly viewer was not impressed with the color reception she received on her set and called to complain about the quality. It turned out she owned a black-and-white set.

There are complaints, too. Not about the quality of reception, but in programming.

"We don't get the late movies from Anik yet," said St. Julien. "At the last count we had more than 100 complaints about the matter. People don't think that it is fair that we should get everything except the late movies. But I'm told that is going to change soon."

And Yukon residents aren't particularly pleased about the number of commercials.

"That's new to almost everybody," said St. Julien. "The frontier package never had any ads — now we are seeing things advertised that we can't even buy up here."

IN THE YUKON

Sesame Street, Cannon Hits, But Commercials Are Not

WHITEHORSE, Canada (UPI) — Up here in the Yukon, the biggest show in town these days is live television which has finally come to Whitehorse and a dozen other towns in the far north, thanks to Anik 1, Canada's first communications satellite.

Designed and developed by Hughes Aircraft, Co., Anik 1 is the world's first domestic synchronous communications satellite. A sister ship, Anik 2, has just been launched April 19.

Whitehorse began receiving Anik's signals early in February and one measure of its success are sales of color television sets.

At Hougen's Department Store in Whitehorse, Anik has set off a small sales boom of such sets, according to store Manager Don Jones.

"People are coming in from all kinds of places out in the country," he said. "They weren't much interested in buying new sets when we had the frontier package taped material. Now all that is changed."

Nellie Cournoyea, Canadian Broadcasting Corp. northern service station manager at Inuvik, reported the Hudson Bay store there sold 17 color sets in two days.

But one elderly viewer was not impressed with the color reception she received on her set and called to complain about the quality. It turned out she owned a black-and-white set.

What are some of the favorite programs being seen for the first time in the Far North?

There are complaints, too. Not about the quality of reception, but in programming.

"We don't get the late movies from Anik yet," said St. Julien. "At the last count we had more than 100 complaints about the matter. People don't think that it is fair that we should get everything except the late movies. But I'm told that is going to change soon."

And Yukon residents aren't particularly pleased about the number of commercials.

"That's new to almost everybody," said St. Julien. "The frontier package never had any ads — now we are seeing things advertised that we can't even buy up here."

It makes a lovely wedding gift.

Volkswagen has come up with a way for you to get a Volkswagen — or at least a part of one — as a wedding gift.

Just go to your participating VW dealer and register for a Volkswagen — the same way you'd register at a department store for china or silver.

Then your friends and relatives can buy a fender or steering wheel or windshield wiper or whatever part of the car suits their budget. (And they don't have to bother about gift wrapping what they buy. We'll present it to you right on the car.)

Depending on the size and generosity of your guest list, you could end up with a nice down payment on — or all of — a Volkswagen.

Which is a lot more practical than nine silver trays, six toasters, four blenders and seven whatchamacallits.

See your VW dealer now for all the details.

With a little luck you could drive off on your honeymoon in your very own Volkswagen. And that's a smart way to travel down the road of life.

More Selections From The Musical Heritage Society Catalog: Vivaldi, Haydn, Others

By JOHN SUNIER

If flute is your bag, try the three Flute Concertos by Francois Devienne, as played by the great Jean-Pierre Rampal, whose unparalleled talents are displayed on many different Musical Heritage Society discs.

Music for three, four and five flutes is heard on another LP featuring music of Kuhlau, Boismortier and Reicha. The Marie-Clare Jamet Quintet plays modern French music with flute and other instruments, and don't be surprised if the MHS recording of Khachaturian's "Concerto for Flute and Orchestra" sounds familiar — it's really his Violin Concerto!

IF YOU'RE INTO Requiems, you'll want to sample the one by Jean Gilles, born in 1696 and a composer of very exciting music.

Then there is the slightly later Requiem by the Polish composer Zwierzchowski, if you can believe that. This is a really glorious work, even if the conductor is named Zbigniew Chwedczuk and the orchestra The Pomeranian Philharmonic.

Vivaldi nuts will enjoy the complete Opus 9 of that composer, his "La Cetra" as conducted by Enis Stevens on the Orpheus label, which is part of Musical Heritage. One of the finest Vivaldi collections ever is good old MHS 788 with the Austrian Tonkunstler Orchestra in a group of four concerti, including the striking one for guitar and strings in D Major which is second only to the lovely "Concierto Aranjuez" in music for the guitar and orchestra (also available on MHS).

Speaking of strings, all three Tchaikovsky String Quartets are played by the New Vienna Quartet in another two-disc MHS album.

ENGLISH COMPOSERS have recently received much attention from Musical Heritage. John Ireland works are conducted by Sir Adrian Boult on one album, Bax's "Symphony No. 6" is heard in its only recording, and music of Gustav Holst is on several LPs. Most of these come from a British record label, Lyrita. There are even releases from the New Zealand record label, Kiwi. French composers are also well represented.

The "Second Cello Concerto" of Andre Jolivet is one MHS listing of note, and several works by Albert Roussel are also found, including the very fresh-sounding "Pour une Fete de Printemps." Contemporary composer Marius Constant is represented by a very contemporary ballet titled "In Praise of Folly" which he conducts himself. Movements of this witty work include "Advertising," "Sleeping Pills," "Pep Pills," and "Countdown."

One of the finest Handel collections available anywhere employs Lily Laskine, harp, Jean-Pierre Rampal, flute and other soloists conducted by Jean-Francois Paillard in Handel's "Harp Concerto in B Flat Major," his "Flute Concerto in F Major" and three Concerti Grossi.

Two of my most-liked Haydn MHS recordings are four of the Piano Sonatas played on an antique hammerlavier by Luciano Sgrizzi, and the only orchestral version of Haydn's "Seven Last Words," with the Catalonia Chamber Orchestra.

MHS IS ALSO releasing some of their albums on Dolbyized Stereo Cassette tapes. The price is about double that of the LPs, but the sound should be excellent with the noise reduction system.

Many of the MHS recordings can be heard during the morning concerts of KDFC or KIBE, the classical station which specializes in the Baroque during those hours. Berkeley's KPFA also programs many MHS albums on its occasional classical concerts.

MUSICAL HERITAGE has two different arrangements if you should decide to subscribe to its catalog. One is the usual record club arrangement where they have two releases they select each month and if you don't do anything they will be automatically sent to you and you will be billed.

The other system is an account in which they send you monthly sheets on the several new releases they have issued, but if you don't order any of them, nothing will be automatically sent to you. Of course, you can just not join and order whatever record you wish out of the catalog whenever you wish, but you won't find out about new releases, which come out constantly.

To receive the free MHS catalog — indispensable right next to the Schwann catalog on the shelf of any record collector — write to Musical Heritage Society Inc. at 1991 Broadway, New York, 10023. Sometime later we'll delve into a few more MHS albums of general interest.
